CAPTAIN SAZARAC

By Charles Tenney Jackson

Copyright by The Bobbs-Merrill Company

"WELCOME, CAPTAIN!"

SYNOPSIS.—Under the name of "Captain Sazarac," and disguised, Jean Lafitte, former freebooter of Barataria, proscribed, returns to the city of New Orleans. He is recognized by two of his old companions, Alderman Dominique and Beluche. At the gaming tables Sazarac has won much money from Colonel Carr, British officer. John Jarvis, the city's first bohemian of the arts and letters, an oldtime friend of Lafitte, tells of a woman's face and smile. As his last wager, Carr puts up a woman, presumably a slave. Custom compels Sazarac to accept the stake. He wins. His old associates and Count Raoul de Almonaster accost him as Lafitte. A project of the youthful adventurers of New Orleans is the rescue of Napoleon Bonaparte from St. Helena, and a ship, the Seraphine, has been made ready. From De Almonaster Sazarac learns that the girl he "won" at the card table is white, of high estate, and that the matter has been made a byword in the city's resorts. Sazarac finds Mademoiselle Lestron, a fellow passenger on a river steamer a few days before, and with whom he had fallen in love, is the girl and in chivalry foregoes his revenge against Carr. Jarvis admires Mademoiselle Lestron. He is a witness of the meeting and picks up a camellia which the girl had thrown, unnoticed, to Sazarac. Jarvis is dangerous; he talks too much in his cups. His old associates of the Barataria days urge Lafitte to take command of the Seraphine, ostensibly to rescue Napoleon but really to fly the black flag and cruise the seas. He hesitates. Jarvis is a witness of the kidnaping of Mademoiselle Lestron, but his story is not given credence. De Almonaster entertains Sazarac, now admittedly Jean Lafitte, at his country house. Lafitte, accused of the abduction of Mademoiselle Lestron, is warned of the approach of a military party seeking to arrest him. He escapes to the swamps of Barataria.

The old dogs laughed the harder. Rough shaggy fellows in shirts of faded green and blue, barefooted for the most, filthy muskrat traps dangling at their belts where once they had worn cutlass and pistol before the President's pardon.

"Nothing of sedition," answered Bohon. "Few of us dare go to the city even now. There is always a peg on which to hang one of Lafitte's men. Let a sheep be stolen up in the north parishes, and at once the Baratarians are charged with it!"

"Come," said the chief. "The older of you with Bohon on his lugger. The others to their camps. Not a man of you shall lift hand against the law for me. If you can serve me further you shall be summoned. Come—Rigo! Black Mike—Nez Coupe. We shall talk to the deserters first."

They made way for him to the beach. Old Rigo was laughing softly:

"Old days are come! Jean—and at once, a fair enterprise! A woman—and a ship! And down at the old isle where Yankees burned our fort, I have pumpkins growing—beautiful yellow pumpkins! Eh, bien! Perhaps we shall see another color o' gold among my pumpkins, wi' Jean among us once more!"

Six men to a side, the lugger crept down the mirrored bayou to where it opened to a shallow lake red in the warm sunset. Back on the Temple, the whispering swampers scattered to their pirogues. Fast and wide the word would go through watery forest aisles and into the grass jungles of Barataria. Never a customs boat could leave the city but that keen eyes noted, and paddling couriers spread the warning far to the most secluded cheniere of the deep swamp.

"Look you," growled the steersman, Bohon, to Joe Rigo, "the old fellows gathering like buzzards, furbishing up rusty dirks and smelling venture on the very wind that brought Jean to us. Name o' G—d!—I am young again!"

Bohon glanced at the first stars. Eastward a dim smudge showed on the grassy bayou margin. "John Kelly will be there—and Mariano, the Manilaman. And others, Captain. There will be drinking, for three casks of wine went from the Algiers dock along with the arms. And the English lads, Captain—you will not have them delivered to the consul?"

"Did you ever know," laughed Jean, "of me kicking back any man to the press gangs—white, yellow, brown or black—who ever reached the swamp?"

"Do you remember when our men went recruiting to the Acadian dances and shook their gold before the country youth—a speech, a song, a revel—that would carry every restless spirit of the parishes back to our fort to serve you, Jean?"

There was a shout in the starlight. To the lugger's side swept a half-dozen canoes. Old whiskered fellows would noa be denied—theye clambered over the gunwales, and stood roaring their welcome to the one-time dictator of the Barataria coast. A torch gleamed among the palmettos as Bohon's men slid the anchor to the mud. Then they crowded aboard to shout, to shake his hand, amazed that he lived, eager to hear of the lost leader.

But Bohon led the way ashore. The one-time privateers trooped behind the guides to another palm-thatched camp under which were stored the stolen wine casks, the boxes of ammunition and scattered muskets. The English deserters, red-eyed, reeling from drink, looked upon the party with suspicious eyes, although the swamp men had heralded Lafitte's coming.

"Welcome, Captain!" shouted old Budge, the dock watchman. "I came with these lads. It must have been in the very air that you had returned, for—of a sudden—I had the notion of plunder! Look you—two more lusty seamen from the Genaron are here!"

"The mate laid twenty lashes to our backs because we could not explain Burke's get-away," said one. "We slid down the chains, sir, and are done with the king's shilling!"

"Lafitte!" cried another, "I sailed in a bark that took a round shot from you once off Trinidad! Come, my hand to it that I serve you now!"

The laughter and the drinking arose once more. Clearly the exile perceived that the swamp outlaws had no other thought than that he had come to revive again the marauding against the West India merchantmen.

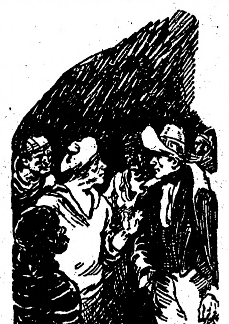
He led aside the eldest of the deserting seamen. "Come, of the Genaron? What is her mission in the gulf?"

"I wish I could answer, sir! She sailed regularly, but she is stuffed with arms. Vera Cruz was to be her entry port, yet why carry arms to the king o' Spain's men? We were warned to say nothing of her cargo. When the Yankee customs discovered them, I hear the British consul was embarrassed. Colonel Carr had hand in it, the fo'cas'le said."

"Carr?" spoke up a youthful deserter eagerly. "Why, that is the blustering officer who wrangled with the skipper when they bundled the woman aboard!"

"The woman!" demanded Lafitte. "What of this—quick!"

"But the other night. The watch was hustled below when they brought her. Then it was up-sail and away without waiting to settle this quarrel about the muskets which a drunken supercargo put off and into the customs' hands by a mistake."



"Why, That Is the Blustering Officer Who Wrangled With the Skipper When They Bundled the Woman Aboard."

"Sailed!" The chief laid hands upon his shoulder. "Lads, is it true?"

"Some dirty affair, sir. Burke and Crackley and myself saw it. Slave, free woman of color, to be sold in the Indies, or whatever she was—we cannot say. They took her to the master's cabin. There was no law to it, I warrant, but when we lads saw that the Genaron was to put out hastily we took our leave o' her!"

Lafitte swept about upon Bohon. "Mademoiselle Lestron on the Genaron, and the bark adrift to the passes! What can she make, sir, with this wind?"

"Steerage, nothing more. She will not have passed English Turn—"

"Forty men by daylight at the river side! She shall be boarded in midstream, Bohon. Johanness—back to the Temple and summon every lad!"

There was a gasp of incredulity. The leader had turned back to the smuggler's landing. The older privateersmen followed. The deserters stumbled among their wine casks. Then the leader of them, John Crackley, a long, thin-faced villain of the crimp-gangs, roared to the others.

"I told you, bullies, if ever we found this Lafitte there would be rough work to do! The Genaron—burn her to the water's edge, say I—and a knife to the mate for the cat he laid on our backs!"

The messengers paddled off in the starlight while about Jean gathered his old friends. And presently, across the shallows, came another small boat, swept by four black oarsmen to the smuggler's stern. A cloaked figure stepped out and grasped Lafitte's hand.

"Monsieur de Almonaster!"

"The mask is useless, sir! I came to warn you. The dragoons seized my house-servants, and bullied them into confession. Sazarac! The city ... ats with it! Jean Lafitte has stolen the English colonel's ward!"

"Sir, you know better. I, indeed, know where she is. Mademoiselle Lestron has been put to sea. I take it, to hush her mouth. She would have spoken something dangerous to Carr's purposes. What these are, in all, we cannot say. But the lady of the river packet is a prisoner on the Genaron."

The count stared at him bewilderedly. "None in the city knows! Carr roars his indignation—he leads the cry that Jean Lafitte put his old Barataria refugees to the abduction. Half a dozen expeditions are fitting out to search the swamps. Captain, you cannot linger here!"

"The Genaron—" said Lafitte curtly. "If she does not fetch a sailing wind before she makes the outer passes, sixty of the Baratarians will swarm her chains for boarding before daylight. Will that be answer enough to the city, that Lafitte is here again?—the old fox in his hiding place?"

"A mad scheme!" muttered Raoul. "But—ah, well! For a woman! I trust, sir, you see it is an act of piracy against the vessel of a friendly power in American waters?"

The exile laughed grimly. "The dice are against Lafitte, the honest man!"

"Sir, does she know your identity?" pursued De Almonaster gravely.

"Can you ask? Lafitte—for whom her countrymen have a gallows built in every port that flies the king's flag? Come, sir! This is man's business! Every hour counts—every moment. She will know, soon enough, when a proscribed outlaw frees her . . . and turns away to face his ring of enemies."

And suddenly old Bohon dashed to his feet and held a finger to the air. He touched the skin with his lips and held it again.

"D—n!" he shouted. "The air is changing. It is swinging northerly! A breeze in the river, and she will make the passes before a man of us could lift hand against her!"

It was true. Five minutes later the lugger lurched slowly around in the tide. The big sail began to lift and stream in the starlight. Johanness came aft cursing the stir of the water.

"I tell you it cannot be done. If we had a thousand armed fellows in the narrows what could they do with cockleshell dugouts to board a ship drawing sail?"

They listened to the lapping water on the lugger's side. And now, from the oak-grown islet, there came a stumble of feet, a clatter of arms, and then a splashing in the starlit shallows.

"Aye, bullies!" roared John Crackley. "I said if ever we met this Lafitte there would be proper work for you!"

The deserters and the younger swamp islanders were swarming out, drunken and with ribald cheers, under their smoky torches. "A-Barataria!" one of the pardoned outlaws cried. It was the old boarding sea-yell of the Black Petral's crew, and it struck with a curious cold prophecy to the heart of Lafitte. Fate was bearing him, do what he might, back to the lawless years of the youth he had put by.

"The devil's hand is in this," grumbled Johanness. "This wind—it will be a good ship's wind in the passes. The Genaron will be in blue water tomorrow noon!"

"It is fatal to our plan of boarding her in the river," mused Lafitte. "And the plan must change with the wind. If we had a weather boat off the old isle—"

"A boat!" growled Nez Coupe. "But in all these coves, where once we counted forty sail and two hundred guns, there is nothing worth a nutshell on blue water. Bah! We took the President's pardon!"

"A ship!" snarled Black Mike. "Seize a ship! Damnation!—how does a man find a ship? Why, name o' G—d—he takes her!"

And suddenly De Almonaster whirled on the silent leader with glowing eyes. "A ship? Why, there in the city—moored at the Place d'Armes!"

"The Napoleon ship!" shouted Johanness. "Why, curse my eyes, that is a ship, but death to the perfumed gentry that own her!"

"The Seraphine?" cried Bohon. "Why that beauty would sit ahead o' the English bark and laugh in any weather!"

Lafitte was staring half-amusedly at De Almonaster. "Monsieur, the Seraphine lies in the very heart of the city, under the guns of every fort and warsman there!"

"Well, then—threescore of your swamp fellows gathered secretly by the Algiers shore, and crossing the river at midnight could board and have her under way ere the port awoke. Once off the passes, she could overhaul the bark. She is gunned for the best of them, but there would be no need. The Genaron could not fight—she would give back the lady . . . of course the admiralties at Washington and London would howl, but"—the young man shrugged indifferently—"the affair would be over."

"Over? Monsieur, are you mad?"

"Ah, I had forgotten that I possess a certain interest in the Seraphine! Of course, I really know nothing about such madness! I am amazed—I denounce it much as I denounce this Saz-a-rac who—a dinner guest of mine—is discovered to be Lafitte, the pirate!"

"You peril your life and your future, Monsieur."

News Briefs from All the State

Condensed Stories of Happenings of the Week in Minnesota

Rochester—This city is the home of a number of blood relatives of President Coolidge.

Milan—Seventeen cars, including five oil cars, were demolished when an east bound freight train left the rails west of here.

Winnebago—A new church edifice is to be erected here for the Winnebago Methodist congregation at a cost of $50,000.

Owatonna—Burglars entered the offices of the Central Co-operative Oil association here, blew the safe and obtained cash totalling about $100.

Fairmont—Magnus Johnson, newly elected United States senator, has accepted an invitation to attend the Martin county fair and deliver an address. The fair dates are Sept. 26, 27, 28 and 29.

Fairmont—Contracts have been let for the improvement of the lake channels between Lakes Sisseton and Budd and Budd and Hall. The channels will be deepened and walled with cement, so there will be no more filling up.

St. James — Announcement was made here by Congressman Frank Clague of the appointment of Clayton Larson, a World war veteran, to be postmaster here, succeeding P. H. Grogan.

Waterville—County Agent Taylor of Le Sueur county has resigned to accept a position as head of an agricultural survey of the iron range by a group of mining companies. He will be succeeded here by A. Biebelhausen of Shawano, Wis.

Winona—Miss Sarah S. Lowry of Grinnell, Iowa, has assumed her duties as secretary of the Winona county Child Welfare association. Her appointment by District Judge C. E. Callaghan as county probation officer is expected in a few days.

Austin—Threshing of oats and barley has been finished at the Evergreen farm near here, the yield being one of the heaviest in years. One field of 11 acres of oats threshed out 83 bushels to the acre, the largest yield reported this season in this section.

Mankato—Charles K. Mayer, who has been acting president of the Civic and Commerce association for two months, was regularly elected to the position at the annual meeting. Other officers chosen are: Charles T. Taylor, and George Atchison, vice presidents; M. D. Fritz, treasurer.

Crookston—The Norhtwest School of Agriculture here, which is in session during the winter months, continues its usefulness all the year around as the Mecca for those who are interested in all phases of diversified farming, dairying, livestock raising and poultry culture.

Minneapolis — Approximately nine hundred of purebred dairy cattle will be in competition during the 1923 Northwest Dairy exposition, which will be held in conjunction with the Minnesota State Fair September 1 to 8, it was announced by Jule M. Hannaford, Jr., executive chairman.

Hallock—Kittson county, which in 1912 grew only 608 acres of potatoes, this year is growing more than 10,000 acres, one acre for every eight acres of wheat, according to figures given to potato tourists, who are inspecting the fields of several northern Minnesota counties, by W. V. Longley, county agent of Kittson county.

Minneapolis—The first $550,000 to be loaned to farmers of the state under the Minnesota Rural Credits bureau was available Monday morning. The installment will be paid by the Wells-Dickey company and the Minnesota Loan & Trust company of Minneapolis, which contracted for the sale of the bonds.

Hibbing—The Duluth, Messabe and Northern passenger train was derailed near the Standard Oil station in Brooklyn. The engine and two coaches remained on the main track, but the two cars behind the engine, a passenger coach and a baggage car, went off into the side tracks, tearing rails and ties apart, for a distance of several hundred feet.

Albert Lea—The Albert Lea Business Men's league has decided to finance the sending of two carloads of Freeborn county Holstein and Guernsey cattle to the Minnesota State Fair. Dr. H. D. Burns, Cy Ott and Fred Rublee are actively in charge of assembling the specimens to be sent, after they have been shown at the Freeborn county fair.

Grand Rapids—Potatoes, corn and alfalfa were shown to Minnesota's potato tourists from the State Department of Agriculture, the University Department of Agriculture, and elsewhere in various parts of Itasca county. Itasca county this year has 3,000 acres in potatoes, only a slight decrease from last year, and most of the decrease is in the acreage of potatoes for the table.

Rochester—Charles Ihrke, who runs a farm a few miles from here, threshed 923 bushels of barley from an 18 acre field, or at the rate of 51 bushels an acre. August King, living near Ihrke, reports a barley yield of 35 bushels to the acre.

Hastings—Walter Gibbons, 19 years old, of St. Paul, was taken to a local hospital burned about the face and hands as the result of taking the cap off the radiator of his machine. Gibbons attempted to put some cold water in the radiator and the force of the boiling water blew the cap off, scalding him.

Willmar — The Methodist church was dedicated here with appropriate ceremonies, in charge of Bishop Charles B. Mitchell of St. Paul.

Duluth—More than 200 Duluthians attended the international picnic at Grand Marais. Among those attending was Mayor Snively. Three thousand persons attended the festivities.

Canby—John West, aged 82, veteran of the Civil war and pioneer resident of this section, died at his homestead near here, after an illness which lasted for several months.

Winona—Falling over a 25-foot embankment near here in an automobile, three persons escaped serious injury. The automobile turned over three times and landed upright at the bottom of the hill and on the other side of the railroad tracks.

Madison—Early threshing returns in Lac qui Parle county show that oats in some places are making a return of 70 bushels to the acre, while barley is threshing out as high as 40 bushels to the acre. Wheat is also making a good yield, and is reported as better than last year.

Buhl—Work has been started on the farmers' market building and it will be rushed to completion as soon as possible in order to have the structure ready for use by the middle of September. The market will be used for a curling club in winter.

Heron Lake—That the milking of cows pays well is shown by the experience of Ole Lundberg of this county. Though he has only 15 head of dairy stock, Lundberg has been receiving better than an average of $200 a month for several months for his cream.

Jackson—Right Rev. C. J. Eastvold of Northfield, president of the southern Minnesota district of the Norwegian Lutheran Church of America, officiated as the installing clergyman when his son, Rev. C. S. Eastvold, was installed as pastor of Our Savior's Lutheran church here.

Duluth—Minnesota's new $1,000,000 hospital for the insane may be located near Duluth, it was predicted, following an inspection tour by the State Board of Control in the Cloquet, Carlton and Krenshall districts. Appropriations for the hospital have already been made by the legislature.

Chatfield—George H. Haven, president of the First State bank of this city, and a pioneer merchant, was found dead in his bed by his daughter. Physicians ascribed death to apoplexy. Mr. Haven had been president of the bank since 1883. He held several city offices and was on the school board for many years.

Albert Lea—Mrs. Mike Murtaugh, of this city, was killed when the car in which she was driving turned over. Mrs. Murtaugh attempted to pass a car when her machine skidded in the sand and turned over twice. Her skull and chest were crushed. Three other occupants in the car were only slightly bruised.

St. Peter—One of the largest crops in the history of Nicollet county is now being harvested. Winter wheat yield will average 30 bushels to the acre, rye 30 bushels, barley 40 bushels and oats 55 bushels. Several yields of 25 bushels have been reported for marquis wheat. Corn will prove the biggest crop on record unless adverse circumstances occur.

St. Charles—With prospects that the 1923 Winona county fair will be bigger than ever, fair officials are making extensive additions at the fair grounds here. The grandstand is being enlarged by 64 feet, bringing its seating capacity up to 3,000. A judging ward is being built and 150 more hog pens are to be constructed. The fair will be August 28 to 31.

Grand Rapids—Land has been obtained near here by 15 agricultural trainees of the United States Veterans bureau. All except three are in one neighborhood, just south of Pokegama lake. They are forming a farm settlement and are warmly welcomed by townspeople and neighborhood farmers alike. Several of the men are married and will bring their families to the settlement as soon as homes can be prepared for them.

Sleepy Eye—In future all peddlers and solicitors who claim to be former service men will have to stand a test before they will be permitted to operate in Sleepy Eye without a license. The city has been overrun with peddlers in the last few weeks, most of them claiming to be former service men. The American Legion post proposes hereafter to question every peddler or solicitor who comes to the city and attempts to ply his trade without obtaining a license.

Duluth—Coal receipts at the Duluth-Superior harbor in May, June and July showed an increase of 5,651,383 tons compared with last year, according to a report issued by Major E. H. Marks, United States engineer, Duluth. Thirty boats carrying cargoes of hard coal docked in the three months while the boats carrying soft coal totaled 208. Of the coal received at Duluth and Superior docks in the three months' period, hard coal totaled 723,645 tons. This is an increase of 707,133 tons over a similar period last year. Soft coal receipts in 1923 totaled 5,323,948, or an increase over 1922 receipts of 4,944,250 tons.

Fairmont—Magnus Johnson, newly elected United States senator, has accepted an invitation to attend the Martin county fair and deliver an address. The fair dates are Sept. 26, 27, 28 and 29.

WOMEN FROM FORTY TO FIFTY

Will Be Interested in Mrs. Hooker's Recovery by Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

St. Paul, Minn.—"I was going through the Change of Life and suffered from a run-down condition and the troubles a woman has to go through at that time, hot flashes, nervousness and headaches. At times I was not able to do my work, but since taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I am gaining every day and can do my work with more ease than I have for five or six years. I owe it all to your great medicine."—MARTHA HOOKER, 114 College Avenue, St. Paul, Minn.

When women who are between the ages of forty-five and fifty-five are beset with such annoying symptoms as nervousness, irritability, melancholia and heat flashes, which produce headaches, dizziness, or a sense of suffocation, they should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It is especially adapted to help women through this crisis. It is prepared from roots and herbs and contains no harmful drugs or narcotics.

DOUBTED VALUE OF CABLE

World Was Skeptical When Idea of Communication Across Ocean Was First Broached.

The first proposal to lay a cable from Dover to Calais was denounced as a "mad freak," a "gigantic swindle." So little was known about it that when a fisherman hauled up the line with his trawl he thought it a new species of seaweed. Some thought the signals were to be given by pulling on the wire like a doorbell, so they argued the ocean bed was too rough and uneven for that. While some objected that it would kill all the fish, others believed that fish would gnaw off the insulating gutta percha covering and put the line out of business. Lieutenant Maury, a marine, not a cable expert, ventured to express the opinion that there never would be a time calm enough, the sea smooth enough and wire long enough or a ship big enough to lay an Atlantic cable. When, after a few weeks of operation, the first Atlantic cable gave out, some declared that it never had worked and no messages ever had been sent, and some doubted if it ever had been laid.

Cynics are folks whose opinions have been snubbed.

Linoleum Truly Cosmopolitan.

Six countries, thousands of miles distant, aid in providing materials for the finished linoleum, says the Detroit News. The manufacture of linoleum depends on three main materials—cork, linseed oil and burlap. Cork, the chief ingredient, comes from Spain, Portugal and northern Africa, where thousands of people are engaged in harvesting it from the trees. The linseed oil is pressed from the flaxseed from the Argentine republic, which produces the greatest amount of flaxseed in the world. Burlap is made from jute grown in India, but woven in Scotland.

A Bank in Peril.

Every business develops its own peculiar kind of humorous anecdotes.

In one of the banks the other day a girl clerk in the accounting department called a customer and said:

"I just wanted to inform you that your account is overdrawn eight cents."

There was a long pause, and then an excited feminine voice inquired:

"Gosh! Do you have to have it this morning?"—Youngstown Telegram.

There's a Difference.

Most people like candor applied to everybody and everything except themselves and their affairs.

Ever stop to think of this?

We are what we eat!

It's a startling fact, yet a simple truth.

This is the reason every one should know that his food is really nourishing—not merely filling.

Grape-Nuts—made from wheat and barley—is one of the few cereal foods that includes the vital mineral salts so necessary for supplying proper nourishment for nerve and bone structure.

In Grape-Nuts, too, is retained the important vitamin-B of the wheat.

No food has greater influence in strengthening the body of a growing child than Grape-Nuts. And remember, children need the very best there is in the way of nourishment.

Grape-Nuts is just as delicious as it is healthful, whether served right from the package as a breakfast cereal with milk or cream, with fresh or stewed fruit, or made into an appetizing recipe. Try the suggestion given below.

GRAPE-NUTS ICE CREAM

Prepare plain flavored ice cream in the usual way. Just before the cream hardens in freezing, add Grape-Nuts as it comes from the package, in the proportion of one-half cup of Grape-Nuts to one quart of ice cream. If you buy ice cream ready-made add Grape-Nuts in place of nut meats. You'll find the resulting flavor unique.

Where you don't find Grape-Nuts, you won't find people—

HARDING'S BODY IS LAID IN TOMB

Nation in Mourning as the Simple Funeral Services for the Dead President Are Held in Marion—Imposing Official Cortege and Ceremony in Washington.

Marion, O.—All that was mortal of Warren G. Harding, twenty-ninth President of the United States, was placed in the tomb Friday, August 10, in the Marion cemetery.

No imposing ceremony, no military display, no marching of organizations marked the mournful event, because Mrs. Harding wished it so, but as the simple services were being held in the cemetery, in every city, every town and village, every home of the broad land the people of America were paying tribute to the memory of their chief whose life truly was sacrificed in their behalf. Barter and trade, financial business and every other worldly activity that could be suspended ceased for the time, all sports and pastimes were abandoned—the nation mourned.

Great Throngs in Marion.

Here in Marion were gathered a host of prominent persons, from President Coolidge down and including the leading government officials, senators and representatives, governors of the states and delegations from hundreds of cities and organizations. All day Thursday and on Friday morning special trains brought in the throngs, and other thousands of Ohioans came by automobile. So great were the crowds that it was necessary for the state officials to arrange to have the roads for miles around Marion patrolled to prevent accidents.

Thursday morning the funeral train arrived from Washington, and Mr. Harding's body was taken at once to the residence of his father, Dr. George T. Harding. From 2 until 10 p. m. that day and from 9 a. m. until 1 p. m. Friday opportunity was given Ohioans to view the face of their dead friend. Then, quite without pomp, the casket was borne to the cemetery. Following the hearse were the members of the Harding family; next the President of the United States with members of the cabinet and other high officials; then came Mr. Harding's close friends and neighbors, and after them a great concourse of mourners.

Simple Services in Cemetery.

It was Mrs. Harding's wish that all who wished should have a place in the funeral procession. Among those who sadly accepted the invitation were all the employees of the Marion Star who had worked for Mr. Harding for years, and the Ohio newspaper publishers, members of the Associated Ohio Dailies, in which organization Mr. Harding had taken an active part.

Reaching the cemetery about three o'clock, the cortege proceeded to the receiving vault, and there the brief services were held. Prayers, readings from the Scriptures and the singing of Mr. Harding's favorite hymns—that was all. It was simple and dignified, as was befitting the obsequies of a distinguished citizen of Marion. The services were in charge of Rev. George M. Landis, pastor of Trinity Baptist church, of which Mr. Harding was a member. He was assisted by Rev. Jesse Swank, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, Mrs. Harding's pastor.

Troops Guard the Casket.

Instead of being interred in the family plot, the body of Mr. Harding was placed in the receiving vault, and there it will remain until a mausoleum has been erected to receive it. As the weeping family and friends moved away from the vault, National Guard soldiers stepped forward and took their place on guard. In a few days they will be replaced by the guard from the regular army, that will stand around the vault for the regulation period of six months. The detail for this purpose will consist of an officer and twenty-five men from Fort Hayes at Columbus.

The Presidential party from Washington, which came on a special train Friday morning, started back for the national capital almost immediately after the conclusion of the ceremonies.

Mrs. Harding, who had borne so well her difficult part, also returned to Washington, on the same train that brought her and her dead. It was announced that she would remain in the White House until she has finished the supervision and removal of the effects of the late President. This probably will take about three weeks.

Services at Capital.

Washington, — The United States government Wednesday paid official tribute to the body of Warren G. Harding, twenty-ninth president. It was a tribute at once simple, dignified and impressive. The ceremonies were preliminary to the journey to Marion, Ohio, and the final interment Friday in the late president's home city.

The ceremonies consisted in official transfer in the morning of the body from the White House to the Capitol, where it lay in state until six o'clock in the evening. The American people participated by marching in the funeral procession and by passing by the bier in the rotunda of the Capitol and by lining the funeral route in vast, reverent crowds. Ten thousand school children carpeted with flowers historic Pennsylvania avenue.

The body left the White House, where it had lain during the night, at 10 a. m. Gen. John J. Pershing, general of the United States army and commander of the military escort, led the procession to the Capitol.

Guard of Honor.

Six generals of the army and six admirals of the navy acted as an immediate guard of honor to the caisson bearing the remains of the late President.

Seven senators, including President pro tem. Cummins, and seven representatives, including Speaker Gillette of the house, acted with members of the Harding cabinet as honorary pallbearers.

Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, marshal of the civic procession, the clergymen in charge of the services, and the physicians who attended President Harding at his last illness were assigned to places immediately in advance of the caisson.

Chief Justice Taft participated as a former president instead of as head of the Supreme court. Ex-President and Mrs. Wilson were placed behind him.

Behind Mr. Wilson in the procession were placed, successively, ambassadors of foreign governments, associate justices of the Supreme court, foreign ministers and charge d'affaires, senators and officers of the senate, representatives and officers of the house, governors of states and territories and commissioners of the District of Columbia and acting secretaries of the various departments of the federal government.

The following also were included in the official section of the procession:

Circuit Court of Appeals, Court of Claims, Court of Customs Appeals, Court of Appeals and Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, undersecretaries and assistant secretaries of federal departments, assistant postmasters general and assistant attorneys general, United States marshal and United States attorney.

The chairman or senior member of the following groups:

Federal Reserve board, Interstate Commerce commission, Civil Service commission, various mixed commissions dealing with international problems and other agencies of the federal government.

Next in line came patriotic and civic organizations, headed by men who have won the Congressional Medal of Honor for heroic deeds in the service of their country by land or sea. They were followed by army officers, led by Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt.

Next came officers of the coast guard and public health service, headed by the assistant secretary of the treasury and officers of the coast and geodetic survey, under command of the assistant secretary of commerce.

The services in the rotunda of the Capitol were as follows:

Invocation, Dr. A. Freeman, assistant pastor of the Calvary Baptist church, of which Mr. Harding was a member.

Hymn, "Lead, Kindly Light," male quartet of Calvary Baptist church.

Scripture: Twenty-third Psalm. Micah, sixth chapter, eighth verse. Revelation, twenty-second chapter, first to fifth verses.

Quotations.

Prayer, Dr. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the house of representatives.

Hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," male quartet.

Benediction, Dr. Anderson.

The body then lay in state and from four to six the general public was admitted.

At 6 p. m. the casket was taken back to the car in which it had been brought across the continent. Then began the journey to Marion—back to the home town.

The special train bearing the President's body arrived in Washington at 10:25 p. m. Tuesday after a transcontinental journey of 96 hours and 10 minutes. It was 9 hours late—the great crowds in the big cities had almost blocked its way. President Coolidge, cabinet members, members of congress and civilian and military dignitaries were at the depot. The Marine band played "Nearer My God, to Thee."

Mrs. Harding walked to her car on the arm of Secretary Christian.

The casket, escorted by its guard of honor, was taken on a caisson to the White House, where it arrived at 11:30. It was placed in the East room.

At midnight the White House doors were closed, leaving Mrs. Harding with her dead.

AT REST IN BEAUTIFUL SPOT

President Harding's Grave, in the Family Plot, in Quiet Little Cemetery at Marion.

Marion, O., Aug. The spot in Marion cemetery where all that is mortal of Warren G. Harding will rest, is one of the most beautiful in the vicinity of the quiet town to which he ofttimes said he hoped to return "as an ordinary citizen," after his public services.

Situated at almost the center of the old burial ground, the Harding family plot, where a President of the United States will resume his place among the kindly folk he knew and loved as neighbors, lies cupped in a tiny valley. Two giant elms cast deep shadows over slabs of granite which mark the resting place of the President's mother and of his sister, and only a few steps away a gleaming gravel roadway winds through a perfect archway of foliage fashioned by the interlocking branches of elms.

How Old Is That Egg?

Eggs decrease in density as they grow older. Their age may be ascertained by their specific gravity.

Melt two ounces of kitchen salt in a pint of water and place the raw eggs in it. When first laid they will descend to the bottom, when one day old they will almost touch it; when three days old they will swim, and when older will float on the top. The more they project above the water the older they are. A preserved egg will float lower than one untreated, as it is coated so as to make it airtight, thus preventing change of the contents. Its cracking in hot water is not due to badness, but to the same cause—the shell being airtight prevents the escape of gases as they expand with the heat.—New York World.

There to Stay.

Two aunts had come to visit at Esther's home at different times this summer, and each brought a small baby. Esther's surprise and chagrin was great when they left, taking their babies away again.

Then one day a new baby sister came to Esther's house.

When they told her the news she hurried over to our house and announced: "We've got a real stay baby now, 'cause this one was borned to us."

St. Louis smoker moves into second place

With 405 cans to his credit Mr. Thurston smokes his way towards the lead

Mr. Byron Thurston of St. Louis is more than qualified for membership in the Edgeworth Club. But his position in the championship-smoker class is not so well established. Mr. Thurston's interesting letter follows:

Hotel Garni, St. Louis, Mo.

Larus & Brother Company,
Richmond, Va.
Gentlemen:

I have often heard of great smokers of one kind of tobacco.

I have smoked 405 cans of Edgeworth Plug Slice 35c size without changing.

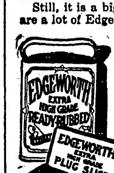
Now if you know of any better record I would be glad to hear from you. I smoke one can of tobacco in two days and enjoy every pipeful.

Yours truly,
(Signed) Byron Thurston.

More than a year ago an Edgeworth smoker from Burlington, Vermont, Mr. H. F. Baldwin, wrote in suggesting that he had smoked more Edgeworth than any other living man. At that time he had smoked over 1000 cans of the same size purchased by Mr. Thurston, distributed over a period of nearly a score of years.

So while it appears today that Mr. Thurston is well behind the leader, if he continues smoking a can every two days, it may be only a matter of years before he will be well in advance of the entire field.

Still, it is a big country and there are a lot of Edgeworth smokers. You can never tell when a new record will be hung up to be the envy of all smokers.



EDGEWORTH EXTRA HIGH GRADE READY-RUBBED
EDGEWORTH EXTRA HIGH GRADE PLUG SLICE

Edgeworth has something about it that holds smokers. Not that everyone likes Edgeworth; but those who do generally remain steadfast in their loyalty to the tobacco year after year.

If you have never tried Edgeworth, Larus & Brother Company will be glad to send you free samples of both Edgeworth Plug Slice and Ready-Rubbed.

Then you can smoke a few pipefuls and judge for yourself whether or not the tobacco is as good as a great many veteran pipe smokers claim it is.

Just drop a postcard to Larus & Brother Company, 73 South 21st Street, Richmond, Va., and the free samples will be forwarded to you promptly.

If you will also include the name and address of your regular tobacco dealer, your courtesy will be appreciated.

Edgeworth is sold in various sizes to suit the needs and means of all purchasers. Both Edgeworth Plug Slice and Ready-Rubbed come in small, pocket-size packages, in attractive tin humidors and in handy in-between sizes.

To Retail Tobacco Merchants: If your jobber cannot supply you with Edgeworth, Larus & Brother Company will gladly send you prepaid by parcel post a one- or two-dozen carton of any size of Plug Slice or Ready-Rubbed for the same price you would pay the jobber.

Operating and Equipment Cost Advances

All the work that you do, all the work that everybody does, consists in moving from point to point yourself and in moving objects from one point to another. This is all that a railroad does. You know that it costs you something to do your own work. Do not forget that it costs the railroads immeasurably more to do its work, which is also your work, and without which the greater part of your labor and expense would be lost.

In traveling on a completely equipped train with dining, parlor and sleeping car service, the facilities are the same as in high class hotels. The cost to the traveler is immensely less.

Every item in the provision for both passenger and freight service costs more than it did. You travel over a mile of railroad track in a minute or two. This mile of track, exclusive of the grade and right of way, which cost $15,000 in 1913 now costs $25,000.

Here is a comparative list of the cost of Great Northern equipment ten years ago with the cost of similar equipment now:

	Cost in 1913	Cost in 1923
Mountain Type Enignes	$24,000	$54,000
Sleeping Cars	16,000	36,000
Dining Cars	14,000	31,500
Day Coaches	9,000	20,250
Refrigerator Cars	1,200	2,700
Ore Cars	800	1,800
Box Cars	800	1,800
Flat Cars	650	1,462

Taxes have increased in these same ten years over 100 per cent. This makes a formidable addition to the operating expense of every railroad. But at the same time railroad freight and passenger rates have increased only about 40 per cent.

For everything we have, food, shelter, clothing, and transportation, we must pay. Transportation has made this country what it is, and if it is impaired the whole country suffers disaster. It is worth thinking about as a matter of self interest as well as a matter of justice that the service is being rendered, under cost conditions most unfavorable to the carrier and growing yearly more difficult, at a price to the public so little over that of ten years ago.

Take these facts into consideration whenever you think or talk about railroad rates.

LOUIS W. HILL,
Talk No. 6 Chairman of the Board

Holt Man Hurt at Argyle

Oscar Carlson had his leg broken last week Wednesday afternoon. He was running a binder and had stepped off to do some work about the machine when the man running the tractor, backed onto him causing the accident. He was immediately taken to the Warren hospital for treatment. His mother, Mrs. Frank Carlson and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Surmo went over to Warren the next day to see him. They report that the doctors said it was a very bad break, but the young man was getting along as well as could be expected.

The unfortunate young man had left home only the previous day to look for work, which he had found on the Ed. Melo farm west of Argyle, where the accident occurred.

MOST IMPORTANT NEWS OF WORLD

Big Happenings of the Week Condensed for the Benefit of Busy Readers

Washington

Washington—Mexican situation to come before cabinet.

Washington—Mrs. Harding to leave White House and make home at Friendship, suburban residence of Edward Beale McLean, near Washington.

Washington — Attorney General Daugherty, after conference with president, announces government will not appeal from decision in Southern Pacific-Central Pacific case.

Washington—Secretary of State C. E. Hughes confers with General Enoch Crowder and asks Cuban congress to defer action on legislation deemed injurious to American interests.

Washington—The Veterans' bureau has notified the director of the budget that during the 12 month period beginning next July 1, it will be able to carry on its various activities with an expenditure of $25,500,000 less than the $467,000,000 appropriation available for the current fiscal year.

Washington—The federal government moved to avert an anthracite strike by inviting representatives of both the operators and miners to confer with the coal commission here immediately. A telegram conveying the invitation to both sides went forward. It was signed by coal commission officials after they had conferred with President Coolidge.

Washington—Negotiations between the United States and Mexico, looking to the recognition of the Obregon government, are approaching an end, but none of the results attained will be announced until John Barton Payne and Charles B. Warren, the American commissioners, return to Washington from Mexico City, it was announced at the state department.

Washington—Requirements of the presidency at the present juncture are so great that President Coolidge does not expect to leave Washington this summer or resume the vacation interrupted by the death of President Harding. He recognizes, it was said, that there are many details of the office with which he is unfamiliar. The quickest way to become acquainted with them, he feels, is by staying here.

Washington—The blooded riding horses presented to President Harding by Harvey S. Firestone soon will be returned to Mr. Firestone's stables in Ohio. One, Harbel, was Mr. Harding's mount for several weeks two years ago when on advice of his physician he took up horseback riding. He soon gave up riding in favor of golf, but later he entered Harbell in several horse shows and won prizes.

Domestic

Everett, Wash.—The state convention of Elks adopted a resolution to place the name of Warren G. Harding upon the roll of every lodge in Washington state.

Scott City, Kan.—Thirty-five persons were injured, three severely, and thousands of dollars damage was done by a tornado that almost wiped out Leoti, a town of 400 inhabitants, 35 miles west of here.

Burlington, Vt.—Park H. Pollard, a first cousin of President Coolidge, who was indorsed by the democratic state committee as the party candidate for senator to succeed the late Senator William P. Dillingham, has been chairman of the state committee since 1914. He is a merchant in Proctorsville.

Topeka, Kan.—The Kansas House refused to take up the bill appropriating $7,000,000 additional bonds to cover the shortage in the bonus fund, pending receipt of more detailed reports from the bonus director and commission as to just what the shortage may be. The Senate passed the bill.

Miami, Fla.—A strange sea monster drifted ashore on Key Biscayne, a few miles southeast of Miami. Weighing about 1,000 pounds and dead less than 24 hours, it presented a sight never before duplicated in these waters, fishermen who saw it said. The monster is about eight feet long, four feet in depth and only one foot across. It has a head, if it can be called that, shaped in a semicircle measuring from back to belly across the face.

Tulsa—Declaring that the military cannot supersede civil authority while conditions are as they now exist, Mayor H. H. Newblock issued a statement here, asserting that the civil authorities of Tulsa will continue to function as though martial law never had been invoked.

Chicago—Two federal narcotic agents were assigned to guard Mrs. Wallace Reid, widow of the late movie star, after she complained to federal authorities that she had been warned twice by telephone messages to her room in a hotel here to stop her campaign against drugs.

Ludingon, Mich.—Forest fires have broken out afresh in this vicinity, and an emergency call for volunteer firefighters, sounded at the city hall, sent 35 men into the forests. Other squads are being organized.

New York—Paintings purporting to be the work of Blakelock, the master, have been faked continuously since the first rise in the value of the famous painter's work. Albert Milch, authority on Blakelocks, declared. He asserted that the work of one unknown faker, supposed to come from Philadelphia, was so good as to be better than the original paintings.

Sports

Minneapolis — Minneapolis, after being fightless since April, is coming back into the fistic limelight either Sept. 21 or 28. William B. Hoke, matchmaker for the local club, announced that he had come to terms with Cowboy Padgett for a match with Billy Wells, British welterweight champion.

Philadelphia—Luis Firpo, the South American giant, knocked out Charles Weinert, veteran Newark, N. J., heavyweight, in the second round of a scheduled eight round bout at the National league baseball park before more than 30,000 fans. Weinert was floored four times before his seconds leaped into the ring and the referee stopped counting. Weinert weighed 188; Firpo, 212. Just before entering the ring Firpo declared that reports that he was anxious to postpone his bout with Jack Dempsey were exaggerated. The Argentinan admitted, however, that he would rather have another year's experience before tackling the champion.

Great Falls, Mont.—The First National bank of Shelby closed on order of the board of directors. Its last statement showed deposits of $377,000. In the month since then it is stated that about $100,000 had been withdrawn and the assets of the bank could not be realized on to furnish further cash. This leaves Shelby without a bank, the First State bank, of which Mayor I. A. Johnson was president, having closed shortly after the Dempsey-Gibbons fight July 4. Mayor Johnson was treasurer of the fight and active in raising a portion of the $300,000 which Dempsey was to have received.

Foreign

Deauville—The wearing of wigs has become the latest feminine fad here because of the scarcity of coiffeurs and hair dressers. The leading Paris wig makers state that they are sold out.

Berlin—A dispatch to the Deutsche Allgeteine Zeitung, from Halle, says a mob stormed the jail at Zeitz, smashed the doors, opened the cells and liberated all the prisoners, most of whom are declared by the dispatch to have been ordinary criminals.

Canton—The headquarters staff of the constitutionalist forces declared that the report of the retreat of those forces recently was without foundation, and that Sun Yat Sen has ordered four new airplanes to proceed to the front for duty.

Brussels—Premier Theunis has served notice on all bankers and brokers that if speculation in exchange continued, strenuous restrictive measures would be taken, beginning with limitations on exchange transactions and eventually leading, if necessary, to the closing of the bourse.

Landau, Bavaria—Eight directors of a Badanese aniline soda factory at Ludwigshafen were sentenced to eight years' imprisonment and fined 150,000,000 marks each by a French court-martial. They were charged with refusing to assist in delivering nitrogen fertilizers requisitioned by the French.

Geneva—Miss Helen Short, aged 17, of New York, was injured by a small avalanche while ascending the Jungfrau, accompanied by a guide. She was within 20 yards of the summit when she was struck by falling stones. She was assisted by the guide to the Jungfrau station, whence she was taken to a private clinic at Wengern. Her recovery is expected.

Bremen—"He looked very dry when he told me he did not wish to be interviewed," was the impression made on a German newspaper reporter by former Representative Andrew J. Volstead when he arrived at Bremen on the steamer America. Mr. Volstead is on his way to Copenhagen to attend the international congress against alcohol.

Nome, Alaska—The Blue Sea, a small American coast trading vessel, captured and held by Russion soviet authorities in Serbia but later released, arrived from Anadyr. American traders had failed to respect the Russian trading regulations but were freed with their confiscated ship upon compliance with soviet shipping restrictions, the party explained.

Dublin—Eamonn de Valera arrested under dramatic circumstances at Ennis, when he appeared to deliver a speech in the election campaign, probably will be brought from Limerick, where he is imprisoned at present, to Mount Joy jail within the next few days. The public safety act gives the government power to detain him and it is considered likely that he will be kept in jail until the condition of the country is more peaceful.

Paris—The Dauville casino's baccarat bank has been broken by the loss of 10,000,000 francs, says the Herald. The syndicate running the bank, comprising two wealthy Greeks and an Armenian, have decided to go out of business and no one has been found who is willing to take over the game. The two principal winners Monday evening were the eminent French sportsman, James Hennessy, and a Britisher named Pulcinelli. The latter is said to have cleared a million and a half francs in a single sitting.

London—Great Britain does not intend to protest further against the seizure of the Marion and Mosher, rum runners, for hovering off the American coast. The United States supreme court has just upheld the seizure of the ships. The American law is based on the old English hovering laws, designed to prevent smuggling.

Paris—Rodolph is here. He landed from the skies just four hours after a patient and expectant Parisian crowd had assembled to meet him—Valentino himself, accompanied by his charming wife, Winifred Hudnut.

FIREMEN CAUGHT BY FALLING WALL

Spectacular Blaze in Brooklyn Old Masonic Temple Claims 25.

NEED MANY FIGHTERS

Additional Firemen and Civilian Volunteers Brave Heat and Smoke to Carry Bodies from Pyre Half Block in Extent.

New York.—An unknown number of firemen were believed to have been killed early Tuesday when the roof and one of the walls of a three-story building housing the New Plaza dance hall in Brooklyn collapsed during a fire. Between 25 and 50 fire fighters and a number of civilians were crushed beneath the tons of brick and masonry.

The firemen had carried lines of hose into the structure and were fighting the fire under the glare of a half dozen powerful searchlights. Without warning the entire roof and one of the walls crashed, burying all those in the building. A number of spectators close to the wall were also believed to have been victims.

Seven firemen were on the roof when the crash came. They were plunged into the flaming building. Between 25 and 50 firemen, fire officials estimated, were included in the group fighting the flames in the building at the time of the collapse.

Rescue Work Hampered.

The collapse of the roof carried three huge steel girders into the tumbled ruins and these are believed to be pinning down many of the victims. Cries and groans of the injured spurred the rescue workers to greater efforts. The work of rescue was badly hampered by the heat and the danger offered by the possibility of a collapse of the remaining walls.

The flames broke out afresh as the wall and roof collapsed and a fifth alarm of fire brought additional apparatus. After 10 minutes of desperate work rescuers brought out one body, that of a firemen, and five badly injured fire fighters who were sent to hospitals.

The smouldering ruins built a sepulchre four feet high and covering half a block. Firemen, policemen, and volunteer civilians attacked the pile from every side in their efforts to get to the victims.

Former Masonic Temple.

The building of tragedy is at 324 Grand street, Brooklyn, an old structure which formerly housed the Masonic temple. The building, three stories in height, is one of the older structures of the Williamsburg district.

HARDY DIRECTS ROLL CALL

State Fair Secretary Undertakes to Put State Over in Quick Time

Fargo.—J. P. Hardy, secretary of the Fargo state fair association, will direct the annual roll call of the American Red Cross in North Dakota, October 1-15, according to announcement from state headquarters of the Red Cross.

Mr. Hardy, who has been ill following overwork during the state fair this year, has recovered his health and has consented to assume the leadership in the state campaign.

"The roll call this year will take place during the first two weeks in October," says Mr. Hardy. "The state is already undergoing organization by districts and W. Wesselius and Miss Isabelle Carruthers, representatives of the National organization, have been out in the various centers making preliminary arrangement for the work.

"North Dakota will set the pace for all the other states of the union during this campaign. The regular time for the national organization to canvass the country is November 11 to 28. By Armistice day the North Dakota district expects to report that it has gone over the top instead of that it is just starting the work."

Will Not Press Debts.

Washington.—The American government probably will make no immediate efforts to hasten negotiation of debt funding agreements with its foreign wartime debtors as a result of information brought back to the treasury by Secretary Mellon. Determination upon such a policy was practically assured when it became known that Mr. Mellon, who has just returned from a two months' vacation in Europe, would remain in the cabinet. He conferred with President Coolidge during the day, the announcement being made later that he would continue as head of the treasury department.

South Dakota Treasurer Resigns.

Pierre, S. D.—Governor W. H. McMaster confirms the report that the resignation of State Treasurer W. S. O'Brien was presented and accepted by him, to be effective Sept. 1. Further than this Governor McMaster would not make any statement. However, information comes from a high official circle that the resignation was demanded by the government and was tendered in a few hours.

O'Brien served one term as state treasurer and was re-elected to the office at the last general election.

CORN AND POTATO PROSPECTS GOOD

Wheat Crop Reported by Government Observers Disappointing.

LIVESTOCK DOES WELL

Final Summer Estimate of Farm Conditions Situation Far From Discouraging, Despite Many Local Slumps.

Grand Forks, N. D.—Spring wheat yields and quality are expected to be generally disappointing in North Dakota, especially for the bread wheats. South Dakota marquis is reported a poor crop but durum better, according to the semi-regional summary by J. G. Diamond, government statistician. The Minnesota threshing returns are reported in line with earlier estimates. Montana crop is reported filling quite satisfactorily, but some decline in prospect noted in northeastern and eastern counties.

Corn has made a rapid progress in South Dakota, where sufficient moisture to mature the crop is considered present and the general prospect is termed excellent. Minnesota corn has responded to the new moisture of the past two weeks, which was badly needed in most of the southern counties.

Potatoes Thought Average.

Potatoes, Minnesota valley crop, are considered hurt by too much rain but set is good and present prospect is reported very satisfactory. Some of the early commercial crop is now being moved. The North Dakota crop generally was helped by August showers and cooler weather, and prospect is considered better than average despite many poor fields in the valley section.

Flax prospects on the whole appear to be slightly better than average although below last year's favorable outlook at this time. Early flax is considered improved in North Dakota. Montana flax is generally satisfactory and the Minnesota crop is still giving good promise with some early crop at harvest.

Some Stock Moving.

Range grass in western Dakotas and Montana has been slow in curing due to showers and green growths, and will tend to delay finishing of range stock; some movement, however, has already started.

Condition of all livestock still is reported excellent although some reports of anthrax are now coming from South Dakota localities.

Harvest Well Along.

Commenting on the North Dakota situation, Mr. Diamond says:

"The spring wheat harvest now is about completed except that in the later northwestern districts cutting is still in progress. The wheat crop is too far advanced to benefit by the change to cooler weather which set in with the last week of July and continued throughout the first half of August, although in the northwestern counties this change is recorded to have checked rust damages.

"Such threshing returns as are available bear out earlier damage estimates and it is expected that quality as well as yields will be generally disappointing.

"Oats and barley harvests have made proportionate progress with wheat, and most of the damage to these crops which appears to be relatively higher than in the case of spring wheat, is considered to have resulted from the forcing these crops sustained in the unseasonably hot days of early and middle July.

Corn Has Fine Outlook.

"Corn is still given an excellent outlook in practically all districts, and while August weather to date has been a little cool for best progress, the crop is generally considered to have been too far advanced to have been hurt.

"Potatoes have generally benefited by August weather to date, although reports of many poor fields persist, and are probably due to the extensive use of home grown seed.

"Flax prospects continue generally favorable. Some early flax has already been cut in the southern districts, but harvest of this crop is not expected to be general for another week. Late flax has been helped by moderate temperatures and sufficient showers, and is on the whole given a thrifty stand. While weeds are more in evidence this season than was the case last year and have resulted in some plowing up of infected fields, the weed situation is regarded as being about average.

"Estimates for potato production August 1, in comparison with other periods, follow:

"North Dakota: August 1, 12,621,000 bushels; July 1, 11,951,000 bushels; December, 1922, 17,820,000 bushels."

Civilian Camp Inspected.

Fargo.—W. C. Macfadden, secretary of the North Dakota Bankers association and civilian aide to the secretary of war, for North Dakota, was chairman of the civilian committee to inspect the citizens' military training camp of the Seventh corps area at Fort Snelling, Minn. He went to Minneapolis this week where he inspected the camp on Thursday. W. L. Darling, St. Paul; James Robertson, Madison, S. D.; G. C. VanDusen, Minneapolis; and G. E. Ingersoll, St. Paul are other members of the committee.

News Briefs from All the State

Condensed Stories of Happenings of the Week in Minnesota

Hibbing—One thousand farmers, their wives and friends from the northern half of St. Louis county participated in the first annual farmers' picnic at the fair grounds.

Willmar—Arrangements are being made for the Kandiyohi county fair, which will be conducted here Sept. 19 to 22. It is expected the exhibits at this fair will be larger than for several years.

Ivanhoe—W. N. Johnson, editor of the Ivanhoe Times, has been appointed postmaster of Ivanhoe, succeeding W. H. Nevin. Mr. Johnson was selected for the position from a field of five candidates who had successfully passed the civil service examination.

Long Prairie—Ben Faust, prominent young farmer, was killed by lightning while at work in his barn. His wife who was with him, was unharmed, but a cow she was milking was killed. The barn was destroyed by fire.

Blue Earth—Maynard King, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert King of this city, was killed in an automobile accident two miles east of Fairmont. Peter Morgan, who was riding with him, was seriously injured.

Willmar—The official board of the Methodist church here has asked for the return of Rev. L. C. Benson, pastor of the church. In the last year, through the efforts of Rev. Benson, a $25,000 church has been erected by the Methodists in Willmar.

Willmar—Kandiyohi county will send a delegation to the Northwest Dairy show in connection with the Minnesota State Fair Sept. 1 to 8. The dairy interests in the county in the last few years have greatly increased and the delegation will be a large one.

St. Cloud—A committee from the St. Cloud Commercial Club, acting with the American Legion post, will prepare a program for a suitable ceremony at the laying of the cornerstone for the new United States hospital here. The tentative date for the ceremony is Sept. 3.

Minneapolis—Wrecking of the Central Lutheran church, built in 1872 at the southwest corner of Fourth avenue S and Grant street, will be started in December to make way for a new church building to cost approximately $175,000, O. L. Loberg, a member of the congregation, announced.

St. Cloud—More than 200 employees are engaged at the J. E. Barr cannery here. Every day 30,000 cans of string beans and 60,000 cans of corn are being packed. After the corn crop and the bean crop will come the tomato, cabbage and cucumber crops and the company will make the heaviest pack in its history.

Pipestone—Plans are being made for a public mass meeting in this city in the near future to consider the condition which now confronts the farmers. The county farm bureau board has asked the county bankers' association and the business men of the county to assist in arranging the meeting.

St. Cloud—"No parking" signs are being erected along the Jefferson highway by men from the state highway department, as a result of a complaint made by the Automobile club. In a letter to the St. Cloud club the highway department said it had recently received accounts of several accidents caused by automobile drivers parking at the sides of the highway.

Hibbing—C. C. Alexander, former superintendent of schools here was acquitted by a jury on a charge of larceny in the second degree. The verdict of not guilty was returned after the jury deliberated for about two hours. Mr. Alexander received the verdict unmoved and thanked every juryman as they filed past him. The charges arose out of an alleged misuse of school funds.

Dodge Center—School board officers have been informed that Judge Fred W. Senn, of the fifth district, has filed a decision reversing the verdict of the jury which last April gave a verdict for $101 in favor of the father of Florence Weir, a child who was killed on the school grounds when a piece of apparatus collapsed while she was playing. The verdict was against the school board members.

St. Cloud—Certificates of indebtedness will be issued to all creditors of the Pan Motor company for the amount of their claims by a holding company organized here, as soon as the company can be incorporated under state laws. The new organization will be known as the St. Cloud Holding company, will have a capital stock of $50,000, and the following officers have been elected: C. D. Schwab, president; Dr. C. B. Lewis, vicepresident; L. F. Cary, secretary-treasurer.

Belle Plaine—A crowd, estimated at nearly 6,000 attended the "Making Livestock Pay" picnic here under the auspices of the Scott County Farm Bureau, the Belle Plaine Co-operative Creamery association and the Belle Plaine Commercial club.

Redwood Falls—Ralph P. Nelson of Montevideo has been chosen from a large field of candidates as superintendent of the Redwood Falls schools for the coming year. He is a graduate of the Rochester high school, Carleton college and has been an instructor in the Montevideo high schools since 1920.

Red Wing—Articles of incorporation of the Peerless Oil company, with headquarters at Cannon Falls have been filed in the register of deeds office here.

Granite Falls—Mrs. Ernest Isaacs, wife of a farmer, was killed and her little son seriously injured when the automobile which she was driving turned over on a country road near Hazel Run.

Willmar—Plans are being made for the observance of Labor day in this city. A parade will be staged through the business streets, terminating at the county fair grounds, where the day's exercises will be conducted.

Madison—The first city election to be conducted under the new city charter adopted a few days ago will be conducted Tuesday, Sept. 11, when a complete new set of municipal officers will be named.

Grand Rapids—Cushman Dunn, 15 years old, of Cohasset escaped probable fatal injury when an automobile struck the boy's pony which he was riding. The pony was killed and the automobile smashed. The Dunn boy was tossed over the automobile.

Mankato—Petitioners for the lowering of Swan lake, in Nicollet county, have notified their attorneys at New Ulm to take steps to appeal from the recent decision of Judge A. B. Gislason in the Nicollet county district court, denying the petition of those wishing to drain the lake.

Rochester—Olmsted county at the present time seems to be afflicted with a plague of crickets. Merchants have complained that they are entering stores in large numbers. Housewives say they have innumerable crickets. This is particularly true in the country districts. At night they are especially annoying.

Faribault—Rice county will be forced to import rural school teachers for the first time in several years, according to John H. Lewis, county superintendent of schools. There is a lack of local teachers, caused by marriages and changes to higher positions by teachers who were in rural schools last year.

Chicago—Dr. Mathias Wahlstrom, 72, superintendent of the Augustana hospital in Chicago, who was knighted by the king of Sweden in 1901 for his educational and medical work, died from a stroke of apoplexy suffered on April 21. He was president of Gustavus Adolphus college at St. Peter, Minn., from 1881 until 1904.

Fergus Falls—James Chapman and three sons were brought to the hospital here having been injured by the explosion of a gun. One of the boys laid the gun down on the kitchen stove with a shell in the barrel and it exploded, scattering bits of gun metal all over the room. The mother and three sons were all seriously injured, particularly the younger son.

Litchfield—Resolutions petitioning congress for an increase of pay to $75 a mile a year for each mile covered, making a 24 mile route pay $1,800 a year, and longer routes in proportion, were passed by the Minneosta Federation of Rural Route Carriers at their annual meeting here. The carriers also passed a resolution asking congress for a law allowing carriers to retire after 30 years of service, with an allowance of $90 a month.

Waseca—After a salesman for a "stock tonic" had secured orders from 15 farmers in this vicinity for 100-pound lots, it was found the supposed contracts they had signed were negotiable notes, and that they were in possession of a local bank. The farmers protested they had not signed any notes, and the stuff ordered hadn't come, so the bank returned the checks uncollected, and the signers are awaiting the next move.

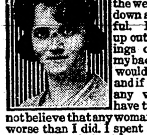
Thief River Falls—The sugar beet committee of the Thief River Falls Commercial club, headed by H. W. Pritzeler, is at work on a plan to advertise the possibilities of this section to people residing in other parts of the country. When the best harvest is at its height next fall, it is the intention of the committee to arrange for a special train to carry about 50 carloads of beets in one shipment to the factory in Mason City.

Redwood Falls—A new district of the Order of the Eastern Star, to be known as district No. 47, has been formed by dividing the sixth district. Mrs. William H. Ball of Redwood Falls has been named as district deputy grand matron for the new district. Included in the new district will be the chapters at Winthrop, Redwood Falls, Morton and Fairfax, those at Marietta, Wood Lake, Dawson and Madison remaining in the sixth district.

Minneapolis—The Minnesota State Bar association will hold its annual convention at the Radisson hotel, August 27, 28 and 29, in conjunction with the annual sessions of the American Bar association. The state convention will close August 30, and the national organization will convene the same day and continue through September 1. Thousands of lawyers from all sections of the country will assemble the last week in August to attend both sessions. Hundreds of these will be Minnesota attorneys and judges.

Duluth—More than 200 Duluthians attended the international picnic at Grand Marais. Among those attending was Mayor Snively. Three thousand persons attended the festivities.

Grand Rapids—Potatoes, corn and alfalfa were shown to Minnesota's potato tourists from the State Department of Agriculture, the University Department of Agriculture, and elsewhere in various parts of Itasca county. Itasca county this year has 3,000 acres in potatoes, only a slight decrease from last year, and most of the decrease is in the acreage of potatoes for the table.



THOUGHT BACK WOULD BREAK

Nothing Helped until She Began Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"When my baby was born," says Mrs. Posluszny, 106 High Street, Bay City, Michigan, "I got up too soon. It made me so sick that I was tired of living and the weakness run me down something awful. I could not get up out of bed mornings on account of my back; I thought it would break in two, and if I started to do any work I would have to lie down. I do not believe that any woman ever suffered worse than I did. I spent lots of money, but nothing helped me until I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I felt a whole lot better after the first bottle, and I am still taking it for I am sure it is what has put me on my feet."

If you are suffering from a displacement, irregularities, backache, nervousness, sideache or any other form of female weaknes you should write to The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts, for Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women." It will be sent you free upon request. This book contains valuable information.

Sense of Proportion.

To know your subject fully you must have a sense of proportion in the details of it, like the great artist who paints a scene and not all its photographic detail. Yet the great artist knows the scene better and can draw it better, than the industrious drudge, because it is only one scene of many that he has observed for the purpose of his art, and because that purpose controls all his observations. So that great scholar knows far more and knows it to better purpose than the narrow one, because he knows what knowledge is and is accustomed to use it for great purposes. Having more than one talent, he does not hide his talents in a napkin and pride himself on their disuse, but, using them, he preserves his humility and increases his power.—London Times.

Want Equal Rights for Women.

Women of Great Britain have welcomed the introduction in parliament of a bill which provides that "the mother of every legitimate infant shall be guardian jointly with the father for all purposes and have equal authority, rights and responsibilities." The measure is regarded as the first step toward securing "The Mother's Charter," for which 200 woman's organizations have been working.

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of Othine from any druggist and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful, clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double-strength Othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

CAPTAIN SAZARAC

"I OFFER A SHIP"

SYNOPSIS.—Under the name of "Captain Sazarac," and disguised, Jean Lafitte, former freebooter of Barataria, proscribed, returns to the city of New Orleans. He is recognized by two of his old companions, Alderman Dominique and Beluche. At the gaming tables Sazarac has won much money from Colonel Carr, British officer. John Jarvis, the city's first bohemian of the arts and letters, an oldtime friend of Lafitte, tells of a woman's face and smile. As his last wager, Carr puts up a woman, presumably a slave. Custom compels Sazarac to accept the stake. He wins. His old associates and Count Raoul de Almonaster accost him as Lafitte. A project of the youthful adventurers of New Orleans is the rescue of Napoleon Bonaparte from St. Helena, and a ship, the Seraphine, has been made ready. From De Almonaster Sazarac learns that the girl he "won" at the card table is white, of high estate, and that the matter has been made a byword in the city's resorts. Sazarac finds Mademoiselle Lestron, a fellow passenger on a river steamer a few days before, and with whom he had fallen in love, is the girl and in chivalry foregoes his revenge against Carr. Jarvis admires Mademoiselle Lestron. He is a witness of the meeting and picks up a camellia which the girl had thrown, unnoticed, to Sazarac. Jarvis is dangerous; he talks too much in his cups. His old associates of the Barataria days urge Lafitte to take command of the Seraphine, ostensibly to rescue Napoleon but really to fly the black flag and cruise the seas. He hesitates. Jarvis is a witness of the kidnaping of Mademoiselle Lestron, but his story is not given credence. De Almonaster entertains Sazarac, now admittedly Jean Lafitte, at his country house. Lafitte, accused of the abduction of Mademoiselle Lestron, is warned of the approach of a military party seeking to arrest him. He escapes to the swamps of Barataria. Lafitte learns that Mademoiselle Lestron has been placed on the ship Genaron, for the West Indies. Influenced by his followers of the freebooting days, and by De Almonaster, chief owner of the Seraphine, Lafitte agrees to seize the ship and sail to the rescue of Mademoiselle Lestron.

He took his snuff debonairly. And suddenly, with a shout of joy, the hairy giant, Johanness, seized the count's slender hand. "There—once more! I told you, Jean, that this young aristocrat was the truest adventurer of us all! Now, he proposes a ship! A ship for Sazarac!"

The Captain Sazarac in turn grasped De Almonaster's hand: "Well, then, Bohon, get word to the Temple! Choose your fellows well, and have them come by the water trails secretly to Monsieur Berthoud's plantation across from the upper city. And not a field-hand or house-slave must so much as have sight of a shirt-tail of you all. No liquor, there! No brawling, until we have descended by the old smuggler's road and taken the Napoleon ship!"

The score of figures crowded on the lugger's deck, or wading waist-deep about her bow, holding the flambeaus and striving to listen to the conference, raised a hoarse cry. Crackley, the leader of the deserters, strove for dominance over the younger men.

"Eh, bullies! I told you there would be blood-letting, once we had the man to lead us! A ship, and then over the line at the king o' Spain's traffic, says I!"

At a word from Bohon there was a scattering of the islanders from the smuggler's rail. A whispered conference here and there; secret orders given; gesticulations of surprise and exultation, as the lieutenants explained what must be arranged.

At the lugger's bow there now stood but two figures. The gamester, Sazarac, had placed a hand on the younger man's shoulder.

"You peril your life and your fortune, Monsieur. There is but one stake for which I would accept such a mad offer from a friend. One night, upon the staircase at the hotel, I said bluntly, merely as a vagabond may speak his thought, with nothing to lose or gain—that I loved the lady of my wager at Maspero's. I went my way, asking no answer. The moonlight was on the palms and myrtle . . . I could not well see, but I thought something fell and vanished from my sight. It might have been her answer."

"Very likely it was the lady's answer," smiled De Almonaster.

"Eh, well! Out of the shadows it came—into the shadows it vanished. It appears to be like my life. It seems to have the prophecy of my love. Ah, a curious thing!—a flicker in the moonlight—and silence!"

"I offer, Monsieur, a ship, my friendship, my fortune—to compel the lady to answer!"

The bronzed adventurer laughed slightly. "Thank you Monsieur!"

But suddenly his companion started with an amazed gasp.

"Sazarac, I have forgotten something! Perdition! It just came to my dullard mind! The plot is to seize the Seraphine tomorrow night as she lies at her moorings before the Place d'Armes!"

"Certainly the venture cannot be delayed a moment beyond that—"

"Well and good! But it is the night of the banquet to celebrate the plot Napoleon. I, myself, am to make a modest speech of acceptance for my aunt, Baroness Pontalba, as I take over her interests in outfitting the Seraphine!"

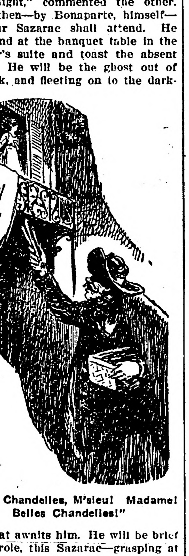
"I should say it is very well. Putting back to the city at once, with your blacks, and appearing at the affair, you are shielded from all connivance with what the infamous Sazarac may do."

"Ah, but!" exclaimed De Almonaster. "There is to be a ball at the Theatre d'Orleans. The youth and chivalry of the city are to dance there, and then away to the Seraphine herself to revel and drink to the plot upon her decks."

"At what hour, Monsieur? I admit this is disconcerting."

"At twelve o'clock. The ship will be ablaze with lanterns and hung with ribbons! Nom de Dieu! It is too late to change the affair! I could bite my fingers that I did not think of the banquet. Commander Bossiere will preside. De Marigny, Barre, Pierre des Trehan, young De la Vergne—the officers of the garrison and the municipality—the affair will be an uproar until sunrise!"

"Midnight," commented the other. "Well, then—by Bonaparte, himself—Monsieur Sazarac shall attend. He will stand at the banquet table in the emperor's suite and toast the absent guests. He will be the ghost out of the dark, and fleeting on to the darkness that awaits him. He will be brief in his role, this Sazarac—grasping at a flicker of moonlight; and for his answer—silence."



"Belles Chandelles, M'sieu! Madame! Belles Chandelles!"

CHAPTER VIII

The Revelers of the Place d'Armes.

In the dusky radiance of the chain oil-lamps suspended from corner to corner, the vagrant candle seller held his handful of green wax myrtle tapers high, peering up at the iron gallery to the possible customer.

"Belles chandelles! Petits belles chandelles—Madame!"

The magnificent lady ignored him with disdain, and the shabby old figure shambled on with its cry:

"Belles chandelles, M'sieu! Madame—belles chandelles!"

At the corner of the rue Royale and Orleans just behind the cathedral the peddler stopped and hitched his cloak higher over his basket. The rue d'Orleans was a blaze of light showing forth the low facade of the famous ballroom. From carriages, dusky, bejeweled women were alighting; and across the cobbles grooms led horses from which gentlemen had just dismounted to wander by groups to the barroom or to the crowded vestibule of the Quadroon ball. Laughing, jesting gallants, some of more youthful appearance glancing rather timorously up the street, for this was a frolic not countenanced openly—and yet the gentlemen of the town and the plantations would be there. Favorites and mistresses—the famed beauties of the demi-monde—and perhaps a few better recognized were lured to the Ball d'Orleans to wonder curiously how brothers, fathers and lovers might comport themselves at the revel.

The old candle seller, in the shadow of the trees in the cathedral garden across the rue Royale, watched unceasingly. Behind him lay the narrow-paved Alley St. Antoine between the church and the gloomy, high galleried buildings jutting over it. The other end opened on the Place d'Armes; and beyond that, the levee where there was a group of lanterns forming an arch over a carpeted gangway that led to the deck of the gayly lighted Seraphine.

The candle peddler looked each way casually. At length, from the crowd before the ballroom vestibule—amidst the flash of carriage wheels, sleek-coated animals turning among the bright-coated gentlemen and shouting hostlers, there came one brown-skinned fellow tugging to hold back a spirited steed. Unsteadily, as by chance he was jerked on by the horse, the groom finally held up at the banquette of broad stones on which stood the idle candle seller. To him the groom muttered:

"Monsieur Almonaster is here. He thought it best. They gibe him roundly about the affair Lafitte, but he protests—he has given half his plantation force to the military and the city guard who are beating out the woods for the stolen lady. He has denounced as deeply as any against the outrage—and he thought it best to come join the gallants. How goes it, Gorgio?"

"With the few of us in town—well. And, be assured, across the river the Captain Jean will have his fellows ready! Be on, now! You must not talk to me overlong. Only, Teton, we idle here, armed and watchful—and a word from your master—"

"Monsieur de Almonaster is to send word by me—I am to hang about drinking with the servants at our side entrance—watching."

"Word must come in time—before the party leaves for the ship—we must know that an hour before."

"My master will be assured. The fun grows furious already—it will be drawn ere they think of supper on the Seraphine."

"Be gone! Here comes one of the police guard!"

The quarter-blood groom led on De Almonaster's horse. And again the candle seller raised his monotonous cry down the rue Royale. And from the river end of Antoine's alley wandered another figure; at the deep entry to the Padre's house, midway in the tree-shaded obscurity, the old Andalusian beggar sank on the stones with a sigh—and adjusted the pair of pistols at his belt to more ease.

When Gorgio wandered this way again, the vagrant seemed asleep. Then came his mutter: "Perhaps, on the rue de la Levee—by the first market stall, there might await a customer. Thou art too noisy at the best for the Padre's street, eh—Frere Diable?"

"Custom is bad at least," retorted Gorgio, "but you—the police will harry you on as well."

"Not with Padre Antoine, my good friend, above at his book," growled the other. "Do as I bid—I was sent."

And on idled the candle man, with his owl-cry to the galleried homes. Under the thick arches of the ancient market he bantered hoarsely about the cabbage and fowl stalls. At this hour the market was little visited and few kept open. A few lazy Indian women and mulattoes grumbled back at Gorgio's jests; an early cart or two backed in to unload for the morrow's business, and it was to one of these, on which a trio of trucksters smoked idly, that the old man came.

They shot down dark, inscrutable glances.

"Pierre," muttered Gorgio, "you are in charge of these?"

"In all, sixteen of us sleeping about the stalls," came in the patois. "The police guards note nothing. But of the fellows who must cross by the river, there is delay. What was the hour?"

"It cannot be set to a moment. At midnight the ball must have taken every idler from the plaza to crowd about and gape at the gentry. Save for the cursed lights about the ship itself, all would be clear. It must be touch and board quickly."

"Two of Johanness' men are already enlisted in the crew. They report all well, save that old Bossiere fusses about the tables on the deck—the lights and wine and cuisine keep the servants all astir."

"He will go to the ball later. As commander of the Napoleon expedition, and the affair in honor of the Seraphine's departure on a next week's tide, the young bravos will have him in the whirl."

"Monsieur de Almonaster's groom is to fetch the first word to me—I to Peter, the beggar, who plays the sot on the steps of the Padre's house. He to you in the market—then you to the lantern signal under the rue Toulouse landing. Then the six boats shoot with all speed from the other shore. At the first commotion as they swing aboard, your fellows rush openly from the market, cast off the mooring lines and join. It is overboard with any who oppose."

> "Ah, to play the part of Sazarac—one hour!"

Two inhabitants of a sagebrush town were seated on a cracker box exchanging desultory conversation.

"You know them hot cakes what the feller flips in the window of the Forlorn Hope restaurant?"

"Yes, I know 'em."

"Ever try 'em?"

"Yes, I've tried 'em."

"What do you think of 'em?"

The citizen thus appealed to gazed reflectively toward the foothills for some minutes and then rendered judgment:

Benefits in Fox Farming.

Fox farming in Alaska utilizes material from salmon canneries that would otherwise be waste, according to the biological survey, United States Department of Agriculture. The heads and tails of salmon, of which the flesh is canned, are fed to blue foxes and are much relished by them. Much of this food is salted for preservation and some of it is smoked. Many fox farmers believe that the foxes prefer the raw fish, after the salt has been taken out of it by soaking. The fox-farming industry, which is being fostered by the biological survey, is thriving along the coast.

THRILLS GALORE AT BIG STATE FAIR

World's Greatest Features Engaged by Minnesota State Fair and Northwest Dairy Exposition, September 1 to 8.

An entertainment program costing $150,000.00, so replete with thrills, speed and action, and so stupendous that it over-shadows former programs by comparison, has been arranged for this year's Minnesota State Fair and Northwest Dairy Exposition, Twin Cities, September 1 to 8.

Many new and novel attractions have been booked for this year's big exposition. Exciting harness and running horse racing, thrilling automobile races, a spectacular aerial circus, twenty-five big vaudeville acts, a gorgeous night fireworks spectacle, auto polo, horse shoe pitching, a midway with 25 big attractions, a homing pigeon race, and fifteen famous bands and orchestras, are its main features.

The open air circus program will present many new and novel acts, recruited from all parts of the world. The aerial pyrotechnics will be furnished by Miss Lillian Boyer and her Flying Circus. Miss Boyer will change from a speeding automobile to an airplane each afternoon in front of the grandstand. Miss Boyer is the only person in the world who attempts this spectacular stunt. She also hangs by one foot, one hand, and by her teeth, in turn, from a trapeze suspended from the running gears of her airplane. She climaxes her brilliant act by jumping out of the airplane and making a parachute drop on the track in front of the stand. Lieuts. Billy Brock and Faulkner will stage a "Battle in the Clouds" each night, in brilliantly illuminated planes.

Sig Haugdahl, king of dirt track automobile racing pilots, with his famous three-mile-a-minute car, tops the list of 25 speed demons who will race on three days, Saturday, Wednesday and Saturday, September 1, 5 and 8.

More than 250 harness and running horses are entered for the four day's speed program. Purses totaling $22,000.00 are offered for this year's four day card. The horses will topline the afternoon programs on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, September 3, 4, 6 and 7.

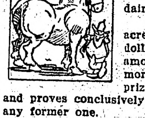
The big fireworks spectacle "India" with its herd of elephants, and a cast of more than 700 persons, is the most stupendous thing ever attempted in fireworks. Tons and tons of explosives will be fired each night in the staging of this awe-inspiring spectacle.

A dozen feature bands and orchestras have been engaged for the music program.

DAIRY EXPOSITION ADDITION TO FAIR

Another Great Educational Feature Swells 1923 Minnesota State Fair and Northwest Dairy Exposition Program.

A score of great fairs within a fair—this is what the mammoth Minnesota State Fair and Northwest Dairy Exposition, September 1 to 8, will be this year.



"The World's Greatest State Fair" has added another new exposition to its program in the staging of the First Annual Northwest Dairy Exposition, which succeeds the National Dairy show held in Minnesota in 1921 and 1922. In size of premiums and number of cattle exhibited, the Northwest Dairy Exposition will be larger than any national or international dairy show ever held in the world.

The state fair this year will present more than 260 acres of exhibits, valued at millions and millions of dollars. The money offered for educational exhibits amounts to more than $145,000, compared with a little more than $128,000 a year ago. The big increase in prize money reflects the tremendous growth of the fair, and proves conclusively how much larger the 1923 exposition is to be than any former one.

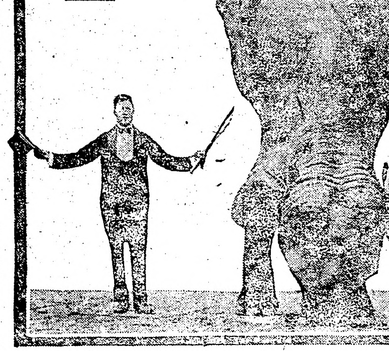
The livestock show will not be excelled by any staged in any other part of America this year. Premiums amounting to more than $70,000 are offered for cattle, horses, swine, sheep, and poultry. The very cream of the greatest dairy cattle herds of the country is coming to attend, first, the Northwest Dairy Exposition, and second, the National Dairy Show at Syracuse, New York, three weeks later.

One half of all the counties in the state will stage county exhibits at the state fair this year, or more than three times as many as in 1922. A gigantic cow, sculped from plaster paris, thirty feet long and fifteen feet high, and symbolizing the relation of agriculture to dairying, will grace a pedestal in the center of the Agricultural Building. The biggest corn and commercial exhibit ever seen in Minnesota will be placed in the same building, a new feature.

Demonstrations and exhibits by 1,000 boys and girls in person, enrolled in club work, will be a daily attraction. Eighty acres of farm machinery, thousands of women's exhibits, a collection of the world's greatest paintings, a fruit and vegetables exhibit consisting of hundreds of thousands of specimens, a new electrical building, butter and cheese of highest quality, and a score of other exhibits will comprise the 1923 educational program.

Don't forget the dates—September 1 to 8.

ELEPHANT HERD STATE FAIR FEATURE



A herd of trained elephants, schooled by one of the greatest animal trainers in the world, will be a big feature of the vaudeville and fireworks program of the coming Minnesota State Fair and Northwest Dairy Exposition, September 1 to 8.

In the mammoth fireworks production, "India," staged before the grandstand each evening, this herd of elephants will play a big role. At the climax of the spectacle, when everything is ablaze with fire, these intrepid beasts rush through the flames and exploding bombs in battle, tossing their trunks about and screaming with rage. They are the only elephants that have ever been trained to brave fire and fireworks.

The big beasts also perform on mounted stages in front of the stand each afternoon and evening. More than sixteen open-air circus acts, recruited from the four corners of the world, will be put on at the state fair each day.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale Notice

Whereas, default has occurred in the conditions of that certain mortgage made by Clarence Docken, a single man, mortgagor, to Red Lake Building Association of Thief River Falls, Minnesota, a corporation, mortgagee, dated February 16, 1916, and with a power of sale therein contained, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall county, Minnesota, on the 17th day of February, 1916, at eight-thirty o'clock A. M., in Book 76 of Mortgage Deeds on page 614.

And, whereas, there is now claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon said mortgage, the sum of Two Hundred Eighty one and 23-100 dollars ($281.23), and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

NOW, THEREFORE NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, to-wit:

Lot Five (5) of Block Ten (10), in the village of Holt in Marshall County, Minnesota, according to the recorded plat thereof on file in the office of the Register of Deeds for the county of Marshall and state of Minnesota, which sale will be made by the sheriff of Marshall county, at the west front door of the court house, in the city of Warren, in said county and state, on the 15th day of September, 1923, at ten o'clock A. M., of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of Two Hundred Eighty one and 23-100 dollars ($281.23), and the interest and taxes, if any on said premises, and Fifty dollars attorneys fees, as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated July 21, 1923.

Don't fail to hear Mrs. Josephine E. Sizer at the Lutheran church Sunday evening at 8 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Anderson and baby visited Sunday at the home of his brother, G. G. Anderson, near St. Hilaire.

The Carlson Mercantile Co., received a big shipment of fall and winter goods, the first of the week.

Miss Olga Gregerson of Badger came Friday and visited over Sunday with her brother, G. O. Gregorson.

Arvid and Tony Carlson returned home last week Thursday afternoon from their buying trip to the cities, also from visiting relatives in the big city.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Phillipson and baby visited over Sunday at the Selmer Reierson home. Ernest will again teach manual training in the Duluth schools the comming year.

Mrs. Bessie Erickson of Jackson, Minn., left for her home last week Friday evening after having spent a five weeks visit at the home of her son Clarence Erickson of this village.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Jefferson's 13 year old son Ernest was taken to the Thief River Falls hospital last Thursday night for treatment, for what seemed to be a bad case of kidney disease.

Mr. and Mrs. Obert Reierson returned home last week Thursday and moved their goods out of the Oien house. On Monday they left for the western part of North Dak. where he expected to have work.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Lund enjoyed a visit by Joseph Kise and Sylvester Anderson of Cottonwood, Minn., one day last week. The men were on their way to Cottonwood after having spent a week touring Northern Minnesota. Mr. Kise is a college class mate of Mr. and Mrs. Lund.

Friday was a busy day in town as that is one of the busiest cream days also a lot of cattle and sheep were brot in for shipment on Saturday. J. M. Swan shipped three cars of cattle and one of sheep, Hilmer Moberg shipped one car of cattle, and Tonnes Nelson of Newfolden also shipped two cars of cattle.

It is a pleasure to the officers of this bank to note the interest the farmers are taking in our Farm product display in our bank lobby. We want to thank those who have so kindly contributed to the display and invite every one to participate.

The length of corn stalk, good ears of corn, vegetables of all kinds, soy beans and alfalfa is proof enough that our community is a good producer, and that we are blessed with good farmers. Our tallest corn lacks 3 inches of being 12 feet long- "Can your corn beat it?" -- If so bring it in. According to our display, we feel satisfied that the good milch cow is going to have plenty to eat this winter.

Chas Horien was here Saturday buying chickens.

Binder twine at the Holt Farmers Elevator, at the lowest prices.

G. Sanoden and family visited at the John Hagberg home in Badger on Sunday.

Mesdames P. L. Anderson, R. J. Lund, Clarence Erickson, and K. T. Knutson autoed to Thief River Falls yesterday.

Olaf Eide gave us a sample of wheat last week that was grown on R. Reierson's farm near town. This is very nice wheat and graded No. 1 Northern spring wheat.

Services will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Hanson in Ringbo at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon by Rev. Theo. Myhrer. Mrs. Hanson will entertain for the Free Mission Ladies Aid. Rev. Myhrer will preach in Holt Sunday morning.

Herman Heinze showed us a sample of Northwestern Dent, Flint and fodder corn last Friday which were about ripe. He stated that his corn was so far along that the frost of the previous night did not injure it. This corn was planted May 10th and shows that it pays to plant corn early.

The business men of Holt held a meeting at the Marshall County State Bank, on the evening of Aug. 23, 1923 and organized a commercial club with the following officers: P. L. Anderson, Pres., O. C. Johnson Vice Pres., Robert J. Lund, Secy., and Clarence Erickson, Treasurer. A large number turned out for this meeting and it is hoped that Holt may have a 100 per cent organization. The dues of the club is $1.00 a year.

Minnesota is taxing 430,000 motor vehicles-- nearly 50,000 more than last year. Receipts to date are $7,015,000--a gain of less than $500,000. The average tax is $16 30-compared with $16.83 last year. Secretary Holm said that the average auto tax is lower this year because many machines are taking the 3 year discount of 25 per cent and that of 50 percent on 5 year old cars.

Free Mission Church

Rev. Myhrer will hold services in Holt Sunday at 11 o'clock and at the Geo. Hanson home at 2 o'clock. Mrs. Hanson will serve lunch for the Ladies Aid after the services.

Big Happenings of the Week Condensed for the Benefit of Busy Readers

Washington

Washington—Senator Reed Smoot predicts passage of soldier bonus bill.

Washington—Announcement of recognition of Mexico expected in few days.

Washington—Depreciation charges of railroads to be investigated by interstate commerce commission.

Washington—Secretary of Treasury Mellon returns from Europe and lays European situation before president.

Washington — President Coolidge mystifies opponents and halts rush to toss hats in the ring for 1924 renomination.

Washington—General aspect of industrial employment situation encouraging, according to labor department's monthly review.

Washington—Commerce department announces that Europe is still America's largest buyer, despite falling off of exports.

Washington—Mexican commissioners, accompanied by Secretary of State Hughes, visited the White House and reported to president on results of recognition conference.

Washington—Attitude of American business on important economic questions laid before president by committees representing the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Washington — President Coolidge confers with Chairman Hammond of United States coal commission and keeps in close touch with Atlantic City conference.

Washington — Downward taxation revision at next session of congress unlikely, though Secretary of Treasury A. W. Mellon will review his recommendation for paring down of surtaxes.

Washington—Acting Secretary of the Navy Theodore Roosevelt defends navy estimates in conference with President Coolidge and refuses to make drastic cut proposed by budget bureau.

Washington—Pressure on anthracite miners and operators to compose their differences increased by administration forces, which still are optimistic as to prospects of settlement before strike order becomes effective.

Washington — Shipping problems discussed at a White House conference between President Coolidge and Mathew C. Brush, president of American International corporation, who may succeed E. P. Farley of Chicago as chairman of shipping board if latter resigns.

Washington—The retail cost of food averages 2 per cent higher in July than in June, while during the year ending July 15 the general advance amounted to 4 per cent. The average family expenditure for food increased during the month in 45 representative cities and decreased in six. Milwaukee had a 5 per cent increase.

Washington—Charges by Senator Smith W. Brookhart of Iowa, that E. T. Meredith, while occupying the office of secretary of agriculture, "sat in the Wall street game and helped produce the greatest panic in farm prices in the history of agriculture," prompted Mr. Meredith to instruct his attorneys to file suit against the senator, asking damages of 30 cents, Mr. Meredith declared in a statement.

Domestic

Ludingon, Mich.—Forest fires have broken out afresh in this vicinity, and an emergency call for volunteer firefighters, sounded at the city hall, sent 35 men into the forests. Other squads are being organized.

Lakehurst, N. J.—The giant navy dirigible ZR-1, largest craft of its kind in the world, under construction at the naval station here, rose from its cradle within the immense hangar for a few minutes. The final touches are being put on the huge craft and the ascension was confined to the limits of the house in which the ship was built.

Omaha—A plan will be submitted to the Omaha city council for the establishment of a municipal bakery unless prompt action is taken by local bakers toward a reduction in the retail prices of bread, John Hopkins, city commissioner, stated. Commissioner Hopkins declared his action was precipitated by the exorbitant price of bread in Omaha.

Huntsville, Ont.—Bodies of eight persons, all women, including that of the wife of James McNally, of Rand, McNally & Co., Chicago publishers, have been recovered from the ashes of the Wawa hotel, in Muskoka, which was destroyed by fire. Two persons are reported as missing. Five persons suffered injuries from which they may die, while 20 who are being cared for in hospitals are said to be out of danger.

New York—Captain Fred Walters, aged 60, internationally known as the "blue man" exhibited by Barnum and Ringling brothers, died in Bellevue hospital of heart disease. An autopsy revealed his brain, heart and other organs and tissues as blue as his skin.

Burlington, Vt.—Park H. Pollard, a first cousin of President Coolidge, who was indorsed by the democratic state committee as the party candidate for senator to succeed the late Senator William P. Dillingham, has been chairman of the state committee since 1914. He is a merchant in Proctorsville

Sports

Minneapolis — Minneapolis, after being fightless since April, is coming back into the fistic limelight either Sept. 21 or 28. William B. Hoke, matchmaker for the local club, announced that he had come to terms with Cowboy Padgett for a match with Billy Wells, British welterweight champion.

Washington—Plans for enlargement of the stands at American league park here to provide seats for 35,000 persons were announced by Clark Griffith, president of the Washington baseball club. The improvements will cost $100,000 and the name of the field will be changed to Clark Griffith stadium.

Minneapolis—The first official call to candidates for the 1923 University of Minnesota football team was broadcasted by Coach Bill Spaulding from Kalamazoo, Mich., where the Gopher mentor is spending a short vacation before taking up the task of moulding another Gopher football machine. The call was in the form of a personal letter from the head coach, sent to more than 60 potential grid stars, notifying them to be at Northrop Field, outfitted in moleskins, September 15, for the first official practice of the 1923 season. Contained in each letter was also some personal advice to each man to keep in trim and the announcement that "every place on the squad would be awarded on the basis of merit alone."

Foreign

Pescara, Italy—Benito Mussolini paid homage to Gabriele D'Annunzio when, with a solemn procession of pilgrims the Italian premier visited the humble cottage were the poet was born.

Constantinople—The former sultan and the former grand vizier will not be included in the general amnesty to be proclaimed on the occasion of the ratification of the Lausanne treaty, it was announced.

Canton—The headquarters staff of the constitutionalist forces declared that the report of the retreat of those forces recently was without foundation, and that Sun Yat Sen has ordered four new airplanes to proceed to the front for duty.

Berlin—In consequence of the enormous losses suffered in running the streetcars in Berlin the municipality has decided to suspend operation of the entire service. Notice will be given all employees that every effort will be made to resume operations at the earliest possible moment.

Paris—Premier Poincare, it was announced, will preside at the inauguration of a monument to the dead at Chassey, department of the Meuse, and later in the day will go to Gondrecourt for the unveiling of a tablet commemorating the arrival of the first American troops on the battlefields of France.

Moscow—According to latest information from Russian sources in the far east, Japanese quarters are showing uneasiness over the forthcoming Russo-Chinese negotiations. Meantime, it is alleged, the exploitation of the oil resources in northern Sakhalin is being speeded up, under protection of the military. The oil is reported to be of the highest quality.

Dublin—The anniversary of the death of Michael Collins was observed with military displays in Dublin, Cork, Waterford and other cities. The parade in Dublin was the greatest military spectacle ever seen here. All branches of the service were represented in a line nearly ten miles long. When the head of the procession passed the cenotaph, Miss Kittie Kiernan, to whom the late leader was betrothed, place a wreath on the tomb.

London—Reports that Sir Auckland Geddes, British ambassador to the United States, will not return to Washington, have been revived because of the precarious condition of his eyes. While the government will not concede the likelihood of his retirement the impression prevails in well informed political circles that the government authorities are casting about for a suitable successor.

London—All except a few bars of the $30,000,000 worth of gold bullion which dropped to the ocean bed when a German submarine sunk the Laurentic off Donegal, Ireland, have been recovered by divers who since 1918 have been carrying on their labors 90 feet below the surface of the sea. The 30 bars remaining in the wreck, it is expected, will be brought up within a fortnight.

Berlin—Senator Thomas Sterling of South Dakota and Representative Theodore Burton of Ohio, who arrived here from the interparliament conference at Stockholm had an unpleasant experience on a German train when monocled monarchists insulted them because they were foreigners and communists threatened them because they were well dressed. Mr. Burton said he found Germany more quiet than reports abroad indicated, but he noticed considerable uncertainty, restlessness and black pessimism.

Moscow—Following six weeks of rain and hail storms, a heavy snow has ruined the crops in the mountain districts of Daghustan in the Caucasus, according to reports from that region, and the population of nearly 1,000,000 in the district is threatened with famine.

Vauville, France—Georges Barbot French aviator, flying in a motorless airplane covered 212 kilometers, approximately 132.5 miles, over an officially measured circuit. This is a record distance for this type of machine. Barbot remained in the air 6 hours, 4 minutes and 21 seconds

GERMAN MONARCH POSSIBLE IN YEAR

Washington Regards European Situation With Gravo Concern.

CONGRE'SM'N PREDICTS

Menacing Situation in Germany and Throughout Europe Likely to Lead to Radical Changes, Is General Belief Here.

Washington.—The internal situation in Germany, notwithstanding recent indications of some improvement, is regarded in Washington with grave apprehension.

Most American officials for obvious reasons have refrained from discussing the question publicly, but many members of the house and senate and others who have studied European conditions at first hand this summer agree privately that the outlook is disquieting. In broadly representative diplomatic circles, too, there is a pronounced and almost universal note of discouragement. Some representatives of countries not concerned directly with German reparations regard a crash in central Europe as inevitable.

In diplomatic circles a relaxation of the pressure in the Ruhr is not expected because of what is regarded as an inflexible public opinion in France and even in Germany, said to preclude any marked change of policy on outstanding questions at issue. Any such change was held to be impossible long before Premier Baldwin made his initial statement on reparations in commons in what has been regarded as an effort to save central Europe from disaster.

Will Follow Harding Policy.

In these circumstances it has been made clear since President Coolidge assumed office that there appears no course open to the Washington government with respect to Europe other than the one mapped out under the administration of President Harding. The wisdom of that policy is regarded at both the White House and the state department as already confirmed by events. There is no doubt Washington officials want to do what they can to help, but the very elements which constitute the greater danger signs abroad are regarded as increasing the peril of any effort toward mediation.

Just what form developments in Germany may take is regarded here as highly uncertain. In diplomatic circles, at least, the degree of danger is believed to hinge upon the food situation. Although there may be ample stocks, it is pointed out that these may not be generally available for use because of serious transportation and currency difficulties. An acute shortage, it is expected, might produce a public desperation leading to the gravest developments.

Monarchy Predicted.

Restoration of a monarchy in Germany within a year is predicted by Representative Aswell, Democrat of Louisiana, who presented to President Coolidge some observations gained on a recent European trip.

"The situation in Germany and for that matter throughout Europe, is most menacing," said Representative Aswell, after his conference. "The German political leaders realize the danger will come with the advent of winter, and with no coal, a greatly depreciated currency, and a short supply of food in the city. My prediction, based on conferences held with these leaders, is that Germany one year from today will be a monarcy with a kaiser at its head, having in the meantime passed through a revolution led at the outset by the communists."

DAKOTANS TO HELP DEDICATE

North Dakota Masonry Will Be Represented at Washington Memorial.

Fargo.—At least 30 North Dakota Masons will leave Fargo for Washington, D. C., in a special car Friday, October 26, to attend what Masons say will be the greatest event in American Freemasonry—the laying of the cornerstone for the great George Washington Memorial temple at Alexandria, Va.

The North Dakotans are to reach Washington October 28 and the laying of the cornerstone in Alexandria, which lies just across the Potomac, will be November 1.

The memorial to George Washington, himself a Mason, is to be the greatest ever erected, according to members of the order.

Ralph L. Miller of Fargo, grand master for North Dakota, will assist in the ceremony.

Equity Company Bankrupt.

Fargo.—Voluntary petition in bankruptcy has been filed by the Equity Co-operative Packing company in United States district court by C. W. Richert, president and general manager, after the company had been adjudged bankrupt by Emerson H. Smith, referee in bankruptcy. Liabilities were listed at $155,041.91, and assets at $142,573.60. Receivership proceedings, temporarily held in abatement pending a decision by the state supreme court were automatically dissolved by the filing of the petition.

KILLS MAN AFTER ATTACK ON WIFE

Canadian Mill Manager in Hand-to-Hand Death Struggle With Crazed Chinaman.

MADE MAD BY THUNDER

Aldergrove, B. C.—Full details of the struggle between Anthony Rerrie, mill manager, and Yung Sing, an insane Chinese mill hand, which resulted in the death of the oriental, were brought to light at the inquest. The verdict of the coroner's jury was that Mr. Rerrie had fired in self-defense.

Wakened about 4 o'clock one morning by hearing some one prowling about the house, knocking at the doors and windows, Mr. Rerrie got out of bed and went to investigate. While walking from the rear of the house toward the front he heard Mrs. Rerrie scream. Rushing into the house, he was horrified to see a Chinaman attacking her. He had already torn a part of the clothing from the bed, and Mrs. Rerrie was struggling with him.

Husband Attacks Chinaman.

Mr. Rerrie jumped on the Chinaman, who, it transpired later, had been driven insane by the thunderstorm the previous evening and who was possessed of the terrific strength of a lunatic. The oriental turned and clinched with the white man, and together they struggled and fought about the bedroom.

Struggled and Fought.

Mrs. Rerrie was only recently operated upon and has been in a very nervous condition since her illness. Their small daughter, nine years old, hearing the struggle, came to the aid of her father, using her ineffective efforts to assist him by pounding the Chinaman's back.

"Get your revolver!" screamed Mrs. Rerrie, and, throwing the Chinaman from him, the lumberman sprang to the bureau, where he kept his gun. As soon as he loosened his hold the maniac again attacked Mrs. Rerrie.

Fires Several Shots.

The husband jumped at him again, and struck him. The lunatic was driven toward the door. Rushing him, Rerrie forced the Chinaman outside, and followed to drive him off the premises. The Chinaman turned and ran, and Rerrie fired several shots into the ground to awaken the mill workers and effect the capture of the lunatic.

After running a short distance, Yung Sing wheeled about and, picking up a piece of 2 by 4 timber, rushed at the white man, with the heavy stick uplifted. Rerrie fired low. The bullet struck the Chinaman in the abdomen and severed an artery.

Yung Sing stumbled and fell when struck. It was evident at once that his life was in danger.

In the meantime Mrs. Rerrie had staggered from her bed to the telephone and was frantically endeavoring to rouse the police. This was accomplished, as her husband came back and sent a message for a doctor.

Sleeping Man Falls Forty Feet, but Only Gets Bump

While sitting on the stone rail of a bridge at Excelsior Springs, Mo., Ernest Boyer fell asleep and fell 40 feet on the soft ground, his head just missing a projecting iron pipe.

A patrolman, thinking Boyer was dead, notified an undertaker and descended with him to the place where Boyer lay. On their arrival Boyer jumped to his feet, having suffered only a bump on the head.

Baby Wrapped in Gum Tape.

Newark, N. J.—A month-old baby, wrapped from head to foot in adhesive tape was found along the railroad tracks near here. The infant was thrown from a train, but the tape saved its life, it is believed.

Hunter Killed in Mistake for Deer.

Houlton, Me.—When a jack light on his cap was mistaken for a deer's eye at night, Nathan Orr, was shot and killed by Charles Knapp. Knapp fired at the light, and Orr was killed instantly.

HIS WORK IN COMMUNITY

Minister Might Not Have Been Flattered at Jean's Understanding of His Duties.

Mother and Jack were walking home from the morning sermon with serious mien and in thoughtful frame of mind. Not so, Jean. Her mind was on earthly things—the flush of her bright red coat, the shadow and play of the wavy feather on her best Sunday bonnet—but she caught Jack's words to his mother.

"Isn't Dr. Dunkel wonderful, mother?" he was saying.

"Yes, Jack, he is," was her response.

"Oh, Jack," loftily interrupted Jean, with a sidewise toss of her head and a knowing half-smile. "Why do you call him 'Dr. Dunkel'? You know he doesn't cure us when we are sick."

Mother came to the rescue. "There are two kinds of doctors, Jean," she said. "One cures our bodies and makes them well. The other cares for our souls."

"Oh, he mends our shoes, doesn't he?" and she skipped on ahead as lively as before.

—11—

"The wind is capital—although making English turn we shall have to pull-haul, doubtless. But who can pursue save one of the steamboats—and by the time the uproar goes that far—Bien!—what of it?"

"A shot from an eighteen-pounder and the teakettle will hesitate," growled Gorgio. "All is ready—waiting Monsieur de Almonaster's word for the river signal."

The swarthy-skinned marketmen laughed; their roving glances went from the idle croons at the stalls to the load of cabbages under which there protruded one rusty cutlass hilt which Gorgio now frowningly pushed back. Then he was on with his droning cry about the dark streets of the Vieux Carre.

Meantime, at the Ball d'Orleans, the fun was rising fast. The door, the deep-set windows, the low galleries about the hall, were filled with onlookers; while to the strains of a waltz from Les Amours du Diable sensuous women and fiery-tempered men whirled in giddy mazes. Frowned on by the aristocracy, and taboo with the haughty ladies of the Vieux Carre, yet few there were of the young fashionables who would not steal, now and then, to the revel. There arose the quarrels that led to the duellos out under the Oaks; there, on an instant, the scene might change from laughing, and men rush together in affray; or two of the hot-tempered dons of the old Spanish or French régime, or some restless Kentuckians, down-river, would exhange the cards that meant rapiers or pistols at sunrise.

The young Count de Almonaster was in a chaffing coterie at the vestibule. The town had been agog with this story about him today.

"Ho, Raoul!" cried De Marigny, "where is your new house guest?"

"Yes—Raoul, the proud, entertaining this gallant Saz-a-rac! Better you had counted the family silver ere you put him to bed! They say Lafitte put out from your hospitality to the Barataria swamps—and at once a lady disappears from her hotel!"

"I am just back from a search myself. It was a shabby trick, but—"

The laughing gallants crowded nearer. "Lafitte turns up, and at once Louisiana is in an uproar! The British consul fumes, and Colonel Carr denounces. His lady may well be in the tropics within a week!"

"Bah!" shouted the Chevelier de Montrieul, "here is Alderman Dominique, who was once buccaneer himself! I say, we are unworthy gallants! Under the Spanish governors we would all be out seeking to rescue the lady ourselves, rather than leave such romance to the authorities."

De Marigny twigged Raoul's laced cuff; "Come, we have a new beauty. I shall introduce you for one of the new contre-danses Anglais."

"I," retorted Raoul reservedly, "do not dance here, as you know."

"Why so haughty? A round, and we are all off to the Seraphine."

Raoul started. This would never do; the conspirators must seize the clipper before the party assembled on her decks. He was relieved to see Captain Bossiere—already chosen to command—come on smiling, waving a hand to the merrymakers.

"Messieurs! Is it not enough here? We shall make a long night on the Seraphine and discuss affairs. Ah, Monsieur Dominique, I am glad you are with us! And Monsieur de Almonaster, who has been won over at last to support the Napoleon expedition!"

Many curious and admiring eyes, indeed, were leveled on the tall, bronzed young man who followed to the bar. Old Dominique winked again at him. A buzz of talk ran around concerning these two who surely must know something about Lafitte which they chose not to disclose to the authorities.

De Marigny shouted good-humoredly to Raoul:

"We are discussing the flag, Monsieur! A flag for the Seraphine! La Barre insists it will not be good taste to fly the American colors now, with England and the United States at peace. Under what flag, Captain Bossiere, do we put to sea?"

Good Captain Bossiere pulled his whiskers and beamed on the laughing gallants. "That is to be settled. Also, tonight, who is to be second in command."

"And third!"

"And fourth!"

"And," bawled another youth, "I trust to be at least a midshipman!"

The flushed and merry Creole blades gathered closer. The costliest champagnes were spilling over bar and tables. Under the glitter of the crystal lamps, where the press was deepest, Captain Bossiere perspired and tried, in vain, to address them. From this laughing melee Dominique, the alderman, velvet-clad and rotund, found way and came to De Almonaster's side.

"And tonight," he muttered, "I wander about, a respectable official of the city—and the sea is calling. As to Jean," he said with pointed abruptness, "what do you know, Monsieur?"

The young aristocrat could not be sure of how much the city conspirators had imparted to the complacent Dominique. He therefore shrugged indifferently: "The old fox is on familiar trails, Monsieur Dominique—do you know of any reason for absenting yourself tonight?"

"Eh?" queried the alderman darkly. Then, a hand on his shoulder. Jarvis, his portrait painter of the Vieux Carre, for once cleanly arrayed in velvet, beruffled stock and a high hat! Jarvis, incredibly sober. Nodding to Alderman Dominique, he drew Raoul aside.

"The fools found I was right, eh? A lady stolen from our streets—and this Sazarac of the packets is my old captain." He smiled with some twitching pathos about his nervous lips. "Jean—and my lady. Ah, one might have guessed!" He stopped abruptly.

"What is it, Jarvis?" Raoul stared at him. Plainly, he knew nothing of Mademoiselle Lestron's disappearance upon the English bark, tonight slowly beating a way out of the Belize pass to the open Gulf.

"Sober," muttered the jester. "That is it. I have vowed to keep sober for her sake from half-past eleven to quite one o'clock . . . It was about the hour of the camellia. Ah—to a staircase fellow in the moonlight!"

His friend laughed curiously, but without understanding. "Every night" —continued Jarvis—"half-past eleven to one. It is a disastrous intermission, however. I have to arrange all my hours, both at the studio and the grog shops. Romance should keep better hours." He sighed: "Love has come like a flame to my darkness, Monsieur! I—who would have laid my dull head as a stone among the other cobbles for her footstep—and asked nothing! She has gone . . . they whisper, willingly, perhaps, with him. Ah, to play the part of Sazarac—one hour!"

"What are you driving at?" queried Raoul.

"This Sazarac—" muttered Jarvis. "I regret he was not himself. I would have had an affair at the Oaks. Can you imagine me, sober, well-arrayed and speared through the stomach because of a woman? I cannot. On second thought, of course not. The time, Monsieur—"

Many Curious and Admiring Eyes, Indeed, Were Leveled on the Tall, Bronzed Young Man Who Followed to the Bar.

"The time—" De Almonaster started, shot a suspicious glance at the town's jester. But Jarvis was not, apparently, in the conspiracy.

"To put aside my romance and resure my bottle. D—n!—not yet midnight" He turned impatiently and gnawed his cuff. "Jean has taken my lady— Eh, well! One's friend is one's friend!"

Raoul watched the mountebank's drawn, hungry face at the end of the crowded bar. Then he wandered to the street vestibule. The time for the attack must be approaching. Somewhere along the west bank of the Mississippi, but a few miles above, the Baratarians must be gathered for the embarkation and the silent drift downstream. Now that he had time to think soberly of it, Raoul's mind stumbled over the uncertainties of the mad venture. He knew that, about the city, two score of adventurers had armed and awaited secretly to aid the men of Johannes and Nez Coupe from the deep swamp. Seizing the unguarded ship at her moorings, even with the revel about her, would not be difficult. It was the next step when an unfavoring wind might leave the Seraphine helpless and adrift in the lower reaches of the river.

De Almonaster watched the faces of his familiars about the ballroom. He had been chaffed enough for his entertainment of the mysterious Sazarac out of the West. But even now the heedless youth were forgetting it. The affair Lafitte was being left to the authorities. The British Colonel Carr had already been courteously rejected from the gentlemen's company; the gentry, while most of them had but the merest hearsay about what the missing gamester, Sazarac, might have intended concerning Mademoiselle Lestron, could not endure Carr's infamous jest at Maspero's gaming-room. They believed, indeed, that the lady had fled of her own accord with the adventurer of the river packet, whom rumor said was Jean Lafitte. Eh, bien! It was not the first affair of women for Lafitte . . . there was the old story of the governor's lady when the Grand Terre chieftain was at his power.

Raoul saw, in the barroom, a score of tossing glasses upraised to some speech that Bossiere had concluded.

"The Seraphine," a dozen voices shouted, "and to the unknown flag she flies!"

The goblets clinked and broke; the air was a spray of crystal and champagne bubbles; then the laughing groups scattered. But about Captain Bossiere flushed youths clamored on.

"Devil take the dances! Monsieur Girod's banquet awaits us on the Seraphine. Let's finish the night there."

And a score of young men took up the cry. De Marigny came crowding to Raoul's side. "Come, there! You—Felix, La Barre—all of you! You can dance on the decks—but no women, mind! This is a secret session of the Napoleon plot!"

"Yes, and you with us, De Almonaster! You are a third backer of the enterprise since you took over the baroness' interests."

De Almonaster started as the jesting groups closed about him. It was but eleven o'clock! The conspirators across the river would never dream that the gentlemen-adventurers would quit the ball so early! He began to protest as the youth streamed to the street. But one glance at the gold-laced hat of the Seraphine's commander now leading the way, and Raoul whirled back and to the courtyard where the servants awaited.

At his low hail his groom came watchfully. "Teton, the ball is breaking up! With all speed the word to the market!"

The octoroon vanished silently. Raoul turned back through the ballroom, his heart beating wildly. He wondered if any saw his perturbation. It was too late to warn the Baratarians that the plans had changed. Already, far across the rue Royale past the cathedral to the Place d'Armes, the aristocrats were trooping, unarmed, save for their swords of fashion, to encounter unsuspectingly the desperate renegades of Lafitte summoned again from their deep swamp refuges.

"Madness!" the young man muttered. "They are ascending the gangway! The plot is lost! Sazarac will not dare lead his swamp bandits to face the gentlemen of the city already at their banquet seats!"

He lingered irresolutely and then went to the Plaza. If he could find one of the spies who had been all evening watching the course of events at the revel and passing the word, mouth to mouth, out to the upper levee so that the Baratarians across the river might be apprised, he could, even yet, ward off a disastrous failure. . . .

But nowhere did he find one whom he could trust as being in the conspiracy. The groups of idling market men had scattered from the stalls.

The crowd on the rue de la Levee, gathered to watch this outdoor revel of the gentlemen-adventurers of the Napoleon ship, was thickening. Along the roped path between these onlookers the gold hat of Captain Bossiere moved with the gallants cheering in his wake. The gay rosettes and lanterns festooning the ship's rigging reflected upon the yellow flood murmuring along her side.

"I must be seen with them," murmured De Almonaster. "It is a sorry joke. Sazarac dare not face this revel to seize a ship—no, not for all his loves!"

He found his place to the right of Commander Bossiere. De Marigny had started a song of the day among the flushed youths near him:

"Mo l'aimin vous
Comme cochon aimin la boue!"

"Ah!" shouted one, catching sight of De Almonaster; and he translated the doggerel for a young American ensign: "'I love you as a little pig loves the mud!' It must be Raoul, seeing that he loves the Barataria swamps."

Raoul smiled; but his glance was out from the quarter-deck awnings to the yellow, silent flood of the mighty river. Big honest Commander Bossiere, a real seaman oddly out of place among the laughing youths, was unsteady from the toasts he had drunk.

"And there," cried La Barre, "comes another guest who must love the mud, seeing that he frequently rolls in it!"

The guests shouted as another belated one came unsteadily down the carpeted gangway to the deck. Jarvis, it was, the town's profligate, whose hour's tribute to his lady had turned to Bacchus promptly with the clock. The first bohemian of the French quarter raised his hand. In it was a staff with folded colors. And behind him marched six grim fellows in tarpaulin hats, red shirts and the new tight pants of the period, cutlassed and pistoled, who, without word, took position along the rail, and came to a salute as Jarvis bawled a mocking order.

The flushed aristocrats stared, then cheered, when the mummer pirates broke to hoarse song, a Creole air of the day:

"Di tems M'sieu Lafitte
Ye te menin monde a la baguette."

The guests seized it in glee. Another gibe at the smiling Count de Almonaster.

Boots.

Father bought a pair of big boots in anticipation of the coming fishing season. The boots greatly interested Ann, his three year-old daughter, so one day when mother and father were preparing for a journey downtown, and mother was putting on her Russian boots, Ann turned to father and said.

"Daddy, why don't you wear your boots, too?"

STRANGER "WENT HIS WAY"

Bibu'ous Individual Probably Was Close to Making the Mistake of His Life.

During the latter years of his life Frank James, brother of Jesse James, did his utmost to avoid disputes that might lead to physical combat, the Kansas City Star says. Frank James, for many years, could be seen almost any day loitering in the lobby of the Laclede hotel, St. Louis, which was a gathering place of Missouri politicians before they moved over to the old Planters hotel.

One day Frank James was engaged in conversation by a bibulous, loud talking stranger. The man indulged in a tirade against Missouri, mentioning the "James boys" as samples of her citizenship. When the stranger concluded an ominous silence fell over the crowd.

"I am Frank James," came slowly in reply. "I know of no way to keep a buzzard from flying over my head; but I do know how to keep them from roosting in my hair."

Witnesses recall that the stranger, greatly sobered, tarried no longer than the speed limit would permit.

Electricity in North Lands.

Scandinavia, as a group of three different countries, has for many years been working on the problem of transferring electrical energy from Norway and Sweden to Denmark. An important report is now ready and three national commissions have it in hand. The next report will go to the three governments. It is understood that projected plans can easily be carried out both technically and commercially, but at the same time there will be needed an immense sum of money.

Something to Be Thankful For

Dancing on the sidewalk, a little girl sang merrily:

"Higgledy piggledy my black hen
She lays eggs for gentlemen."

A sedate pedestrian paused to listen, nodding his head approvingly.

"I am glad to hear it," he remarked. "Evidently no profiteers will get hold of her product."

MRS. BUTLER'S ACHES AND PAINS
Vanished After Using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound
W. Philadelphia, Pa.—"When I cleaned house last April I must have overlifted, for after that I had pains and aches all the time and was so discouraged. I could hardly do my own housework, and I could not carry a basket of groceries from the store nor walk even four or five squares without getting terrible pains in my back and abdomen and lower limbs. I went to visit a friend in Mt. Holly, N. J., and she said, 'Mrs. Butler, why don't you take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?' My husband said that if it did her so much good for the same trouble, I should try it. So I have taken it and it is doing me good. Whenever I feel heavy or bad, it puts me right on my feet again. I am able to do my work with pleasure and am getting strong and stout. I still take the Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, and am using Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash."—Mrs. CHARLES BUTLER, 1233 S. Hanson St., W. Phila., Pa.

Too Technical for Women.

An English court released three women from jury service the other day because, as was explained from the bench, the evidence in the case on trial was of too technical a character for them to comprehend.

Have You a Bad Back?
You can't be happy when every day brings morning lameness, torturing backache and sharp, cutting pains. So, why not find the cause and correct it? Likely it's your kidneys. If you suffer headaches and dizziness, too—feel tired, nervous and depressed, it's further proof your kidneys need help. Neglect is dangerous! Begin using Doan's Kidney Pills today. Thousands have been helped by Doan's. They should help you. Ask your neighbor!
A Minnesota Case
Mrs. Oscar Amundsen, Fosston, Minn., says: "I had a steady, dull ache across my back and mornings I was lame. I knew this trouble was all caused by my kidneys, so upon the advice of a friend I started using Doan's Kidney Pills. When I had taken about six boxes, I was feeling good again and could do my work without any pain."

MINNESOTA STATE FAIR

AND

Northwest Dairy Exposition

September 1 to 8

THE $150,000.00 entertainment program planned for the 1923 Minnesota State Fair and Northwest Dairy Exposition is easily the most stupendous bill of its kind ever contracted by any fair in America. Read over a few of the attractions:

Seventeen Spectacular Circus Acts. Everyone New and Novel.

Lillian Boyer in her Thrilling Change from a Speeding Automobile to an Airplane, Climaxed by Wing Walking and Parachute Drop.

Automobile Races Featuring World's Greatest Pilots, including Sig Haugdahl and his famous 3-mile-a-minute racing car. Three days, September 1, 5 and 8.

200 harness and running horses competing for Purses totaling $22,000.00, entry money added. Four days, September 3, 4, 6 and 7.

Auto Polo, America's newest and most dangerous sport.

"Battle in the Clouds" each night by two veteran "aces," Lieutenants Brock and Faulkner.

Fireworks spectacle, "India", featuring performing Elephants and a Cast of 700 Persons amid tons of exploding fireworks.

Dozen famous bands and orchestras.

Midway featuring twenty-three big attractions, recruited from all parts of the world.

Scores of Educational Exhibits, valued at millions of dollars, featuring the Northwest Dairy Exposition, Boys' and Girls' Club Work; Mammoth Livestock and Poultry Show; Eighty Acres of Farm Machinery, and a thousand and one other attractions.

Communication

Have we the people of Holt and community stopped to consider the welfare of our telephone system? Have we stopped to think what it would mean to us to be without the service of the telephone? A telephone system can not exist without the proper kind of support and just such a support is needed at the present time if Holt is to retain its telephone service. We should not be content with the thought that the officers can do all the work. We need more people who are willing to make use of the necessities of the telephone, pay their dues and support it properly. The dues are so nominal that it should not be considered beyond our means.

What if you should suddenly need the doctor with no telephone within 13 miles? One trip for the doctor would pay your dues and possibly save a life. Consider these things and lend your hearty support to the telephone. It is not a luxury, it is a necessity of the present day.

—12—

"'In the days of Lafitte the world was straight as a switch,'" translated De Marigny for the benefit of a young American lieutenant, "and, look you, Jarvis unfolds the pirate's flag. Another crack at Raoul's new friend—the famous Sazarac!"

For the artist, as his amateur buccaneers roared their chantey, shook free the colors, and planted the staff by Bossiere's table. A black banner upon which was a grotesque skull and cross-bones. Even Bossiere was convulsed with laughter at the grimacing Jarvis' antics. Then he uprose, glass in hand.

"Well, then, to the buccaneers, my good Jarvis! The old cry: 'A-Barataria! A-Barataria!'" And then the old seaman seemed to stare curiously at the nearest of the pirate mummers. Raoul's eye was on him; the young man caught a covert glance from Alderman Dominique. But the shouting tables saw nothing wrong. De Marigny was up and roaring.

"A flag! A flag, for the Seraphine! A royal jest for Bonaparte when we scale the cliffs of St. Helena, hale him to sea, and run up the old colors of the free rovers! Ho, Jarvis, this is a hit!"

A group was about the artist, dragging him to a wine cask to mount and speak. But suddenly a new uproar burst from them all. One of the red-shirted masqueraders had sprung to the rail, seizing the black flag to wave it as he ran. And his song burst forth—there seemed some new, warning accent to the thing:

"Di tems M'sieu Lafitte—"

Above the hubbub De Almonaster's nervous senses caught a sound over the rail. His covert glance to the yellow river showed a deeper shadow, then the flash of oars. He found Alderman Dominique staring at him hastily. Then, turning, he heard bare feet pattering along the wooden slope of the levee. But even when the first of a curious crew appeared at the gangway among the crowding servants, hustling them aside, the revelers on the deck did no more than roar appreciatively.

"Ho, Jarvis! More of your jesting! Faith, how many—"

Then De Marigny stopped. Gorgio, the crayfish seller, was unwarping a mooring line that held the Seraphine in the tide. And a huge mulatto leaped from rail to deck; there came a flash of a cutlass from another figure.

"De Almonaster!" cried La Barre, "that is your hostler, Teton! This is not good taste!"

And suddenly, with a roar, a score of burly forms rushed the rail and swept among the guests. Forward came a rattle of poles and blocks. A shouted order from old Johanness of the swamp; and the bow of the clipper was sheering off the wharf. A startled silence fell. The richly appareled gentlemen were staring as the Seraphine's bow caught the slow current. De Almonaster grasped Dominique in turn.

"They are here!"

The two caught sight of a tall cloaked figure that had sprung to the quarterdeck and turned calmly to watch the melee. Captain Bossiere had leaped up shouting:

"Lafitte! 'Pon my soul—the bandit!"

Then from the barefooted fellows arose the old cry of a decade agone: "A-Barataria! A-Barataria!"

"Off with them!" roared old Bohon, "to the work, bullies!"

The elegant young De Marigny, in his evening clothes of broadcloth and silk stockings, was lifted and hurled over the rail to the muddy levee. A sword flashed in Villeret's hand, and he was seized and thrown from the deck. La Barre sprang to the shrouds with a warning cry to the servants, but he, too, was propelled off. And with yells and laughter the Baratarians rushed upon the retreating guests of the Napoleon ship. Overpowered, borne back, the struggling gallants fought, but one by one the brawny hunters and fishermen of the chenieres threw them from rail and deck. Tables were overturned, the awning poles broken, lanterns flared up smokily; and over the battle the one-time commander of the black Petral watched calmly. The pressure brought De Almonaster almost against him.

"Jean!" he whispered; "you dared, then?"

But a hand clutched frantically at Raoul's sleeve. De La Vergne was borne past in the embrace of two lusty fellows. "A moi!" cried the youth. "Raoul, we are attacked!"

"Nom de Dieu!" muttered Raoul. "Nez Coupe, do not injure him!"

"Over with him!"

There was a splash in the batture mud. The ship was swinging wide in the river flood. Jarvis came reeling aft, staring back at his late fellow-guests and bon-vivants. Already ahead came the snap of a loosened jib. Johanness, the bo'sun, was shouting orders to fellows who were manning the fore-rigging. At the wheel stood Beluche, one-time admiral of Cartagena, looking up to the break of the canvas. And even as De Almonaster gasped to see how swiftly the plotters had worked, each to an appointed station, the last of the youth and chivalry of La Nouvelle Orleans went over the side to the levee mud.

Save one. Jarvis, the wit, had seized his hand-painted Jolly Roger and shook it toward the city. Then bewilderedly he looked again at Lafitte.

"Jean! What is this jest!"

"Next time you seek to amuse the gentry of New Orleans," cried Johanness, "do not allow Gorgio to choose your players!"

Jarvis approached the master of the Seraphine.

"It might be of interest, Monsieur Sazarac, why I am here, why my fat friend, Dominique, is here?"

"My good Jarvis, I wish you were ashore—you and the councilor at least. This is a serious venture, sir. We are to the rescue of the English lady."

The painter stared at him: "Why, I thought she—you—she did not flee with you after all? I may see her again?"

"It lies with the winds of chance. You are set on a mad venture, sir."

Jarvis poured him more drink unsteadily. His captain stood frowning at the long tables on the banquet deck. Already along them wild spirits of of the crew were cracking bottles and making merry over the disordered feast which had been spread for the gentlemen-adventurers of New Orleans. The older men were working the ship safely in the broad reaches of the river on a following wind, but the others hardly gave way before the under-officers.

"Eh, well!" bawled the town's jester suddenly. "Ho, slimy gallants. Ho, drenched blades o' the opera!—tomorrow, to celebrate the sailing of the Napoleon ship there will be such a scrubbing and hanging forth of furbelows and ribbons as will keep the house mammies busied for a week! Who is in the mud, now—John Jarvis? Mo l' aimin vous comme cochon—!"

But after the laughter that followed him the author of it went aside to stare ahead into the dark. De Almonaster found him so, his pallor heightened, his cheeks twitching. The mimic seemed shaken with a fear as he watched the bloom of shadowy sail drawing him on to unknown venture.

"I am to see her, Monsieur—and she me?" he said plaintively.

"Monsieur Sazarac will rescue her by force if needs be, John."

The other nodded slowly: "Yes—Sazarac, always—Sazarac. Ah, name o' G—d:—to play one hour! To be the poseur—to have the lover's gesture, the pretty speech; and to tell men: 'Go there!—Come here!'—with a mere glance that they obey! Think of it! A Sazarac . . . Come, Monsieur, the cognac. It is the refuge, the adventure—and the dream. In the bottle I am Lord Sazarac—I swagger, I rescue—I love." He twitched his friend's sleeve dolefully: "She must never see me . . . I am the ragged ghost out in the shadows, Monsieur—where her eyes cannot follow." He turned away, the sardonic mood quite shaken from him. "Below—the emperor's chair, for Sazarac. The lady will come—for Sazarac. Sazarac—who does not exist save in her dreams! . . . Why should I not play Sazarac for her? What right has Jean Lafitte to this gallant, rescuing role before her eyes?"

CHAPTER IX

A Question of Diplomacy.

They had been a roaring, unruly lot forward until Beluche, as second officer, with Bohon and Nez Coupe, had brought discipline, at times with the threat of fist or marlinspike. The watches were picked and the mess organized, and the desultory plundering of stores and the finery left in disorder by the gentlemen crew of the Napoleon ship was sternly stopped. Indeed, three fellows who had a set-to with the rum at once, were in the brig by nightfall; and a trio more had broken heads. But when the Captain Jean, with Monsieur de Almonaster and Dominique, went on inspection during the second watch, they were greeted with cheerful and subdued respect.

The former second officer of the Black Petral muttered to his chief.

"There be sixty-four in all. Some old artillerymen of Jackson's day at Chalmette; some fo'cas'le lads who've sailed wi' David Porter and wi' Decatur against the Tripolitans; some escaped Britishers from press gangs—and there be a score of our old fellows, Jean. Men of Grand Terre, and of Galveston Island, some wi' the President's pardon—some not."

The gaunt, shifty-eyed John Crackley, stepped from the line. "We have made bold to ask, sir—under what flag this ship—"

A rumble of laughter stopped him. Aft, by the captain's companion, hung a stiff, painted banner already fraying in the gale. And by it, fast asleep, sprawled the artist-jester who had painted the thing to amuse the city of the Creoles.

But Lafitte stopped the levity. "We shall attend to that. We are on a venture the end of which will be disclosed to you in due time."

But when he had dismissed them to quarters, old Beluche voiced his doubts. "Not a ruffian of them all but thinks we are privateering again. As to Napoleon, they would roar with laughter; and as to this rescue of the English woman, well—you can lead them to that, but it is plunder that is in their minds."

The chief looked thoughtfully at De Almonaster. When they sat again over their brandy and coffee in the tapestried luxury of the emperor's suite, the young man adverted to it.

"We have the excuse, sir, that Mademoiselle Lestron was unlawfully seized out of the city. Only violent action could save her. She must explain the mystery of her abduction to clear us with the admiralties—"

"The watch already reports a vessel making south," grunted Beluche. "And the Genaron will be a clumsy lout in weather that this clipper loves. The mists kept the Englishman hid in the passes, but out to sea we can pick him up at our pleasure."

Old Dominique twirled his thumbs upon his stomach. He had declined to take any active part in the ship's hurried organization, pleading his gout and corpulence, but they had gibed him well.

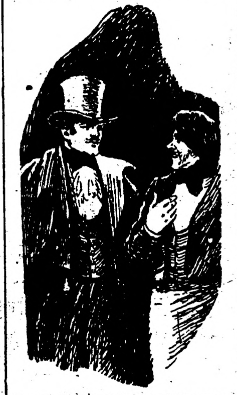
"If trouble comes of it—as it will," grinned Beluche sourly, "you will still be the worthy councilor of New Orleans, eh? Pummeled aboard and off against your will! Ho, Dominique!"

"And you may yet need an honest councilor to plead your cause," retorted Dominique. "And you get yourselves into admiralty court, the bigwigs will be hard to convince this is not open lawless piracy. The Captain Jean's love-affairs—eh, well! Can you get an advocate to speak them to the magistrates of Jamaica, or even in Charleston or New York!"

A lanky tousled form came reeling under the rocking cabin lamp.

"A magistrate!" chuckled Jarvis, "the rum, old gabbler—that is the prime magistrate! Since when did Dominique mewl of the laws?"

"Be still, Jarvis!" said Lafitte, "this is a serious council. The lady of the Genaron is to be rescued—without violence if we may. After that—"



"In the Bottle; I Am Lord Sazarac; I Swagger, I Rescue—I Love."

"Bonaparte!" cried Raoul eagerly, "that is our one chance for fame, for fortune and for extenuation! The exiled emperor slipped from under their noses and to sea on the fastest clipper that Yankee brains ever devised!"

"And after that, pray?" mumbled old Dominique.

News Briefs from All the State

Condensed Stories of Happenings of the Week in Minnesota

Willmar—Hubert Nelson, aged 22, of Svea, was fatally injured while plowing with a tractor on his father's farm. He died two hours later.

Luverne—When the public schools opened, H. C. Bell will enter upon the duties of superintendent for the 14th consecutive year. A full teaching corps has been obtained.

Virginia—Consumers of Virginia municipal heat will enjoy the lowest heat rates yet established this season, according to announcement made by the water and light commission.

Kenyon—Buildings belonging to the Gunderson Milling company, of Kenyon were sold to the Sheffield Milling company, of Faribault, it was announced. The new owners will operate it as a rye mill.

Mankato—More than 900 entries in the women's department of the Blue Earth county fair is the largest in the history of the fair. In the culinary department there are 500 entries, the largest record ever made.

Clara City—The 4 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Becker was fatally burned when his 12 year old sister tipped over a tin can in which gasoline had been poured to start a fire in a grove near their home.

Willmar—A contract has been let for the erection of a three story addition to the Bethesda Old People's Home in this city. The addition will be of brick construction and will provide 40 additional rooms for the home.

Duluth—Protesting innocence of any responsibility for brush fires at Hungry Jacks lake, north of Grand Marais, alleged to have started from a camp fire left burning, four boys from Des Plaines, Ill., were taken back to Grand Marais to stand trial for violation of state laws pertaining to carelessness with camp fires.

Winona—Henry M. Kinney, aged 71, retired Winona manufacturer, died at his home here of heart disease after a few days' illness. He had been secretary and general manager of the Winona Wagon company from its organization in 1880 until his retirement several years ago.

Slayton—A. J. Dixon, formerly of Iona, six miles southwest of here, who disappeared from his home on a farm near that place last January, has been located at Rock Rapids, Iowa, at which place he was found working in a garage. He assumed the name of Joe Davis. He states he does not know why he left home.

Lake City—Robbers who broke open a safe in the Farmers' elevator here obtained between $900 and $1,000 in cash and checks and escaped without leaving a clue. The offices of the Huntting Elevator company here also were entered but nothing was taken. The safe-crackers used tools taken from a railway section house

Thief River Falls—Another distinction comes to Thief River Falls and Pennington county. The first loan fully complete and the first money actually delivered to a farmer under the new rural cerdits law comes to this section. The final signatures are being attached and a customer of the Farmers and Merchants State bank of this city is receiving the money.

Fairmont—Losses by hail in Martin, Jackson, Faribault, Nobles and Murray counties will reach $100,000, according to figures compiled by Miss O. A. Tilliar, assistant secretary of the Northern Mutual Insurance company. Nobles county appears to have been hit the hardest of any in the southern part of Minnesota, with Jackson and Faribault reporting next highest losses. In Martin county the losses will approximate $15,000 to $20,000, Miss Tillia says.

Duluth—The National Hay Fever association will have its first social meeting of the season on Labor day. When A. L. Sarcone of Des Moines, one of the midwest golden rod haters, appeared before the city council and asked permission to conduct a dance at Lester Park pavilion, the commissioners at first were suspicious that some expert "kidding" was being done, but after the emissary of the Hay Fever association had convinced them that he was in earnest, permission was granted.

St. James—A bee fight royal was staged at the apiary of E. B. Woodard. A colony of visiting bees attempted to get into the hives of the home bees, but after a stubborn fight were driven off. Maddened by their defeat the bees attacked every living thing they could light on. Forty-two prize White Wyandot pullets in the pen nearby were stung to death. Mr. Woodard heard the commotion and fought the bees. He used a smoke screen and finally attacked them with a hose and water, and after soaking them down, subdued them. He was badly stung in the fight.

Hibbing—The Lake Superior Mining Institute elected officers at its annual banquet after a trip over the Mesaba and Vermilion ranges. The new officers are James E. Jopling, Ishpeming, Mich., president; William H. Schaeth, Painesdale, Mich., vice president.

Maple Plain—Anton Lundeen, missionary, who was taken captive by a band of robbers in China last spring, and the Rev. John Resnick of Minneapolis addressed delegates to the twelfth annual convention of the Minnesota Conference of Young People of the Augustana synod here.

Austin—W. W. Walker, for the last six years president of the Farmers and Merchants State bank here, has bought an interest in the First National bank at Medford, Ore.

Duluth—Mrs. William A. Cant, wife of Federal Judge Cant, died here following a paralytic stroke. Mrs. Cant had been a resident of Duluth for 31 years.

Waconia—The Waconia baseball team won the amateur championship of Carver county here when it defeated the Chaska nine, 8 to 6. It was the third straight victory over Chaska for Waconia.

St. Cloud—Carl D. Hibbard, Minneapolis, district manager of the United States Veterans bureau, will be the official representative at the laying of the cornerstone for the veterans' hospital here Sept. 5.

Slayton—At a special session of the county board Mrs. Annie Lowe was appointed to fill the vacancy in the office of county sheriff caused by the death of her husband, Sheriff James Lowe, oldest sheriff in the northwest.

Winona—A reduction of 17 cents in the price of gas, making the new rate $1.56, effective Sept. 1, for a period of four months, was announced here by the Wisconsin Minnesota Light and Power company. The new rate is the lowest charged here for 3½ years.

Currie—Fish in Lake Shetak and adjoining sloughs are dying in large numbers. Many more thousands of fish will die this fall and winter at Lake Shetak owing to the low stage of the water there.

Lake City—Robbers who broke open a safe in the Farmers' elevator here obtained between $900 and $1,000 in cash and checks and escaped without leaving a clue. The offices of the Huntting Elevator company here also were entered but nothing was taken.

St. James—A county rural nurses' board has been organized in Watonwan county with a director in each township. The purpose is to assist in the care of the sick and to get the services of the county nurse when needed. All women who can do emergency nursing work are listed.

Hutchinson—H. A. Jennings of this city was low bidder on the construction of the armory, winning from five Minneapolis contractors. Jennings' original bid was $64,677.55, but with certain revisions and choosing of alternates, the building will cost $51,000.

Winona—Captain James M. George, for 3½ years commander of D company, Fifth Regiment, Minnesota National Guard, of this city, has resigned his commission it was announced, because of pressure of work in the law firm of which he is a member.

North Branch—The Chisago County Bankers' association met here in their annual business and get-together meeting. New officers were elected as follows: J. E. Vanstrom, Chisago City, president; E. G. Magnison, North Branch, vice president, and A. T. Oberg, Lindstrom, secretary-treasurer.

Medford—Two men are dead as the result of a crossing accident here when a small automobile was crushed beneath a Rock Island passenger train. The dead are: John Black, aged 45, no relatives. Paul Hans, aged 30, died 10 minutes after reaching a hospital at Owatonna, parents living at Hayfield, Minn.

Duluth—A public "safety" mass meeting, the first of its kind in Duluth, will be conducted here under the auspices of the safety committee of the Duluth Chamber of Commerce. A special train will bring 400 employes of the Great Northern railroad at Superior.

Carlton—James Lawson, aged 26, Castana, Iowa, and F. Ichman, aged 25, Chippewa Falls, Wis., employes of the Phoenix Utilities company, were killed near here when the scaffolding around a new electric power transmission station collapsed. They were hurled 100 feet to the ground.

Rochester—Percy Engel, of Stewartville, was selected by a committee as the best all around member of the boys' and girls' clubs of Olmstead county, following the recent showing at the county fair. He will go to the International Stock show as the guest of the North Western railroad. Theodore Domke and Kenneth Southwick made the best scores in judging.

Duluth—The 12 hour day has been abolished at the steel plant at Morgan park, Duluth suburb, Samuel B. Sheldon, vice president and general manager of the Minnesota Steel company, said. The total number of men employed at the plant is 3,400 and none are employed more than 10 hours. Mr. Sheldon stated. Additional men have been hired to replace those whose hours have been reduced.

Winnebago—A severe wind and hail storm seriously damaged the corn crop in three sections around this city. The damage was estimated at $10,000 by John Rorman, of the First National bank of this city, who inspected the district. The hail was so heavy that it filled the gutters along the streets. In some places it assumed the proportions of a tornado and ripped the roofs off buildings. At one farm it was reported that 30 trees had been torn up. The hail stripped the leaves off the corn.

Raymond—Rev. and Mrs. C. H. Muse of the Methodist church celebrated their silver wedding. Members of the congregation were present at a reception in the home.

Clinton—A severe hail storm accompanied by a strong wind and heavy rain passed over this section. Corn and late flax was badly damaged.

St. Cloud—Two St. Paul men, who admitted smuggling liquor in from Canada, were arrested and their large touring car seized with 168 quarts of Canadian Scotch whiskey after a 60-mile-an-hour chase from Sauk Rapids to Parent, near here.

NAMES OF MARRIED WOMEN

Writer of Note Puts the Matter in a New Light—Right to Permanent Appellation.

The special demand of women for a permanent name of their own is wholly right, and has no faintest bearing on the matter of sex misconduct. In the old days when women had no social relationship whatever, and were to be distinguished only by which man they belonged to, as with a slave or a dog, it would have seemed absurd for them to claim a permanent name. Any question about them was not "Who is she?" but "Whose is she?"

Now, however, as women enter into one profession after another, really counting in social relationship, it is necessary to know them by name. Moreover, it increasingly often occurs that a woman may make a name for herself perhaps more widely known than that of her husband, so that he is disrespectfully spoken of as "Mr. Jane Smith." "Mrs. John Smith" we have not thought ignominious, but "Jane Smith" we do. So the man whose name is, so to speak, taken away from him, becomes willing that his wife should have one of her own—and leave him his! writes Charlotte Perkins Gilman in Current History.

Well, That Would Be Appropriate.

Mrs. Peabody was taking Mr. Peabody to task for his carelessness in his dress, and was on good ground, because Mr. Peabody doesn't use quite the best of taste. Mr. Peabody has put on a red tie and a white vest to go to a funeral. "If you were going to be attacked by cannibals," said Mrs. Peabody, "you should have on your salt and pepper suit."

Irrigation by Ice.

A new Texas scheme proposes a rifle to fire a series of ice bullets into the soil. Each bullet is directed into the root-system of an individual plant or cluster of plants. The machine itself will be adjusted on a tractor containing a refrigerator that will keep it perpetually loaded with ice-slugs. When the ice-slug has found lodgment near the root of the plant it will presently melt. In ordinary irrigation the greater part of the water finds lodgment at a distance from the plant root and either soaks into the earth or evaporates into the air. The new plan will prevent this waste. The chief drawback will be the high cost of manufacturing the ice.

Peace at Any Price.

Two women in a train coach argued concerning the window, and at last one of them called the conductor.

"If this window is open," she declared, "I shall catch cold and will probably die."

"If the window is shut," the other announced, "I shall suffocate."

The two glared at each other.

The conductor was at a loss, but he welcomed the words of a man who sat near. These were: "First, open the window. That will kill one. Next, shut it. That will kill the other. Then we can have peace."

Unproductive Labor.

Jud Tunkins says his hired man has got so interested in politics that about all the work he does is guess work.

COMFORT FOR BOY BATHERS

They Swim in Forbidden Waters and Then Dry Themselvese in Hot Air Grating Blast.

Those who enjoy bathing at Bailey's beach, Rye beach, Manhattan beach Coney Island and a dozen other places would possibly proclaim that their own favorite was superior to all others and dilate on its qualities and attractions. They would, however, be at a loss to produce evidence of a convenience such as is made use of by the 15 or 16 youngsters who enjoy a "dip" in Madison square.

These youngsters, all boys, take their bath fully attired—the possibility of the arrival of an unfriendly cop has to be at all times considered and the means of a hasty retreat provided—and so when they are finished their clothes hang in dripping folds around them, says the New York Sun and Globe.

This would be a decided discomfort but the Madison square bathers are well taken care of. They make immediate tracks for a large grating in the sidewalk at Broadway and Twenty-second street from which emerges a warm drying breeze untainted by cooking or other odors. Over this they stand and in a short while they are completely dried.

Moths.

Do you play the stock market? In June more than twenty million shares of stock changed hands on the New York exchange. It was the heaviest June trading of any year ever, excepting 1922, 1919, 1909 and 1906.

Surprising to many, that stock speculation was heavier back in 1906 and 1909, when the population was considerably smaller than now. It suggests that the "gambling fever" is not any more acute than it used to be. Probably it has even subsided. We doubt if there's as much betting and card playing "for keeps" as in the old days. Seems otherwise, merely because people gamble more openly now.

Palpably False.

"I heard a queer story in town yesterday," related Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge. "It was windy one day and a lady came around a corner, and a certain feller turned his head so quick he broke his neck."

"That's just like all the men—drat 'em!" returned Mrs. Johnson. "They'll look every time a woman—"

"But the story goes that this feller tried to look the other way, an—"

"Now, Gap, you ort to be ashamed of yourself, lying that-a-way before the children."

Breaking Up.

The Lawyer—I don't see what you two partners are quarreling about. It's a simple matter to share the assets and liabilities.

The Client—But the question is "who's to take the assets and who the liabilities?"

A SCHOOL GIRL'S SUCCESS
Everything Depends upon her Health
Mrs. George E. Whitacre Tells of her Daughter's Breakdown and How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her a Healthy, Happy, Strong Girl
Every mother possesses information of vital importance to her young daughter, and the responsibility for her future is largely in her hands.
When a school girl's thoughts become sluggish, when she suffers the consequences of wet feet, pain, headaches, fainting spells, loss of sleep and appetite, and is irregular, her mother should have a thought for her physical condition and try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which has proved a reliable aid to nature for just such conditions in so many cases.
This Mother Writes:
Mahoningtown, Pa.—"I would like to say a few words about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. About a year ago I thought it would be necessary for me to take my daughter out of school. She was losing weight, was nervous, and when she would come home from school she would drop into a chair and cry, and say, 'Mamma, I don't believe I can go to school another day!' I gave her Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now she is a healthy, happy, hearty, strong girl and weighs 120 pounds. She has no difficulty in doing her 'gym' work, and she works at home every night and morning, too. I am a mother who can certainly praise your medicine, and if it will be of any benefit you may use this letter as a reference."—Mrs. GEORGE E. WHITACRE, 621 W. Madison Avenue, Mahoningtown, Pa.
Every girl ought to be healthy and strong, and every mother wants her daughter to do well in school and to enjoy herself at other times.
Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a splendid medicine for young women just entering womanhood. Mothers can depend upon it. It is prepared from roots and herbs, contains nothing harmful, and has great power to tone up and strengthen the system, so it will work in a healthy and normal manner.
For nearly fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been used by women of all ages, and these women know its great value. Let it help your daughter and yourself.

QUAKE AND FIRE CLAIM 200,000

Early Estimate of Loss of Lives in Japan Upheaval Placed at Awesome Figure.

CAPITAL CITY HARD HIT

Hunger and Thirst Scourge Thousands as Relief Work Is Pushed Among Victims of Great Disaster—Foreigners Seem Unhurt.

London.—"All the European are believed to be safe, both in Tokio and Yokohama," reads a cable dispatch received by a London firm from an allied company in Japan.

Nagaski.—Prince Masayoshi Matsukata, former premier and lord keeper of the privy seal, has died from injuries suffered in the earthquake, according to a report received by the Nagoya railway bureau.

Grand Forks Woman on Scene.

Minneapolis.—Four Minneapolis women are believed to have escaped the earthquake and fire zone in Japan because of their summer residences at the Karizawa resort. They are Miss Evelyn Camp, Miss Elizabeth Evans, both of Minneapolis, Miss Anne Kludt of Grand Forks, N. D., and Minneapolis, and Miss Abbie Sturdevant of Minneapolis.

U. S. Embassy Destroyed, Rumor.

Osaka.—Nothing is known here of the fate of the embassies and legations at Tokio, though it is rumored that the British, American, and French embassies have been destroyed.

The naval ministry has officially announced the casualties in and around Tokio will approximate 150,000. The imperial gardens and every other place that escaped the devastating shocks and flames have been thrown open to refugees.

There is no confirmation of the premier's assassination rumor.

Osaka.—Almost the whole of Tokio and Yokohama have been destroyed by earthquake, followed by fire, and the loss of life now is estimated at from 120,000 to 200,000 or more.

Two hundred thousand homes have been burned down in the two cities. Water mains have been broken and food supplies destroyed by fire so that the people are near starvation and suffering much from thirst.

It is reported, but not confirmed, that the section of Tokio where most of its foreign population resided, is not greatly damaged.

Martial Law Proclaimed.

Martial law has been proclaimed and no one is allowed to enter the stricken district at the capital, although thousands whose friends or relatives resided there have gathered about the city seeking entrance that they may at least find the bodies of their loved ones.

Military and naval forces have been gathered at the imperial villa at Nikko, for use in controlling the situation, and other forces are on duty in Tokio itself.

Fire Rages in Yokohama.

Peking.—Wireless messages intercepted from the steamer Korea Maru in Yokohama harbor stated that fire was raging throughout the city and thousands of homeless are concentrating in the city parks. Food supplies for the victims were already beginning to arrive, it was said.

The message reports there was a second severe shock. The emperor and empress are reported safe at Nikko while the prince regent Hirohito, is said to be unharmed in Tokio.

100,000 Casualties at Yokohama.

San Francisco.—Food riots have broken out in Tokio, according to a radiogram received by the radio corporation from Iwaki station, 155 miles from Tokio. The gendarmerie is reported in these advices to have exerted the most strenuous measures to suppress the disorders, even attacking the rioters with their swords.

A number of Koreans were in the mob, the advices said.

The advices confirmed earlier reports of a great fire in Yokohama and an estimate that there had been at least 100,000 casualties there.

The fires, the message said were caused by or followed by the explosion of oil storage tanks in the city where reserves of fuel oil for the merchant and naval marine were kept.

Nogeyama, a better class residential section of Yokohama; Iseyama, another section where stood a notable statue of Io Naosuke, prime minister of the Shogun at the time Japan was opened to foreign intercourse, and Kamonyana, a third section, all were destroyed, leaving thousands in extreme misery.

G. O. P. Meet in Chicago.

New York.—Frederick W. U[illegible], treasurer of the national Republican committee, returning on the Leviathan from a trip abroad said there is no question but that Chicago will be the scene of the 1924 Republican convention. A majority of the members of the committee had expressed themselves in favor of Chicago, he said. San Francisco, which Mr. Upham said had made "a powerful bid" for the convention would not have a chance he declared.

WHEAT PRICES SHOULD GO UP

Questionaire by Farm Bureau Indicates Very Favorable Conditions.

FULLER MAKES ANALYSIS

Secretary of North Dakota Farm Bureau Says Storage Facilities Would Operate to Strengthen Wheat Market and Benefit Farmer.

There is every indication that wheat prices should go up according to H. B. Fuller, secrtary of the North Dakota Farm Bureau federation, who bases his conclusion upon information made public in a dispatch from Chicago on telling of the replies received on a questionnaire sent to 125 of the principal wheat counties of the United States.

These queries were sent out by O. E. Bradfute, president of the American Farm Bureau federation and from the replies Mr. Bradfute reached the following conclusions:

The wheat yield of the United States is considerably under crop estimates.

An appreciably larger percentage of wheat is being fed to livestock.

Farmers are preventing the annual dump by storage.

Kansas-Nebraska Crops Low.

Wheat production in Kansas and Nebraska is 50,000,000 bushels below normal, according to reports from the farm bureau officials in those states.

Not more than 85,000,000 of Kansas' normal yield of 115,000,000 bushels has been harvested, and a great deal of wheat is being held on which the intermediate credit bank is offering money when properly warehoused, President Ralph Snyder of the state farm bureau reported.

Much of the Nebraska crop which is of poor quality, according to Secretary C. B. Steward of the Nebraska farm bureau, is being fed to spring pigs.

Bankers Could Finance Storing.

"There is a wonderful opportunity for the bankers of the Northwest to aid the farmers in holding for a better price of wheat," Mr. Fuller declared after learning of the results of the questionnaire.

"Europe is buying wheat from hand to mouth. That is why there is no stability and no strength in the wheat markets despite a much lower wheat crop everywhere.

"They are anticipating the usual dumping process by the wheat farmers of the United States.

"If the bankers of the spring wheat section will get between the farmer and the man who is forcing collections ing will aid the farmer by financing him in storing his wheat there is every reason in the world to hope for a far greater return from this crop than is indicated at present prices.

May Feed Little.

"I do not believe that North Dakota farmers will be able to feed much of their low grade wheat to stock because there is such an abundance of corn, fodder, and other natural feeds this year.

"North Dakota does not yet have the stock to feed the wheat to. But this is evidently being largely done in the winter wheat area, where they have much more stock, and if we will find some way to prevent dumping, I think there is every reason to hope for a much better price."

VALLEY BUYS DAIRY CATTLE

Purchasing Tours to Dairy Show Is Planned by Different Communities.

Davenport, N. D.—Several carloads of dairy cattle will be brought into the Red River valley this fall from the dairy sections of other states, it is reported by local dairy boosters.

Delegations of valley farmers from several counties will make tours to the Northwest Dairy Show, which will feature the Minnesota state fair at the twin cities September 1 to 8.

I. S. Walhood, cashier of the State bank of Davenport announces that a delegation will make the trip from that section and that they expect to purchase one or two carloads of dairy cattle for that neighborhood.

"We are making wonderful progress in developing the dairy and diversified farming business in our community," said Mr. Walhood.

"Returns from cream checks at Davenport have increased remarkably in the past year or two. There are a great number of farmers in our community who are not worrying over the price of wheat this fall. They have fine corn fields, potato fields, alfalfa fields and in addition to dairy herds there are many fine groves of hogs and herds of beef cattle."

N. P. Earnings Increase.

St. Paul.—The Northern Pacific railroad's gross earnings on its lines in Minnesota for the first half of 1923 show an increase of more than $1,000,000 over the same period in 1922 according to the gross earnings report filed in the state tax commission office. The earnings for the road in the first half of the present year totaled $10,983,176, on which a tax of $549,159 will be due. For the like period a year ago the road's gross earnings were $9,939,521. The tax last year was $496,976.

BATHING SUIT AND SILK HAT

Mayor of English Town Stages Novel Ceremony in Dedicating New Bathing Pool.

A unique ceremony of inauguration recently took place at Grimsby, Lincolnshire, England, when the lord mayor was requested to preside at the dedication of a municipal bathing pool.

His honor appeared at the head of an impressive procession clad in official frock coat and silk hat. Everybody naturally expected the usual dedicatory oration inseparable from such functions. What, then, was the general astonishment when the mayor, standing beside the pool, doffed first hat, then frock coat, vest, trousers, shirt, shoes and socks and appeared arrayed solely in a rather ordinary bathing suit, in which garb he plunged bravely into the pool.

This unexpected dedication was hailed with resounding cheers which greeted the sporting executive when he emerged spluttering from the water.

Many Uses for Milk.

It is said that in France 20,000 quarts of skimmed milk a day is used for making substitutes for horn, ivory, amber and such things. The casein in the milk is precipitated by a chemical process and then mixed with formalin. This produces galalith, or petrified milk, a hard, elastic, insoluble substance that is easily worked. The French dairy experts think that the demand for skimmed milk for this purpose will be great enough to increase profit in the butter-making business by producing a ready market for the by-products.—Washington Star.

Took a Chance.

Secretary Hubert Killam, to whom falls the job of grading the papers of applicants for jobs in the city service, recently asked a would-be municipal chauffeur some technical questions concerning auto motors in the civil service examination.

"Which pole of the storage battery is grounded to the frame of the car?" was one of the questions to which the applicant replied, "The south pole."—Columbus Dispatch.

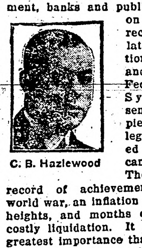
WORLD'S GREATEST BANKING SYSTEM

By CRAIG B. HAZLEWOOD
President Association of Reserve City Bankers



C. B. Hazlewood

Conceived in the spirit of common good, for the best interests of government, banks and public alike, based on broad and correct principles relating to the nation's currency and credit, the Federal Reserve System represents the greatest piece of economic legislation enacted by an American Congress. The System's record of achievement through a world war, an inflation period of dizzy heights, and months of serious and costly liquidation. It is a matter of greatest importance that very earnest and patriotic thought be given to the two questions: How far has the system succeeded, and in what particulars has it failed, to give our country as strong and as useful a financial system as human mind can devise?

The hope and expectation of those who framed the Federal Reserve Act that the machinery set-up for the origination, distribution and automatic retirement of currency issue, which should be entirely responsive to the needs of trade and the varying conditions of business, have been wonderfully well realized. Every possible effort must be exerted to preserve the Federal Reserve System from political alliance and to keep its powerful influence entirely devoted to the building up of the greatest banking system in the world.

The first bank of the United States was established in 1791 and failed to obtain a renewal of its charter in 1811 the opponents charging that the bank was a "money trust" controlled by foreigners, a tool in the hands of the Federalists, and that the act chartering the bank was unconstitutional. Note the use of the words "money trust." We have the idea that this is a modern term. The suspicions which animate the demagogue today have not changed in a century.

The second bank of the United States was chartered in 1816 and failed to obtain a renewal of its charter in 1831, the reasons being a widespread belief that the bank was unconstitutional, the hostility of the states the opposition of the state banks, the rise of democracy, and the envy and hatred which the poor always feel toward the rich.

Both banks functioned well and accomplished much for the country during crucial times. The downfall of both was caused simply and solely by attempts to place the determination of banking policies in the hands of political authorities.

The delicate handling of currency and credit, to the high end that the best interests of all may be served with special privilege to none, cannot be left to others than those who are competent through proven judgment and experience. The danger of politics in the Federal Reserve System is a real one; upon us is placed the grave responsibility of forever keeping the great system clean.

MAKING CAPITALISTS OUT OF WORKMEN

Festus J. Wade Says Anarchy Disappears With the Development of Thrift.

When the savings pass-book comes into a man's life to stay the red flag goes out. What the country needs is to bring about a condition whereby the man who works with his hands shall take the same interest in his affairs as the capitalist does in his. Probably the best way to do this would be to turn the workman into a capitalist. And this is exactly what he becomes when he saves his money and builds up a reserve fund. He remains a capitalist as long as he holds on to that money. The satisfaction of seeing his money reserve mount up will discourage the waster to take a layoff now and then. It will encourage him to work a full six-day week and thereby increase the labor-hours applied to production.

The American people can solve any problem they set themselves to. We provided for a sound currency when the greenbackers and inflationists were routed and the gold basis established. The Federal Reserve Bank was established and solved a problem for which most people thought there was no solution. A number of years ago, when there was a crisis or when a bank failed, we all used to shut up our vaults tight and let nothing get out. Instead of bettering conditions we made them worse. Now if failures occur, few people, except those directly interested, are disturbed.

Perhaps the most important problem of all right now is to do away with labor waste. It never can be done by preaching, by agitation or by force. It can be done by selling the workman on the idea of becoming a capitalist. This can be brought about by the right kind of bank advertising. Who is there to say that an advertising dollar bringing about this result would not be a constructive dollar?—Festus J. Wade.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Japanese Disaster Probably Is Unequa'ed in Loss of Life and Property.

TOKYO, YOKOHAMA, IN RUINS

America Leads in Relief for the Stricken Nation—British Fleet Ready to Back League of Nations Against Italy—Ruhr Passive Resistance Collapses.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

HISTORY does not record a disaster equaling that which has overtaken Japan, unless present reports and estimates are greatly exaggerated. Shaken to pieces by violent earthquakes and set ablaze by resulting conflagrations, Tokyo, the capital, is three-fourths destroyed; Yokohama, the chief seaport, is wiped out; numerous smaller cities and towns are in ruins, and the entire eastern half of Hondo, Japan's main island, is devastated.

Latest estimates of the casualties, received by the Japanese legation in Peking, put the dead at 300,000 or more, of whom 100,000 perished in Yokohama. More than a million persons are homeless, and the hunger and suffering in the afflicted region are intense. It is not yet possible to estimate the monetary losses, but those in Tokyo alone are put at about $10,000,000,000.

Many Americans and other foreigners—officials, business men and tourists—were caught in the disaster, and of course some of them were killed. However, the number of American fatalities was rather small. Among them were Consul Max D. Kirjassoff and Mrs. Kirjassoff, Vice Consul Paul E. Jenks at Yokohama, and Commissioner and Mrs. William Eadie in command of the Salvation Army forces in Tokyo. The Japanese emperor and the prince regent escaped death but several members of the royal family and of the nobility were killed.

United States Ambassador Cyrus E. Woods notified Washington Tuesday that he, Mrs. Woods and the entire personnel of the embassy were uninjured, but that the embassy buildings were destroyed.

It will be many days before complete details of the disaster are received, for one feeble radio station has been the sole means of communication between Tokyo and the outside world. It is known that the temblors, which continued several hours on September 1, not only shook down innumerable buildings, but also broke all the water and gas mains, and that fires started simultaneously all over the cities and raged for days. Bridges upon which thousands of refugees had gathered collapsed, and other thousands were trapped by flames in the parks, and there perished. Tremendous tidal waves followed the earthquakes and swept over the water fronts, and many vessels went down. It is reported that a considerable part of the Japanese navy was thus destroyed. The better residence section of Tokyo probably was saved, but Yokohama simply no longer exists. The entire city was burned to the ground, and the corpses lay piled in the streets. Kobe has become Japan's chief seaport, and will remain such for a long time. Along the eastern edge of the island the coast line is altered and the bottom of the sea has risen.

NO SOONER had the first reports of the catastrophe been received than steps for the quick relief of the stricken Japanese were taken in all civilized lands. Out of its great abundance the United States took the lead in this work of mercy, inspired by the prompt proclamation of President Coolidge and the equally prompt measures of our navy, army and state officials. Within a few hours flotillas of transports and destroyers laden with food and medical supplies, doctors and nurses, were steaming toward Japan from Manila and Chinese waters; all shipping board vessels in that part of the world were ordered to co-operate, and Admiral Anderson, in command of the Pacific fleet, hastened to Yokohama on his flagship the Huron and took temporary charge of the relief work. Later Brig. Gen. F. R. McCoy was made director general of American relief.

President Coolidge directed the State, War and Navy departments to "go the limit" in extending aid, and he announced that this was the business of first importance before the government. In accordance with the recommendation in his proclamation, contributions from municipalities, organizations and individuals are being sent to the American Red Cross, which has offered all its resources to the Japanese government. The Red Cross has called on the American people to give $5,000,000. The Salvation Army is undertaking to raise a like sum, and it got busy promptly in Japan, where it has a large number of stations and workers.

Along our Pacific coast, where the Japanese have not been popular, racial antagonism was forgotten. San Francisco, remembering the assistance given by the Japanese when the city was destroyed by quake and fire in 1906, was swift and generous in response to the call for relief. The Rice Growers' Association of California held practically the entire available supply of rice in the state for Japanese relief and its head announced there would be no advance in price and none would be sold to brokers. All the available fir and cedar lumber on the northwest coast also is held to supply the Japanese demands for rebuilding and shipping men said most of the freight steamers on the Pacific would be pressed into service to handle the lumber traffic. Forty-five million feet of the lumber is to be donated by the mills.

Some Japanese authorities, dismayed and discouraged, said their country had been set back a full generation; but the more optimistic assert that its recovery will be comparable to its emergence from obscurity into a first-class world power within a century. This view is taken by Baron Watanaba of Osaka, prominent financier and president of fifteen of the largest public utility corporations in Japan. Interviewed in New York, he said he thought the reports of material loss had been exaggerated and that the total damage might not exceed three billion dollars. He believes reconstruction in Tokyo and Yokohama cannot be accomplished in less than three years, and continued:

"The Japanese government has sufficient funds to undertake this by itself. In all probability an appeal will be made for internal loans, followed by external loans. There is no doubt that American capital and brains will be asked to assist in rebuilding the stricken area. It is too formidable a task for Japan to tackle single handed."

PREMIER MUSSOLINI one day last week declared to his cabinet, and to the world, that if the League of Nations insisted on considering and deciding the Italo-Greek embroglio, Italy would withdraw from the league and refuse to recognize its decision. He also asserted the seizure of Corfu was not a war measure, but that the Greek island would be held until Italy's demands had been satisfied. However, Greece's appeal to the league was taken up by the council in Geneva, and Signor Salandra, the Italian delegate, read a statement from Rome that indicated Mussolini was cooling down considerably. It was merely that "the Italian government irrevocably expresses the opinion that the council should not proceed to take the action requested by Greece."

The general belief was that the French and British representatives had induced the Fascist premier to go slow. The council, however, postponed action on the matter until the council of ambassadors should decide what it could do, and the latter body also delayed, pending further accord between London and Paris. Lord Robert Cecil is insistent that the league shall handle the affair, and it was said in London that the government had determined to back up the league with all the power of the British fleet, acting as the league's fleet, which might mean forcibly ejecting the Italians from Corfu. The British view is that the council of ambassadors is competent to deal with the murder of General Tellini and his staff but that the League of Nations is the only proper body to deal with the seizure of Corfu. Greece takes the same position and has offered to post a sufficient sum to cover whatever indemnities shall be fixed by the ambassadors. Italy has presented to Greece a formal claim for 20,000,000 lire for the cost of the military occupation of Corfu, Paxos and Antipaxos.

PASSIVE resistance in the Ruhr is admittedly at its last gasp, and the German government is moving toward an agreement with France which shall make possible the restoration of commercial relations and the resumption of negotiations concerning reparations payments. Chancellor Stresemann is acting with caution for his position is precarious, but he does not pretend that passive resistance has not collapsed, and he practically has paved the way to its abandonment. This may not be a formal abandonment by the government, for it is already going on in the Ruhr, where the workers and the other inhabitants find they have reached the limit. Stresemann says that only a Franco-German industrial union will solve the reparations problem, and France, it is said, recognizes that an economic accord with Germany is indispensable and will be the best form of guarantee against German aggression. For the present the negotiations for such an agreement are limited to private conversations between the German and French industrialist magnates.

Berlin was startled Wednesday by the statement that the chancellor had decided on the arrest and prosecution of Dr. Andreas Hermes, finance minister under Cuno, on a charge of manipulating a huge financial swindle. It was believed the case would involve Hugo Stinnes.

GOVERNOR PINCHOT was still working hard last week to bring about a settlement of the anthracite coal strike, and seemingly was making some progress. Each side was said to be moderating its demands in some degree. It seemed likely the operators would abandon their demand for arbitration, and that the miners would accept the 10 per cent wage increase for contract miners and would modify the check-off demand.

ONCE more the soldiers of the Grand Army of the Republic, survivors of the Civil war, have met in annual reunion, this time in Milwaukee where on Wednesday some ten thousand of them trudged bravely if haltingly in parade between solid walls of cheering, weeping spectators. Not one of these marchers was less than seventy years of age and many were forced to drop out of the line of march.

Gaylord M. Saltzgaber of Van Wert, O., was elected commander in chief.

The Woman's Relief corps also held its yearly meeting, and Mrs. Belle W. Bliss of Baraboo, Wis., was elected president.

AIR service experts who witnessed the trial flight of ZR-1, the navy's new rigid dirigible, at Lakehurst, N. J., expressed great satisfaction with the test. The huge ship was in the air for an hour and its working was closely observed from two airplanes that accompanied it. The dirigible will be taken to St. Louis for the international air races October 1 to 3.

PROHIBITION COMMISSIONER HAYNES asks for an appropriation of ten million dollars for federal work in enforcing the dry law, an increase of one million over last year. If he gets this sum, he plans an increase in the number of field agents and in the Washington and field headquarters staffs. Mr. Haynes had a long conference with President Coolidge the other day and it was stated the President was inclined to call a convention in Washington of governors to devise means for federal and state co-operation in the enforcement of the prohibition law.

AMERICA'S defenders of the Davis cup, Tilden, Johnston and Williams, decisively defeated the Australian team, and the international tennis trophy remains in this country for another year.

Condensed Stories of Happenings of the Week in Minnesota

St. Cloud—Sam Pandolfo, son of S. C. Pandolfo, was accidentally shot through the hand by a bullet from a rifle.

New Ulm—Ferdinand Goldick, aged 73, is in a hospital suffering from injuries inflicted by an enraged bull which attacked him.

Belgrade—The stage is all set and the various committees of the Belgrade Community fair are working overtime to make the fair a success.

Walnut Grove—A red Shorthorn cow on the R. Maldenhauser farm near Revere, gave birth to triplet calves. All three calves are healthy.

Virginia — Petitions seeking to amend the city charter, abolishing the police and fire commission and the water and light commission were approved by the charter commission.

Canby—Iver Hanson, 78 years old, a farmer, suffered fatal injuries when he was thrown down and dragged for some distance when his team became frightened and ran away.

Red Wing—Two homes were struck by lightning, many cellars were flooded and several streets were washed out here when Red Wing was visited by a cloudburst.

Pipestone—Mrs. August Carlson and her daughter, Christine Carlson, were burned to death when their farm home was destroyed by fire of unknown origin. Other members of the family were away at the time.

Winona—Fire resulting from an explosion of gasoline caused damage estimated at $3,000 on the John Hennesy farm near here. The gasoline was being poured from a barrel into a can in the farm ward with a lighted lantern 20 feet away.

Albert Lea—Three safecrackers got only $6.75 when they blew the safe in the Albert Lea State Creamery Experimental station. The office was wrecked and residents of the town awakened by the explosion.

Duluth—Freakish lightning in a thunder storm played havoc at Saunders, Wis., four miles south of Superior, Joseph Marshall, his wife and four children were injured when lightning struck their residence.

Duluth—Reginald Mapson, aged 23, son of Rev. and Mrs. J. C. Mapson, was fatally wounded when he was accidentally shot by a pistol in the hands of Charles Saaks, in a pawn shop.

Winona—Sixty-two men are to be employed in the car department of the North Western railway shops here, it was announced. The force will be restored to its strength at the time of the lay off a month ago.

Fort Snelling—Major Ivens Jones, United States army, who was injured playing polo at Fort Snelling, when his pony rolled on him, died at the Fort Snelling post hospital after a six day fight for life. He died without regaining consciousness.

Park Rapids—In accordance with its tentative ruling on Aug. 25, the federal power commission has issued license to the Pike Rapids Power company of Little Falls, Minn., for the construction and operation of a hydroelectric dam across the Mississippi river at Pike Rapids, about five miles below Little Falls.

Red Wing—Louis Irish, charged with illegal transportation of liquor, following an automobile accident in Red Wing Labor day, was released from the city jail for lack of a justice of the peace before whom he could be arraigned. Both justices were out of the city, making it impossible to arrange for bail. Irish, the police said, would be rearrested later.

Mankato—All city officials have been served with notices of an action against the city of Mankato for the recovery of $1,032 and costs filed by George S. Johnson of Waseca. The action was brought by Johnson to recover for alleged personal injuries received by his minor's son, Clifford, who, it is alleged, had one finger bitten off by a bear in one of the cages in the Sibley Park zoo.

Minneapolis—One automobile race driver is dead and another was reported in serious condition from burns, while a third, slightly injured, was recovering, as result of three spectacular accidents on the Minnesota State Fair grounds race track. Owen B. Van Drake, aged 31, Mankato, hurled from speeding car in 10 mile race and crushed against concrete wall. Joseph Lehman, aged 31, of Minneapolis, severely burned when car crashed into fence and burst into flames. Walter Stirling, aged 27, Wichita, Kan., veteran auto polo player, crushed when machine overturned. Between 30,000 and 40,000 persons crowded into the grandstands and standing on hills near the track, who had assembled to watch Sig Haugdahl's attempt to break the world's dirt track speed record, witnessed the tragedies.

St. Cloud—Howard Allen Orren, aged 9, died at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James K. Orren, 10 miles south of Rice, from injuries to his skull, which he received when he was kicked in the forehead by a horse.

Granite Falls—Seven years of work in her husband's law office earned Mrs. Mildred Bentley Lee of Granite Falls admission to the Minnesota state bar, although never has she attended law school. Mrs. Lee, in addition to her home duties, has helped her husband in his office and at the same time completed her law course.

FARGOAN TELLS OF FLEET WRECK

Fireman on Flagship Describes Pacific Disaster Which Cost 29 Lives.

SEVEN VESSELS CRASH

Destroyers Rush Onto Rocks Along California Coast While Hurrying South in Dense Fog; Orders Apparently Confused.

Santa Barbara, Calif.—R. A. Coffman of Fargo N. D., a fireman aboard the flagship Delphy, one of the seven United States destroyers which had crashed into the rocks a few miles north of here, is in a hospital here as one of the survivors of the wreck. In the disaster 30 sailors lost their lives and Coffman has given one of the most vivid descriptions of the affair.

"We left San Francisco early in the day for San Diego. We were going about 20 knots an hour and the seven ships were in single file. We headed the line, it was very foggy, and the seas were rising.

"At five minutes past nine we crashed into the rocks with a terrible shock. I was in my hammock and was thrown out. It was a terrible sight as I went on deck. There were our seven ships piled in terrible confusion all over the rocks. Men were screaming and yelling for help.

"They were jumping into the high waves and we could see them being smashed against the rocks by the big waves. Then they would disappear under the oil that covered the water from the sinking ships. One boat near us turned right over with twenty men trapped in her hold.

"It was awful to hear the screams as she went down. Our ship was caught on the rocks about a hundred yards from shore. Someone got a line across the mainland and we went hand over hand to the beach. We tried to get some of the men out of the water that were struggling about but there was not much chance to rescue any.

Coffman Praised by Officers.

"They say that we did not have our right bearings. We received radio bearings about an hour before we struck and I guess they were wrong for we headed straight into the jagged rocks that form that point."

Coffman suffered cuts and bruises in the heavy seas, but is not seriously injured. His actions and work in the face of danger have been commended by officers of the fleet who stated he showed remarkable coolness and courage.

Washington.—The theory has been expressed by high navy officials that a tidal wave or other seismic disturbance, reacting from the Japanese earthquake, caused the disaster to destroyer division No. 11 off the California coast.

Santa Barbara, Calif.—Twenty-nine sailors dead and 15 injured, and seven destroyers of the Pacific squadron of the battle fleet held fast between rocks off Arguello light, in the Pacific ocean, between San Francisco and Los Angeles.

These were outstanding consequences of the navy's major marine disaster in Pacific waters. The injured were being nursed at hospitals here; a trainload of survivors was headed for San Diego, the naval base, while the seven ships were fast approaching total wrecks by the pounding of the surf. This was the U. S. navy's worst peacetime blow.

The warships went ashore while cruising from San Francisco to San Diego in a dense fog. Mistaken position in relation to the coast line is believed to have caused the crash. The destroyers were speeding through the fog hugging the shore in single file formation when they piled up on the rocks from 200 to 500 yards apart about 300 yards off shore.

KLAN BOWS TO DECREE OF OKLAHOMA GOVERNOR

Oklahoma City.—Bowing to Governor J. C. Walton's edict against masked assemblages, state officials of the Ku Klux Klan have issued an order forbidding Klansmen in Oklahoma to hold masked parades or meetings.

The decision of the Klan officials to abide by the executive's decree was anounced by N. C. Jewett, grand dragon of the Oklahoma realm

It came when preparations were under way by Governor Walton to use troops, if necessary, to prevent a series of Klan demonstrations scheduled over the state.

State's Population Grows.

Bismarck, N. D.—North Dakota's population is increasing steadily if the school enumeration is a correct index. The enumeration for 1923, just made public at the office of State Superintendent Minnie J. Nielson, shows an increase of 3,458 over 1922 in the number of persons between the ages of 6 and 20, inclusive, in the state, while the increase over the 1921 count is 6,830. One county, Traill, shows a decrease in both 1922 and 1923. Dickey county had exactly the same enumeration in 1923 as in 1922.

Women Tell Each Other How They Have Been Helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Perrysburg, Ohio.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because I suffered with pains in my sides all the time. I can't remember just how long I suffered, but it was for some time. One day I was talking with a lady I met on a car, and I told her how I was feeling and she said she had been just like I was with pains and nervous troubles, and she took the Vegetable Compound, and it cured her. So then I went and got some, and I certainly recommend it for it is good. Whenever I see any woman who is sick I try to get her to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. ADA FRICK, Route 3, Perrysburg, Ohio.

In nearly every neighborhood in every town and city in this country there are women who have been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the treatment of ailments peculiar to their sex, and they take pleasure in passing the good word along to other women. Therefore, if you are troubled in this way, why not give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

PICKED UP ON THE HIGHWAY

Possibly Some of Our Readers (but We Doubt It) May Have Heard These Remarks.

The miscellany department of a newspaper might label the following "Home (Un) Truths:"

"I don't mind the size at all. What I want is a comfortable pair of shoes," was what we overheard a lady saying in a bootshop yesterday.

"Yes," said a tall, grim-looking lady who paid us a visit with her meek little husband today, "Henry's word is law in our house."

"No," said the fair musical comedy actress, when interviewed this week, "I will not give you my photograph. I hate seeing it in the papers, and I want to keep myself as much out of the limelight as possible."

"I always like to have my wife's mother here on visits," declared our friend Whitehouse the other day, "because we do so enjoy hearing how everything about the house should be done."

Leave It to Pat.

An Irishman, passing a shop where a notice was displayed saying that everything was sold by the yard, thought he would play a joke on the shopkeeper, so he entered and asked for a yard of milk. The shopkeeper, without hesitation, dipped his fingers in a bowl of milk and drew a line a yard long on the counter.

Pat, not wishing to be caught in his own trap, asked the price.

"Sixpence," was the reply.

"All right, sir," said Pat. "Roll it up; I'll take it."

Then the backache, dizziness, headaches, tired feelings, and bladder troubles will go. Doan's have helped thousands and should help you. Ask your neighbor!

A Minnesota Case

W. L. Britton, carpenter, 129 Birch Street, Chisholm, Minn., says: "My kidneys gave me trouble. I had to pass the secretions often. A steady ache across my back bothered me all the time. When I stooped over it was almost impossible to rise because of the sharp pains through my kidneys. I used three boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills and I was rid of the trouble."

Queer Craft.

Montreal had some queer-looking craft in her harbor 31 years ago when Spain sent three exact copies of Columbus' ships across the Atlantic to the Chicago world's fair. Equally queer is a quaint craft just launched in the English river Thames. It is a model Japanese fishing boat. It has an overhanging prow and is propelled by a pair of sweeps over the stern. A mast is stepped amidships. Blue lozenges on the sides for ornament show the only paint on the vessel. Immediately after the boat's arrival it was put into the water, and, in spite of lack of paint or varnish, it did not ship a drop of water.

BIG TELESCOPE FOR RUSSIA

Instrument Manufactured in British Factory Weighs Nine Tons and Is 45 Feet Long.

In view of the present condition of Russia, it is rather surprising to find that the Soviet government has ordered a telescope which is one of the largest in the world. This telescope has just been completed in a British factory, and will shortly be transported to an observatory on the shores of the Black sea. It weighs about nine tons, and the inside length of the tube is 45 feet. Heavy as the telescope is, it is so admirably fitted that it can be moved by electrical means as easily as if it were a small portable apparatus. The push-button system of control has been adopted, so that all the operator has to do to direct the telescope to any part of the heavens is to press certain buttons. A second telescope, almost as large as this, is being made at the same British factory for another observatory in Russia. So delicate is the work on these giant instruments that about three years are occupied in designing and constructing them.

They were silent. The light breeze lifted and swung the silken curtains of the ship Napoleon; the wines lapped slowly in the rich glass and silver. Jarvis looked about at the polished teak, the heavily carpeted floors; he shook his head.

"This is a dream," he muttered, "and still—we must awaken! After Napoleon—when our threescore musketmen have come scrambling up the St. Helena crags, filched the emperor from their snoozing guards and cutlassed a way to sea again—what then?"

"Old Bossiere, Monsieur Girod, and the other spirits of this venture, before we seized the ship, had every point worked out," explained De Almonaster. "Even the plans of the island and the English lookouts. Even block and tackle and chair to hoist the emperor from out the St. Helena cliffs to our waiting longboats if needful. Doctor Antomarchi, Napoleon's own physician, and Marshal Bertrand, his friend in exile, are aware of our purpose and expectant. Everything is cared for—it is only for us to put through what the gentry of New Orleans had plotted."

"Except," mused Jarvis, "the lady who once looked back at me from the coach . . . and threescore cutthroats brawling on these decks!"

The Captain Jean looked gravely off to the shimmering sea. Dominique sighed. "Ah, yes—after Napoleon—what?"

"Gentlemen, the future of you all has been a concern to my mind," said Lafitte gravely. And as he was speaking on, there came a hail from the forward lookout; and then Beluche, the deck officer, at the companionway.

"A ship's light, sir! Sou' by east, lying out o' the wind!"

"She is not within hailing?" The master started to his feet.

"No, sir. And we have little air to come up with. But the longboats, sir! The thing might be done in a trice this very night, unless she undertakes to repel our parley!"

"She will hardly give in to our demands." Lafitte followed to the quarter-rail. The twinkle of the stranger showed through the moonlight. But both ships were lying in the great outrush of the Mississippi waters though many miles from the sight of land.

"Lay to, sir, and keep her in eye. We can do nothing without a bit of wind. We shall request the restoration of Mademoiselle Lestron peaceably before we consider boarding the bark." The master turned below again.

Johanness went forward grumbling. The light of battle was in his eye. Off this pass he had taken his last Spaniard fifteen years ago with eighty thousand dollars to be divided among his crew at the Grand Terre fort of the buccaneers which was not a day's sail westward on the Louisiana coast. And the party in the emperor's cabin heard a hoarse shout from the fo'castle hood.

"A ship, bullies! And we lay here with the old itch to be alongside! What do the gentlemen aft propose for her, eh—mates?"

Beluche showered imprecations upon the speaker. There was a yell or two, then silence. Presently the admiral came aft under the limp hang of the Seraphine's snowy new canvas.

"I Have Been Forward," Grunted the Painter. "There Is More Hubbub Than a Ladies' Picnic."

"There are some hardheads, sir. Already they are dicing it for the first choice o' plunder from the Genaron. The woman, they agree, is yours!"

"Do they think," retorted Lafitte sternly, "that this is the time of Morgan come again?"

The silence grew upon them all. Dominique sighed once more. "The English woman—if it was not for the affair of the English woman, we could give a wide berth to everything until this ship and crew had found themselves."

"They will know this coming day!" said the commander. "I am Lafitte again—not Monsieur Sazarac! Irons, and then the yard-arm for the first fellow who disputes my will. The older heads will not needs be told. The English woman first—after that, as it is Monsieur de Almonaster's honor to his fellow citizens of Louisiana—for Bonaparte. And then—"

"The seas are wide," grimaced Jarvis with a look at the master which drew, in turn, a glance of impenetrable reserve.

CHAPTER X

The Long Chase.

At dawn the Seraphine lay in a flat pink sea, with, not a mile to the eastward, the dingy moil of the Mississippi outpour still visible. The canvas hung wet and limp. The idle steersman listened to Beluche's impatient comments as he held the glass off to the growing light.

"Beggar's luck! The river drift has been with her. She is all but tops'l down with some capful of wind that we never saw!"

"Wi' the sun," growled Nez Coupe, "we shall find our breeze."

"Yes, but this matter cannot wait. Some Yankee clipper may put out on our trail! We cannot tell what is brewing after this affair."

De Almonaster and the captain joined them before breakfast. True, a topsail breeze came with the sun, and the Seraphine began to draw out of the detaining eddies of the delta drift. The gentlemen had no more than settled to their morning coffee when the monotonous cry of the lookout was repeated. Beluche came with his report.

"The stranger has picked a better wind, sir, and has come about, making sou'west, and running fair."

"Good! She will not make the Floridas then and draw us into the path of the traffic. It will be a good ship today that we do not haul up with."

"I have ordered the chase guns shotted," muttered the admiral. "It may take a carronade across her bows to make her lay to. Eh, bien! You will see old eyes shine as they take to the lanyard!"

De Almonaster cried out exultantly when he followed to the deck. The first poke of the breeze laid the good ship smartly over, and the snap of the answering canvas drew a shout from the crew.

"Every bully of them out to see!" cried Raoul. "A lot of schoolboys minded to rob an orchard! The first eighteen-pounder let go will be music to old ears, Monsieur!"

"And they may dance on air to it, afterward." Lafitte turned quietly to the younger man. "I have had a sleepless night, Monsieur de Almonaster. It appears to be largely yourself. The rest carried in irons to Charleston when the inevitable happens, will not matter, but you—your position, your good name and fortune—"

Raoul snapped his fingers laughingly. "I came for this—a true exploit, and with you, sir—whatever befalls afterward!"

"I have my plans considered," said the captain calmly. "We will not escape in the end. When that hour comes, you shall be my prisoner."

"I, Monsieur?"

"I seized you upon this ship against your will. It was no affair of yours but of Jean Lafitte's."

"But nom de Dieu! I was the first to propose it!"

"That is why I shall save you." He bowed enigmatically. "And Jarvis the fool. The rest—well, in the end, I must answer. First to these lawless spirits who believe absolutely that I am turning pirate again. Next to the admiralty courts. America, Great Britain"—he shrugged—"it will be of no consequence."

De Almonaster watched the face of the exile who had been the enigma of diplomats of Britain and generals of the United States but seven years back when he shook the dice between them for the province of Louisiana, and gave back a captain's commission in the royal navy to fight for the puling republic of the West. Slowly the younger man was guessing. To rescue the woman whom he loved meant but to tear the mask from his own face—to stand before her—Jean Lafitte, the last pirate chieftain of the gulf—a proscribed outlaw, hunted by the navies of the world, dragged out of his obscurity of peace to face a ring of enemies.

"You are my prisoner, sir, when the end comes," he said quietly.

Raoul stirred, and then turned from this implacable will. Below he came upon John Jarvis shaking the sleep from his swollen eyes.

"I have been forward," grunted the painter. "There is more hubbub than a ladies' picnic. Bohon and Johanness cannot keep the dogs from howling. Old fellows who have been in the business before are scouring up rusty dirks, pistols that have molded ten years in muskrat trappers' camps—very quiet, the older heads, but winking wisely. They whisper that Lafitte is a wise fox to pretend to an affair of women when he knows of the fat prizes helpless, unsuspecting in the trade routes."

"They are in for an awakening, Jarvis. He does not mean that."

"I took them a bucket o' grog," muttered the other. "The gimcrack admiral roundly cursed me for upsetting his discipline, but the bullies are ready to elect me captain, if Sazarac is too finicky in tastes."

Raoul laughed wonderingly. "The Captain Sazarac ordains that you and I are to be prisoners—to save our necks if the venture fails. And our good names, as well, in the eyes of Mademoiselle Lestron of Quebec."

"He can consider what he wishes and be dammed. I am a free man—I will boast to the lady of the necks I have slit, which—God knows is none! I will play the fool for her, the thief for her—I will stretch rope for her . . . and I never saw her but one time. She looked back and laughed—there was old John Jarvis, very drunken in the broad day, hanging to a lamp-post, his stock behind his ear and a bottle sticking from his coat. A proud Tory lady of the Canadas, filled with soft sweet laughter at John, the Jester."

Raoul looked keenly at the impassive face of the wit. "Have a care. Who was ever your friend in the old days, but Jean? You and I diligently must aid his plan. It is due him, Monsieur. He would be an honest gentleman in this, at least."

"In Her Own Good Time the Ship Will Fly a Flag—and That Is the Business of Wiser Heads Than Yours."

"Well, a drink, now—and I will play the fool for anyone." Jarvis arose: "Come, I hear the bo'sun's whistle. They are calling the bullies up for some matter."

Johanness had tumbled the watches out and along the port rail, when the two came behind Lafitte who was addressing the straggling lines. There was much unsteady peering and bending; and then reprimanding growls from the older dogs.

"Stow that talk! The captain speaks!"

"Silence, there!" roared Beluche, "and a man mutters he gets the cat! This is a ship, mind you—not a drinking bout!"

Lafitte raised his hand.

"First, men—I have already told you of the object of this venture, which has, for the end, the rescue of the Emperor Bonaparte from St. Helena. That, alone, will keep us busied for some months; but I do not say there will be nothing done of profit to you all, in the meantime, if it comes our way—"

There was a murmur, some in approval, some impatiently.

"The English," went on Lafitte sternly, "are now the friends of the United States. Even now, in Washington, they report that never were relations so good as under the President Monroe—"

"Bah," grunted Crackley. "I am not a sea-lawyer! Eh, mateys?"

"Silence!" thundered Lafitte.

De Almonaster, by the rail, watched curiously. The line of reluctant privateers edged nervously. Behind the captain stood Beluche and old Dominique and Nez Coupe. Old Johanness, grim and sullen, stood rubbing his chin doubtfully.

"Enough!" went on Lafitte. "Another word, and then Johanness will dismiss you. But first, take your warning—I am Captain Sazarac of the Seraphine. In her own good time the ship will fly a flag—and that is the business of wiser heads than yours! And now, as to that ship we are overhauling—it is a matter of private business in this case. A lady is to be taken off if an affray must come you are to fight the guns or board exactly as ordered, and cease when ordered. And when once the lady from the Genaron is put upon this ship, she is to be treated with absolute respect from you all. More than that complete silence. She is not to know upon what mission this ship is bound, nor who is her commander."

Graduate Nurse Finds "The Perfect Remedy"

"From my long experience as a professional nurse, I do not hesitate to say Tanlac is nature's most perfect remedy," is the far-reaching statement given out for publication, recently, by Mrs. I. A. Borden, 425 Pontius Ave., Seattle, Wash., a graduate of the National Temperance Hospital, Chicago.

"I have used Tanlac exclusively for seven years in the treatment of my charity patients," said Mrs. Borden, "and my experience has been that for keeping the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels functioning properly, and for toning up the system in general, it has no equal.

"About a year ago I had a lady patient who could not keep a thing on her stomach, not even water. I prevailed on her to try Tanlac and after the sixth bottle she could eat absolutely anything she wanted without the slightest bad after-effects.

"I had another patient who simply could not eat. I got him started on Tanlac and by the time he finished three bottles he was eating ravenously and able to work.

"These two instances are typical of the wonderful merits of the medicine. My confidence in Tanlac is unlimited."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists.

The Up-to-Date Painter.

Watkins was having his house painted. The expense was mounting and he was beginning to fear he would have to let the painter take the house as part payment for the job, when Mrs. Watkins overheard something that shed some light upon the matter. The painter was working at the front of the house when a friend of the same profession passed by.

"Hello, there, Bill," the friend called.

"Hello yourself," the painter responded. "Where are you going to?"

"Got a garage to paint down here in the next block. How's business?"

"Can't complain."

"How long will it take you to finish the job you're on there?"

"Well, I'll tell you, Carl," and the painter lowered his voice to a confidential tone. "The boss is gone to see about another job. If he gets the new work we'll be done here tomorrow. If he don't, it will take until some time next week."—Kansas City Star.

The Drama of the Sea

Twenty-two days in an open boat on the ocean affords an experience not often equaled in the records of the sea. Perhaps an exposure of such length has not been recorded since 1884, when three members of the crew of the yacht Mignonette endured a memorable and tragic journey in an open boat for 24 days. The story of the Trevessa's crew, when set out in full—in which we hope may be included that of the boat still missing—will add one more to those true thrilling stories of the sea with which our annals are full. Defoe knew well that for the telling of a tale of the sea narratives of fact gave the best material. Captain Marryat could not surpass or equal Hakluyt, and Stevenson envied the experience which enabled Herman Melville to deal in real events.

Smoking the peace pipe in wartime

A late report from an A. E. F. veteran who found a can of tobacco in his soldier mail

It was during the thick of things in France that Gen. Pershing sent the following frantic cable to Washington:

"Tobacco is as necessary as food. Send a thousand tons at once."

As any ex-doughboy will tell you, a thousand tons of tobacco distributed over a fighting force of 2,000,000 men showed good intentions, but it didn't fill the need—not by a few million pipefuls.

Even today letters still come in from veterans who have forgotten the horrors of war and remember only the thrill of "a real American smoke" in France.

For one, Hugh Livingstone, Adjutant of Yankee Division Post, No. 272, V.F.W., remembers:

Providence, R. I.

Larus & Brother Co.,
Richmond, Va.
Gentlemen:

My introduction to Edgeworth took place over in the training area in France under circumstances that left a lasting impression of the good qualities of Edgeworth.

One night, after a hard day's work, my bunkie drew a package from home, one of those mysterious affairs that might contain everything but what you wanted.

After due ceremonies of guessing he opened it and the first thing we saw was the blue box of Edgeworth. All further operations ceased until we filled the pipes. After using the French tabac for several weeks and burning our mouths and throats to a raw state you can imagine how cool and satisfying that Edgeworth tasted to us.

We smoked until we were ordered to bed, and I fell asleep smoking. You can just bet a letter went home for more Edgeworth.

Since that time I have used about every kind of tobacco that is put up, but it is Edgeworth for me when I can get it. Thank you for putting such a satisfying and cool tobacco on the market.

Gratefully yours,
(Signed) Hugh Livingstone

Probably any good American smoking tobacco would have brought the same joy to Mr. Livingstone and his bunkie in France. But it is a fact that when Edgeworth makes a friend, more often than not it is a lifetime affair.

Edgeworth's one great asset for most smokers is that it is always the same. You can buy a package in Chicago, another in New Orleans, another in San Francisco, and each package will give you the same cool, satisfying smoke.

If you are not an Edgeworth smoker, you are cordially invited to accept some free samples of both Edgeworth Plug Slice and Ready-Rubbed.

Just drop a postcard with your name and address to Larus & Brother Company, 73 South 21st Street, Richmond, Va., and the free samples will be forwarded to you immediately. If you will also include the name and address of your tobacco dealer, your courtesy will be appreciated.

To Retail Tobacco Merchants: If your jobber cannot supply you with Edgeworth, Larus & Brother Company will gladly send you prepaid by parcel post a one- or two-dozen carton of any size of Edgeworth Plug Slice or Ready-Rubbed for the same price you would pay the jobber.

UNJUST RESULTS OF MONEY PLANS

Unsound Currency Gives Sellers Unfair Advantage Over the Producers.

EXPERT EXPLAINS MONEY

Points Out Dangers in So-Called Energy Dollars—Other Plans Exposed.

How demagogues are using false doctrines of so-called "sound money" to give themselves or the class they represent unfair advantages at the expense of real producers is exposed in the Journal of the American Bankers Association by H. Parker Willis, expert on the money question.

"There is no subject in whose name more crimes against truth have been committed than that of 'sound currency,'" Mr Willis says. "The term is always resorted to by demagogues. At the present moment there seems to be a danger that it will be used by a potential presidential candidate as representing the 'platform' upon which he expects to run. There is no question that more nearly and directly touches the immediate welfare of every class in the community."

Purpose of Money

Primary functions of money and currency, it is explained, are to serve as a means of exchanging goods and as a means of measuring the value of goods. Mr. Willis continues:

"Demagogues and those who are disposed to mislead the public for various ulterior reasons have succeeded in disseminating an entirely different view of the purpose of money. Some of them contend that the soundest or best currency is that which is so arranged as to bring about a 'fair' redistribution of wealth. They want a constantly depreciating currency—one which keeps playing into the hands of the seller of goods by enabling him to count confidently upon higher prices in terms of money so that he pays the producer from whom he has obtained them less and less. IT IS A STRANGE THING THAT THIS KIND OF CURRENCY IS OFTEN HIGHLY PRAISED OR FAVORED BY THE PRODUCER HIMSELF, NOTWITHSTANDING THAT HE IS THE GREATEST SUFFERER FROM IT."

Energy Currency

There is another popular view of sound currency which aims to base it upon "natural products" or "natural forces"—usually it is true, specifying products or forces which have been monopolized or can be controlled by the advocate of such currency. Thus from time to time there have been schemes to issue a currency based upon or protected by farm products stored in warehouses or occasionally representing "units of energy" or horse power.

The rulers of Soviet Russia at one time attempted to introduce a currency representing "labor time," each man receiving a check representing the number of hours of time he had put in at work, while goods themselves were to be valued in terms of hours of production time. Thus one man who put in an hour's time in street cleaning received the same control over goods as he who put in an hour's time at surgery. The theory was that this kind of "sound" currency enabled the "poor man" to get a larger supply of goods.

"The trouble was that when those who could perform a certain kind of labor were not paid in proportion to their effort they stopped making goods. So it was not very long in Russia before the sound currency which was issued in favor of the poor man had brought it about that the poor man could not buy anything with the currency. This was an unfortunate kind of 'soundness.' We do not want something like it in the United States today, yet very similar proposals are now being made in a good many quarters that ought to know better," says Mr. Willis.

FACTS ABOUT CHECKS

A bank check is a written order on a bank by one of its depositors to pay a specified sum to another party. This instrument must be dated, the amount written in full in the body and signed the same as the depositor's signature appears on the bank signature card and ledger sheet.

A check is payable on demand, provided it is not dated ahead. If dated ahead it becomes a promise to pay the same as a note or acceptance, payable on some future date. United States revenue stamps are required on a check dated ahead, at the rate of 2 cents per hundred dollars, or fraction thereof.

In case a check carries two different figures, that is $2.00 in the figures and "Two Hundred Dollars" in the written part of the body of the check, the latter, or part in writing, always controls.

A check made out to a person "or order," requires identification, and the party presenting the same must assure the bank that he is the payee. A check to a person "or bearer" is payable to the one presenting it at the bank, but a certain amount of identification is necessary, for the bank reserves the right to know that he is entitled to receive the funds.

GREAT NORTHERN EXPLAINS Its Ownership

There are outstanding 2,494,730 shares of Great Northern stock, of the par value of $100.00 each. Each share represents an equal ownership in the property of the Great Northern Railway and each share has an equal voice in all shareholders' meetings, including those for the election of directors.

On December 31, 1922, these shares were owned by 44,314 men and women in all walks of life, and by organizations and institutions, as follows:

Number of men	24,416
Number of women	18,113
Insurance companies and miscellaneous corporations	1,616
Hospitals, charitable bodies, religious and educational institutions	169

The wide distribution of these holdings is shown in the following table:

28,449 held from 1 to 20 shares each.
12,579 held from 20 to 100 shares each.
Only 3,286 held over 100 shares each.
The average holding is only 56.2 shares.

Dividends have been paid on this stock since 1891. From 1900 to 1921 the dividend rate was 7 per cent per annum. In 1922 this was reduced to 5¼ per cent and in 1923 to 5 per cent.

Many people in the territory traversed by the Great Northern are among its largest shareholders, and are therefore directly affected by its ability to pay a return on capital invested.

Most of the large life insurance companies have money invested in Great Northern securities. Therefore, nearly everyone who holds a life insurance policy, and many depositors in savings banks, are in the operation and development of this railway, and their livelihood is partly or wholly dependent on its ability to pay. Many of you belong to this class.

Ralph Budd, President of the Great Northern Railway, says that the railroads of the northwest have rates only about 40 per cent. higher than they were ten years ago, while the coal they burn, the taxes and the wages they pay all cost twice as much as they did 10 years ago, consequently the incresed fall business they expect, means larger gross revenues, but this does not mean correspondingly larger net earnings beccause the cost of doing business is much higher. He also says there will be no shortage of cars on the Great Northern railroad for the fall business and their locomotives and cars are in exceptionally good condition, better than any time since the beginning of federal control in 1917.

Will sell at reduced prices, overalls, jackets, dress pants, shoes and hats at Reierson's stores.

—14—

There was an astonished silence. The men craned and stared. Johanness nodded truculently to them. "You have heard, now! Then be warned!—and obey!"

Johanness, catching his eye, dismissed the crew. Back once more by the steersman, old Dominique sighed.

"We have a handful. But I can guess their stares. The Captain Lafitte defending the English because, forsooth, they are friendly with the Americans! It is enough to open old eyes! Half these renegades have smarted in British press-gangs, and the rest—well, sirs, it puzzles even our old fellows!"

"It well may. Lafitte's return dazzled them at first, and they were keen to be at anything for him; but now some of them are wondering where the profits lie for broken bones and wet skins."

"They glower, too, at this young gentleman of the rue Royale—for they deem him part owner of the Seraphine, and holding back the captain from any too unlawful a venture. And Jarvis, the idler, goes among them with his jests and ruffles their feelings."

Johanness, the bo'sun, had come aft, cocking an eye aloft at the sail-spread; he had heard the talk and growled:

"A good fight—that's what these hearties need—blood let from some of the youngsters, and a man or two to the sharks! Aye, and we keep on fetching yon hull above the water as we've done the past five hours and there'll be one."

"Captain Lafitte does not desire an encounter."

"Burke and the other deserting Irisher say the Genaron mounts two long sixes and a twelve-pounder; and below hatches, stuffed with arms, which, it was given out, are going to New Granada for Simon Bolivar's revolt."

"Aye, well! I little think she'll fight. The Seraphine will flay her in an hour—we carry pretty bat'ries, gentlemen, as ever a privateer could wish! Twelve twenty-four-pound carronades and the two long nines!"

The wind slipped to uncertain streaks near sundown, and in the last glimmer of dusk the pursued and pursuer lay limp and adrift on the warm heave of the gulf. The crew had grown strangely quiet. Jarvis, lolling at the quarter-rail, spat at a following shark, then touched the Count de Almonaster upon the sleeve. He pointed at the fugitive ship to the southward.

"She must know she is pursued. She is making straight for Yucatan—she will crawl under the Spaniards' guns at some river's mouth and yell to Heaven that old days have come again in the gulf and the buccaneers are on the tail of the traffic. The crew has decided that she should be scuttled and every mouth on her closed ere she can tell that Lafitte is at sea again!"

"What nonsense! You know the purpose of this ship as well as I."

"The devil take me though if I know her end."

"Come—come!" said Raoul hurriedly. "No more of this! Affairs are getting ominous enough among us. You had best keep apart from the crew, Jarvis. You have been setting them on to fury with tales of the gold the Genaron carries. You know there is no truth to it!"

"I was fair to split my sides laughing over the murdering humor it put them in! That and the drink I got among them to start their boasting."

"The devil take you! I should report this to the captain," fumed De Almonaster. "You are a troublemaker!"

"I must be amused," yawned Jarvis, "for in the end, I hang."

He pulled his dirty velvet cap over one ear, rubbed the unshaven pallor of his cheek, and smiled plaintively. At dinner the gentlemen found him asleep in the tapestried suite, his ragged boots upon the pillows of the bed which had been designed for Bonaparte.

CHAPTER XI

The Lady of the Genaron.

And again that night the hawk missed its prey. Even as the chiefs were conferring as to what trusted fellows should man the longboats for a surprise upon the becalmed bark, there came a stir out of the east that gave her chance to elude the Seraphine. But at once Beluche had his sailormen aloft; and with royals and staysails set the schooner lay to the course where the merchantman was last reported.

"If we cannot board before tomorrow," grumbled Nez Coupe, "there will be the question of gunning her. I smell sailors' weather coming."

"There will have to be some action. Last night some rascals plundered the steward's stores," said Bohon, now on the watch. "Dainties o' food and drink meant for the gentlemen o' New Orleans on their quest for Bonaparte have been guzzled by shrimp fishers o' the city markets!"

Indeed, the watching eyes of all the ship's officers were upon the restless spirit growing forward. It was a relief, when, after the breeze died fitfully near midnight, a hail from the lookout brought everyone out upstanding.

"There—abaft our beam! She hangs [illegible] t, and the currents are bearing us past her bow!" Bohon pointed to the starlight: "Your Genaron, my captain!"

The party on the quarterdeck was watching what only a seaman's eyes could make out against the night; when, on the silence, came the jarring burst of a gun. The flash leaped from the Seraphine's side, and by it they saw three figures retreating from the port carronade.

Then, on the hush, came a shout. Jarvis, reeling from a coil of cordage by the companion-hood, pointed to the shadowy bulk of the English ship slowly heaving on the seas. With a grinding, tearing crash, her main mast was heeling down through her shrouds. The Seraphine's crew howled.

"Silence!" thundered Lafitte.

"A hit—a marvelous shot!" chuckled Jarvis, rubbing his hands.

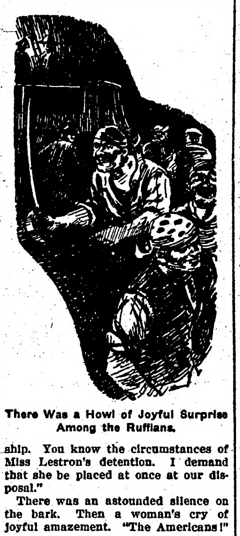
There came a shout from the English vessel. Men were already struggling there to cut away the pounding mast and wreckage.

"What is this villainy, sir?" a voice rasped: "Against his majesty's ship in times of peace? Who are you, sir?"

A shout broke from the Genaron's crew. "The Seraphine! The Yankee clipper! Aye, the Napoleon ship—I'd know her in a thousand!"

The English captain blustered on, as his deck officers shouted to the men to clear away the grinding rigging overside. Lafitte listened quietly, and when a pause came, he spoke.

"The Seraphine, sir—then it is. Her present object is to demand the lady who is unlawfully detained upon your ship. You know the circumstances of Miss Lestron's detention. I demand that she be placed at once at our disposal."



There Was a Howl of Joyful Surprise Among the Ruffians.

There was an astounded silence on the bark. Then a woman's cry of joyful amazement. "The Americans!"

The skipper's voice answered: "We cannot recognize this demand, sir—whoever you are. And who is in command?"

"I demand," retorted the chief, "the person of Miss Lestron at once delivered on board this ship."

"And I refuse—"

"The affair is yours. Beluche, sir!" He turned to his silent men, who clustered along the rail. "Lay the boats alongside for boarding. You, Bohon, see to the gun crews!"

There was a howl of joyful surprise among the ruffians, a scattering right and left, under the yeoman's instant call, a clattering of knives and pistols. Again the commander turned calmly to the Genaron.

"You are ready for action, sir? You shall have it!"

But the merchantman was not, as was easily seen. Her crew became a disorderly pack scattering from the amidship wreckage. The captain spoke roughly to Miss Lestron.

"Carr put this affair on me! I did not want you here! That I protested against from the beginning!"

"That I well know, Captain Richards. I also know why I was seized and delivered to you for deportation, which is more than you!"

"I know not who these people are who demand you from one of his majesty's ships. But I clear my hands of it until reparation is demanded in the courts—Carr and his intrigues and all! We cannot fight fivescore scoundrels boarding us. Madame, the choice is yours!"

"I take it." Her voice came clear, and proudly.

"Remember you are committing yourself to unknown adventurers—God knows, perhaps, the buccaneers who harried these waters not twenty years agone!"

There was a hoarse laugh among the Seraphine's fellows, which the chief stilled. The woman's calm voice answered the other's heat.

"I go willingly. I have not been more than a prisoner here."

"A boat," muttered Lafitte, swiftly turning. "Pull away, and have a care under the quarter when the lady comes alongside."

"Aye, sir!"

The Seraphine rode slowly on past the bark in the easy seas. Lafitte turned to De Almonaster when the yawl swung from the Genaron's side.

"I have a mind that you represent me, sir. I prefer to meet her in the cabin. First comes this matter of that cannon shot."

"The lady comes," grunted the alderman; "make way there!"

"First—ere she puts foot on the deck—who fired that shot?" The commander motioned to the bo'sun. "Johanness! Fetch Burke and John Crackley! Those two, at least, were recognized."

The under-officers hustled the two malcontents out of the disorder along the waist. Crackley, the Englishman, swaggered with a confident leer.

"You fired that gun, sir?"

"I fired no gun."

"Burke!"

"Neither did I, sir. And a d—d good shot it be, I say!"

"Silence!" The captain looked over the press of evil faces. And from the rear a hoarse voice chuckled:

"'E was no gunner, that I'll say. Nothin' 'e knew but point and pull lanyard when someone give the word the Britisher was swingin' fair point-blank in the gun's eye!"

"Jarvis," whispered Beluche. "I had a mind o' Jarvis—"

At his name the buffoon arose with airy unsteadiness. The crew made way for him until he stood below the poop steps looking up against the lights. His blinking eye found the Count de Almonaster, and to him he bowed, alone, apparently.

"Monsieur, I have won a pistol. I have a mind to borrow of you powder and ball—to find a tutor who will instruct me which end is which."

The commander drew his breath sharply. "Jarvis? You fired that gun?"

The boat's crew was making fast, the bow men climbing the short ladder. They stood back respectfully to make way for her. The silence grew painfully acute. The cloaked figure of a woman was assisted to the rail and past the guards. She looked about puzzledly, as if not seeing clearly who first would address her.

"The man—Jarvis—below, to the brig, Bohon!" The master spoke low, swiftly and with a mask of indifference that had concealed his pain.

His guards threw Jarvis past the crowding ruffians and hurried him forward. And the lady who looked back at him from her coach on the Esplanade now did not see him at all! She had gone swiftly to the after-companion, with its gilded panels and royal carpet leading to the cabin of the emperor.

At the companionway the bronzed lamp showed the captain's face. De Almonaster started at the grief, the stern, pent sadness of the leader.

"Jarvis," he muttered: "My friend—Jarvis—"

"Why this fool's mutinous play!" blustered old Dominique.

"It was so that you could never return to the ports of the world," put in Raoul de Almonaster. "An act of piracy—an overt act of war by a ship that flies no flag, against the power of England. He condemns you to a part he would play himself and cannot—Sazarac, the last sea-rover . . . and the lover, Jean!" And the count added hurriedly: "Go, now. You have my pledge to aid in this affair. On my honor, Monsieur—you shall be none but Sazarac."

CHAPTER XII

The Parting of the Paths.

De Almonaster stepped aside as the two came to the brocade portieres that hung at the portal of Napoleon's cabin. The other man, therefore, had stepped within, and the brilliance of the polished lamp cluster with its crystal reflectors was full upon him.

"Sazarac!" the lady cried sharply. "Sazarac—the river gamester!"

"Playing high again, Mademoiselle Lestron—to serve you!"

The lustrous blackness of her eyes was narrowing. She threw the cloak higher with one arm before her chin, as if, in fear or some curious revulsion, to shut the thought of him away. And then she dropped this and stood facing him.

"Monsieur Sazarac," she repeated quietly. "This is a strange affair! How can it be? You—why should you take me from the ship of my country?"

"Why did you come?" he retorted, and his somber smile lightened. "The choice was yours, Mademoiselle—even at the last."

There came a shout from the waist of the ship. A rolling boast, followed by discordant choruses of laughter.

"With one shot I lay a ship to, helpless on the sea! Oh, bullies! One shot—my first shot! I—Jarvis! Why didn't I play the part of Lafitte long years ago?"

The muffled cry was drowned in imprecations and more fo'cas'le laughter. Mademoiselle Lestron gave Monsieur Sazarac a swift measuring glance.

"I assure you—a rough jest of my rough crew, Mademoiselle."

She shivered slightly. "Lafitte? I recall, when a child, that his men plundered my father's home at La Casa Montana in the Grenadines—"

"He has long vanished from these peaceful seas, Mademoiselle."

There came a stir at the threshold of the emperor's cabin. She turned to another figure there. A slighter man, but tall. His dark, slender, youthful face was lit by an unbelieving hope. The Count de Almonaster stepped nearer.

Calendar Curiosities.

The calendar offers certain curiosities which are little known. No century can begin on a Wednesday, Friday or Saturday. The month of October begins always on the same day of the week as the month of January; February, March and November begin on the same day of the week. May, June and August begin on different days. These rules do not apply to leap years. The ordinary year always finishes on the same day of the week as it began.

News Briefs from All the State

WOMEN BUY MEN'S APPAREL

Purchase Eighty Per Cent of Haberdashery—Necktie Joke Used to Hide True Facts.

Men are popularly supposed to be very independent creatures when it comes to selecting their own wearing apparel. Mothers, wives and sisters, indeed, are held to have such poor taste in the matter that the Christmas necktie joke has come to be one of civilization's most honored and ancient bits of humor. But there is another side to the story.

The inevitable statistician tells us that 80 per cent of the trading done in the country's haberdasheries is done by women. So now the secret is out. It may be that the necktie joke has been perpetuated as a sort of smoke screen to hide the true facts. If 80 per cent of the haberdasher's trade comes from women, it is easy to believe that fully as much or more of the men's furnishing purchases in regular department stores are also made by women.

Friend wife may not know a man's necktie when she sees one, but she seems to be a pretty good buyer of shirts, socks, pajamas, union suits and all the rest.

"There's a Reason"

Alabama Mayor Out With Strong Facts

Judge G. W. Thomason, Mayor of Tarrant City, Alabama, widely known and highly esteemed pioneer citizen, recently gave his unqualified endorsement to the Tanlac treatment.

"Chronic indigestion brought me to the verge of a general breakdown three years ago," said Judge Thomason, "and nothing seemed to afford much relief. I was eating scarcely enough to keep going on, and food stayed in my stomach like a rock, causing pain and extreme nervousness. Sleep was often impossible, and I gradually weakened so I could hardly attend to my office duties.

"The first bottle of Tanlac improved me wonderfully, and each successive bottle gave added impetus to my returning strength. I felt ten years younger when I finished the sixth bottle a short time later. Tanlac gave me new zest in life that still remains with me."

BELLE ISLE HARD TO REACH

Mariners Dread to Approach It Through Treacherous Bay of Biscay, Owing to Swift Currents.

Belle isle is a rocky islet jutting out of the Bay of Biscay off the Brittany coast. While Belle isle is but ten miles from shore, the water is so rough that few people care to risk the passage. The Bay of Biscay has always been the dread of mariners because of the high tides, fierce currents and dangerous reefs.

Belle isle was inhabited from early times, for the remains of rock structures made by the Druids are numerous. Later the Romans occupied it as an outpost of their empire. Then it was held for a long time by a Catholic monastery. In 1761 the British captured the island, after a long siege, but it went back to France soon after. Napoleon started to fortify Belle isle, but never finished the job. Dumas, in "The Three Musketeers," tells how the gigantic Porthos labored with the great rocks used for the earlier foundations.

Strange Experience.

One day a friend wanted to go swimming and asked me to keep $30 for him until he returned. I wrapped it in a handkerchief with $20 of my own money and pinned it inside my dress. An hour later I went to the post office and upon returning, saw something lying on the sidewalk. I picked it up and discovered it to be my handkerchief containing the $50. The pin had come unfastened, but I had not noticed it.—Chicago Journal.

Spats and Old Boots.

"He was wearing spats," said a witness of a man he had described as "respectable."

"Are spats a sign of respectability?" asked Mr. Lankester, the magistrate. "They are often used to conceal old boots."—London Tit-Bits.

How He Came In.

"I'm right proud of my son at college. He's one of the most popular young fellars thar," said Farmer Hicks proudly.

"Yer don't say so?" exclaimed a neighbor.

"Yep; he recently gave a big dinner-dance in my honor at one of the most fashionable hotels."

"Wuz you thar?"

"No, I wuzn't."

"Wal, where do you come in?"

"I paid for it."

Important Guest.

Hubby came home and found an argument going on. His wife was trying to give a bridge party.

"What's the row?" he demanded.

"One of the guests is threatening to walk out," explained his wife in a whisper. "I must conciliate her."

"Conciliate nothing. Let her walk out."

"Can't be done, hubby. She'll walk out with six chairs and four bridge tables I borrowed from her."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

BERKELEY, CAL., SWEPT BY FIRE

Beautiful Residential City the Scene of Conflagration That Taxes Scores of Fighters.

San Francisco.—Four hundred soldiers were hurried from Fort Scott here to Sonoma county to assist in battling forest fires.

Colonel Harrison Hall, ninth corps area adjutant, and Colonel William P. Burnham ordered a battalion organized at the Presidio as quickly as possible for duty at Berkeley. The battalion will include a demolition party.

Berkeley, Cal.—At 7:15 p. m. it was announced the fire was under control although several houses were burning in the hillside district. The wind had died down and further spread of the flames was not looked for.

Fire, sweeping over the hills east of Berkeley, a city of 60,000, laid waste the Cragmont and Euclid avenue districts, destroying at least five hundred residences within an area estimated at 60 blocks in extent in one of the choicest residence sections of the city.

No lives are known to have been lost although two students were seen to plunge into the vortex of fire when the roof of a house upon which they had climbed collapsed.

A third person, unidentified also, is believed to have been lost in the residence district near the hills.

The section of the conflagration that threatened the business section was brought under control at Univeravenue and Allston Way at 5:30 p. m.

At 4:30 vast columns of flames at Allston Way and Addison street gave forebodings that the entire Berkeley business district would go. Shattuck avenue merchants moved out their valuables. Officials of the University of California, directly opposite the line of flames, prepared for a last ditch fight. The streets and avenues of Berkeley were thronged with marchers leaving their homes.

Then the direction of wind caused a change. The vicious norther became a westerly zephyr. Batteries of fire engines from Alameda, Oakland and San Francisco arrived and added their lines to the Berkeley ones. Thousands of workmen helped. Their combined efforts saved the situation.

WHEAT COMIMTTEE ON WAY

Delegates to National Capital Go on Price Errand Sept. 25.

Crookston, Minn.—The wheat price stabilization committee appointed at a meeting in Fargo, N. D., recently, to meet with President Coolidge relative to calling a special session of congress will leave for Washington, D. C., on the evening of September 25, A. D. Stephens, temporary chairman, has announced.

The ten members of the committee were notified by Mr. Stephens to assemble in St. Paul September 25, prepared to leave for Washington that evening.

The committee will carry out the resolutions adopted at the recent Fargo meeting and will ask President Coolidge to call an immediate session of congress if such action is necessary to relieve the agricultural situation.

The committee will urge the reorganization of the United States Grain corporation to take over the marketing of the farmers' 1923 wheat crop.

NO. DAK. LABOR HAS NEW EXECUTIVE SECRETARY

Grand Forks.—Charles G. Johnson of Grand Forks was named secretary of the North Dakota State Federation of Labor to succeed N. M. Aune of Grand Forks, who resigned to go into business for himself, at a meeting of the executive committee held at the Fargo Labor temple.

Mr. Johnson is a member of the Sheet Metal Workers' union of Grand Forks and also of the Theatrical Stage Employes' union. He is the northwestern representative of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage employes.

The board voted to give financial aid to the striking miners at Beulah, N. D., and also decided on the expenditure of funds for organization work in certain North Dakota districts.

Planes Attain High Speed.

Mineola, N. Y.—Lieut. L. H. Sanderson of the U. S. marines, one of the trio of aviators who recently smashed the world's speed record three times, hung up another new unofficial mark when he traveled at the rate of 259 miles an hour in a navy Wright fighter. The official record was first passed by Lieut. Sanderson, who traveled over a measured course, clocked by an electric timer, at 238 miles an hour. Lieut. Harold S. Brow broke that record and then Lieut. Alford J. Williams attained a speed of 255 miles an hour.

Chicago—Indications that the Post office department intends to make permanent the cross-continent air mail service tested last week were seen here when the Chicago postoffice received word from Washington that three new air mail stamps were to be put on sale in principal cities. The stamps cost eight, 16 and 24 cents The first is green and pictures a plane radiator and propeller. The second is blue, of circular design and designed with spreading airplane wings, while the last is red and depicts a plane in flight.

SPANISH REVOLT IS SUCCESSFUL

Overthrow of Former Cabinet Is Complete and Routine Work Goes On.

MANY NEW OFFICIALS

General Primo Rivera Now Heads Council of Ministers With Support of King Alfonso in Maintaining Good Order.

Madrid, Spain.—General Miguel Primo Rivera, Marquis De Estella, head of the revolutionary movement which overthrew the Alhucemas ministry, has taken the oath of office as president of the council of ministers before King Alfonso.

The ceremony had a somewhat dramatic aspect. Former Minister of Justice Lopez Munos, who, in conformity with the law, was required to verify the oath, was absent, sending word that he was indisposed. The inspector general of the royal palace was sent off to find him, and having located the former minister, returned with him and the oath of office was administered to Primo Rivera.

Many New Officials Named.

The new premier submitted to the king various decrees for signature. These included one proclaiming the dismissal of the high commissioner in Morocco, Luis Silvela. General Luis Alspuru, former minister of war, was named high commissioner in his place. General Lopez Rozas was appointed captain general of Valencia, while new captains general and generals representing the different branches of the army were also appointed.

The personnel of the new cabinet is: Premier, General Miguel Primo Rivera; foreign minister, Senor Espinosa De Los Monteros; finance, Senor Illana; interior, Millan De Priego; war, General Bermudez Castro; education, Senor Perez Nieva; commerce, Senor Valenciano; justice, Senor Alonso Martinez Caballero.

The minister of marine has not yet been nominated.

Order Is Maintained.

With General Rivera in control, supported as he is by King Alfonso, and with the formation of a directorate to take the place of the Alhucemas ministry, the situation in the capital is, so far as outward appearances go, normal. General Primo Rivera, who engineered the military coup d'etat at Barcelona, came here and proceeded at once to the organization of the new administration. With the army behind him, he was met with no opposition.

The court reopened, and the minister of justice and the president of the supreme court made speeches in which they touched briefly upon the necessity of maintaining order.

Admiral Aznar, minister of marine in the Alhucemas cabinet, announces that he will comply with orders from Primo Rivera. General Alspuru, however, with all the officials of the ministry of war, quit and left for Cordoba on their way to San Sebastian. A short time afterwards members of the directorate took over the duties of the war office.

SHOULD FILL POTATO CARS

Roads Ask Full Capacity Be Used to Avoid Threatening Shortage.

Fargo.—Unless the whole Northwest is aroused to the seriousness of the situation and immediate steps are taken to guard against it, potato shippers will be facing the most serious car shortage in years about the time the movement from the Red River valley reaches its peak, two weeks from now, it is reported by R. F. Gunkelman, local representative of the car service division of the American Railway association.

The car situation is just reversed this year from last year. This year the western roads have a great many cars belonging to eastern lines, while the heavy traffic is in the east this year and the western traffic is light.

"The cars are here now," says Mr. Gunkelman, "but eastern roads are clamoring to have them returned, and the American Railway association, whose function is to keep a balance on the movement of freight cars, has ordered western lines to return cars to the east as fast as possible."

The following telegram is from J. C. Roth, superintendent of transportation of the Great Northern: "Serious situation developing in potato country. Shippers are loading only 30,000 pounds in cars of large capacity. As most of these cars leave our lines, it means that we are going to lose more cars and unless foreign lines return an equal number, which is improbable, we will run short. In circular of August 6 to shippers I requested cars be loaded to full capacity."

Japan Plans Relief Schedule.

Osaka, Japan.—A recent official report said 84,114 corpses had been collected in Tokio up to and including September 7. Home Minister Goto called a meeting of the relief bureau and of the vice ministers who decided to make an appropriation for the following purposes in the order named: Help merchants sell necessities cheaply; recuperate the sick and wounded; house refugees; give personal necessities to refugees; construct a temple dedicated to the unidentified dead.

MANY WOMEN AVOID OPERATIONS

Through the Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Two Interesting Cases

Some female troubles may through neglect reach a stage when an operation is necessary. But most of the common ailments are not the surgical ones; they are not caused by serious displacements, tumors or growths, although the symptoms may appear the same. When disturbing ailments first appear, take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve the present distress and prevent more serious troubles. Many letters have been received from women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after operations have been advised by attending physicians.

Mrs. Edwards Avoids Operation

Wilson, N. C.—"For about a year I was not able to do anything, not even my housework, because of the pains in my sides and the bearing-down pains. I could only lie around the house. The doctor said nothing but an operation would help me, but I tried different medicines which did no good, until my sister insisted on my trying Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She said there was nothing like it. I know that she was right, for I began to improve with the first bottle and it has done me more good than anything else. I am able now to do anything on the farm or in my home and I recommend it to my friends."—LILLIE EDWARDS, R.F.D. 3, Box 44, Wilson, N. C.

Another Operation Avoided

Akron, Ohio.—"I can never praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound too highly for what it has done for me. I had such pains and weakness that the doctor told me nothing but an operation would help me. But my mother had taken the Vegetable Compound and she told me what it had done for her, and so I took it and I am glad to tell every one that it made me a strong woman, and I have had two children since then."—Mrs. R. G. WESTOVER, 325 Grant Street, Akron, Ohio.

SIMPLE METHOD OF PUMPING

California Inventor Has Utilized Old Principle With Results That Are Eminently Satisfactory.

It is said that a California inventor has utilized the principle of the old river ferryboat in a plant for pumping water from a stream. The contrivance consists of two parallel sweeps, 14 feet in length, attached to a reciprocating beam firmly anchored to the ground. The downstream ends of the sweeps connect with 16 vertical paddles arranged in two parallel rows in a suitable framework. The paddles are pivoted and have an angular movement of about 45 degrees. The pressure of the current against the paddle swings the sweeps across the river, where the angle of the paddles is automatically reversed. Thus the sweeps move back and forth with the regularity of a pendulum. Attached to a pumping unit on shore, the apparatus delivers 86 gallons of water a minute. —Washington Star.

Plague of Flies in Rumania.

A poisonous fly, the columbatz, is appearing in immense, cloud-like swarms in Rumania, along the Danube, and according to reports from Bucharest has killed 15,000 cattle. Several people who were bitten have died of blood-poisoning. The whole population is alarmed. Such a plague has not been experienced for 200 years. The columbatz, or midget, is similar in habits to the buffalo gnat of America. There have previously been occasions when it has done enormous destruction in the Danube valley.

The lady had just lost her husband and had gone to a summer hotel to rest. She often dreamed of her husband and she would sometimes get up in the middle of the night to see if he wasn't walking about. Any little disturbance caused her to be frightened. One night mysterious raps were heard on the wall of the summer hotel.

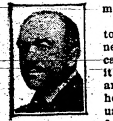
Kirk, federal statistician for the Minnesota Co-operative reporting service, which, however, notes decreases in production of spring wheat, barley, and, on account of decreased acreage, potatoes. Oats, with a total production of 147,000,000 bushels, showed a 3,000,000-bushel gain over 1922. Spring wheat, with 20,513,000 bushels was 5,000,000

THE ETHICAL SERVICE BUSINESS RENDERS

BY J. H. PUELICHER

President of the American Bankers Association



J. H. Puelicher

I sometimes think we lay too much stress on the technical efficiency of our business instrumentalities and too little on their moral services.

Is it enough to say to our radical opponents of the present capitalistic order that it effectively feeds and clothes and houses and furnishes us with physical comforts and pleasures and therefore it is good? That is not enough. They can rightfully tell us that, even though a system may minister to our physical well-being, if it stunts us morally, if it does not positively make us better ethically, it is an inadequate system.

The general answer to this assertion is obvious. The very fact that our industry, commerce and finance serve us so amply with the materials and means for physical well-being gives us the opportunity to build and support our churches, to foster the arts, to develop our great educational system,—to be kind to one another.

But need we deal in generalities? Do we not find in the direct effect of our business upon the individual much to improve his ethical standards? To toughen his moral fiber? Is it not good for the personal character of the race to do business as we are now doing it?

Let us take the business of banking, for example. Is it a mere mechanism or is it a vital moral force? Does it do more than, by facilitating production, raise the physical standard of living, or is there anything inherent in the manner and methods of banking that raises the moral standard of living as well?

Nine-tenths of our business is done by means of credit. The great bulk of that credit is obtained from the banks. It is obtained from the banks because men have character,—because they are honest, because they keep faith,—because they can be trusted.

If they did not have these qualities they could not do business with credit, they could not do business at the banks. We say banks deal in credit. That is but a way of saying they deal in honor and honesty. They build the business structure with the faith of man in man.

The part banking plays in our business life is growing. That means that the faith of men in each other is growing. The more men who come to the banks with characters that entitle them to credit,—the more men who realize that to gain credit at the banks, they must possess themselves with characters that win them unquestioned trust, the higher becomes the ethical standards of the nation.

Is not this a great moral service that banking renders? It is a greater justification for our present financial system than even its wonderful efficiency in providing us with the material things of life. No greater service could be rendered the nation.

AMERICA'S NEW PLACE

Many Americans fancy that, because labor is well employed and our industries have been reporting substantial earnings and improvement over the depression period, normalcy has been restored. The truth is, what we must consider normal in the future will be an entirely different thing from what was considered normal prior to the war. One reason is, our new place in the world as the leading creditor nation. That change is a permanent one. We are not going to return to the old position of debtor nation. Bankers in the agricultural communities have come to the conclusion that we cannot afford to maintain an attitude of isolation and that opinion is not a personal one. The men I have talked with are voicing the ideas of the people with whom they have daily business contact.

A great many politico-economists have warned against America's entrance into the European situation, asserting that our foreign trade makes up less than 20 per cent of our production, and therefore is too small an item to be vital or to risk our investment in. They forget, and most people who have listened to them forget, that the unimportant 20 per cent is the difference between full employment of our industries and labor and much unemployment and business depression. If a manufacturing enterprise is running at 90 per cent of capacity, it may be making a fairly good showing of earnings, but it is not running at normal and is not earning the margin which it should earn in order to be fully prosperous. It appears obvious that we shall have to build up foreign investments in this country. But it will be necessary to go slowly in the matter of foreign investments. There must be assurance that whatever we loan will be used for productive purposes.—William E. Knox, Second Vice-President, American Bankers Association.

Great Northern Explains Its Ownership

There are outstanding 2,494,780 shares of Great Northern stock, of the par value of $100.00 each. Each share represents an equal ownership in the property of the Great Northern Railway and each share has an equal voice in all shareholders' meetings, including those for the election of directors.

On December 31, 1922, these shares were owned by 44,314 men and women in all walks of life, and by organizations and institutions, as follows:

Number of men	24,416
Number of women	18,113
Insurance companies and miscellaneous corporations	1,616
Hospitals, charitable bodies, religious and educational institutions	169

The wide distribution of these holdings is shown in the following table:

28,449 held from 1 to 20 shares each.
12,579 held from 20 to 100 shares each.
Only 3,286 held over 100 shares each.
The average holding is only 56.2 shares.

Dividends have been paid on this stock since 1891. From 1900 to 1921 the dividend rate was 7 per cent per annum. In 1922 this was reduced to 5¼ per cent and in 1923 to 5 per cent.

Many peopel in the territory traversed by the Great Northern are among its largest shareholders, and are therefore directly affected by its ability to pay a return on capital invested.

Most of the large life insurance companies have money invested in Great Northern securities. Therefore, nearly everyone who holds a life insurance policy, and many depositors in savings banks, are in the operation and development of this railway, and their livelihood is partly or wholly dependent on its ability to pay. Many of you belong to this class.

COOLIDGES FOND OF PLAIN FOOD

"Mac," Their Boston Waiter, Talks About Their Simple Gastronomic Tastes.

Boston, Mass.—Much has been written lately about the simple tastes and unassuming ways of Calvin Coolidge, now President of the United States, and of Mrs. Coolidge, and those who are well acquainted with them say this simplicity permeates their life. When Coolidge was governor of Massachusetts he and Mrs. Coolidge made their home at the Adams house, and their regular waiter there, "Mac," who is known to many hundreds of Bostonians, told a writer for the Boston Sunday Advertiser a lot about their gastronomical tastes. Said he:

"Their breakfast order was always the same—'Two Special No. 1's, grapefruit for Mrs. Coolidge and orange for me.'

"Special No. 1 never varied. It consisted of two small pots of coffee, graham muffins and fruit.

"Mr. Coolidge would give the order and call for a clean glass and a whole orange. He would squeeze the orange himself into the glass, and drink the juice.

Silent at Meals.

"Mrs. Coolidge always had half a grapefruit.

"They were generally alone at breakfast, as their boys were at school and only visited them in vacation time. Once, though, when the boys were there, they wanted ham and eggs for breakfast. Mrs. Coolidge ordered it for them, but when the governor found it out, he frowned on giving the kids meat for breakfast.

"They were seldom at my table for lunch, as they were both often gone all day. But they would be back for dinner, unless they were dining out.

"Then Mrs. Coolidge used to order a chop—the way you do," interpolated "Mac," who has an uncanny memory for the likes and dislikes of every one of his patrons.

"Sometimes she would have a steak. But Mr. Coolidge always made his dinner on cereal—usually grape nuts and tea or milk.

"He was just as quiet at their family meals as he is in public life. Hardly ever said a word. Breakfast over, he would go away in silence.

"They seldom had guests, except Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Stearns, who were with them frequently.

"Sometimes there would be one or two others with them at dinner. On those occasions Mrs. Coolidge would try every way in the world to get him to join in the conversation. Nothing doing. He would look and listen, but hardly ever opened his mouth—except for his grape nuts. Once in a while he would shoot a little smile—like this—" and for a fleeting instant "Mac" was the living image of the President.

Lapsing back to his natural expression, which is intense but amiable, "Mac" continued:

"He is a hard man to get at, if you know what I mean. But when you once do get at him, you find he has one of the best hearts in the world.

All Liked Mrs. Coolidge.

"But for kindness and a charming manner combined, Mrs. Coolidge was the one. Every waiter in the dining room liked to serve her. She was always considerate, always appreciative for anything done for her. If Mrs. Coolidge once knew you, she knew you everywhere, no matter where she happened to meet you. In the hotel corridor, or in the street, she would always bow. She's a fine woman.

"I used to look at those boys, and their good manners, and wonder how she did it. But then, bringing up six. (Six little McKeoughs, remember.)

"I said to one of my boys the other day, 'Look at young Calvin Coolidge. His father's President of the United States, and he's looking for farm work at $3.50 a day. I suppose if I was president you'd be wanting to take it easy in the White House.'"

A Healthy Climate.

"You must go to the healthiest neighborhood you can find," said the eminent specialist to Mr. Forsythe. "And when you get there you must stay there for six months and have a thoroughly good rest."

In due course Mr. Forsythe arrived at the seaside town he had selected and inquired of one of the old inhabitants if it was a really healthy neighborhood.

"Well, you see me," said the old man, who was a fine specimen of health and vigor, "when I came here I couldn't walk across the room and I hadn't the strength to utter a single word. I had scarcely a hair on my head and I had to be lifted on and off the bed."

"Ah, you give me hope," said the invalid. "How long have you been here?"

"I was born here," was the reply.

Plato and Aristotle.

There was between them an affection controlled by the knowledge of their mental differences. Plato would at one moment call Aristotle the genius of his school, and at the next laugh at him for seeking truth in books. "There is the house of the reader," he would say, in passing the dwelling of Aristotle, and go on to his own house, there to write books which he must have known would be read as long as men have eyes.—The Gentleman With a Duster, in "Seven Ages."

SHOW STATISTICS AGAINST LOW FLAX

A. C. Experts Marshal Facts in Support of Argument for Tariff Protection.

Fargo.—Farm management departments of the agricultural colleges of North and South Dakota and Montana are planning on collaborating in preparing statistics to show why the tariff on flax should not be reduced, it is announced by Rex E. Willard, head of the farm management department of the North Dakota Agricultural college.

Mr. Willard has compiled figures, taken from records of several hundred farms in 30 North Dakota counties, to show that the cost of production of flax in North Dakota this year was $2.12 a bushel, compared to $1.71 in 1922 and an average cost of $2.06 for the last three years.

Present Scientific Data.

"We shall send Mr. Willard to appear before the federal trade commission with the scientific facts he has regarding flax production, on the theory that this commission is making a study of all the factors which should be taken into consideration before a change is made in the present tariff on that commodity," said Dr. John Lee Coulter, president of the North Dakota Agricultural college.

"This does not involve any question as to whether a tariff duty is right or wrong. We believe in the American form of government. The present administration as put into office by the American people, one of their basic planks being in favor of a strong protective tariff for American industry."

"We have such a tariff. We also have a commission whose duty is to investigate all demands for a change in the tariff and to place their findings before the congress and the president. The latter has authority to change the tariff by 50 per cent on any product.

Demand for Reduction.

"An effort is no being made to have a reduction made in the tariff on vegetable oils, which includes flaxseed oil.

"The commission which will investigate this demand is a technical body, much like the interstate commerce commission.

"We are confident that this commission is not playing politics in this matter, but is trying to arrive at a conclusion based on the actual facts of production in this particular industry.

"Our technical expert at the agricultural college has figures, carefully and scientifically compiled, bearing on this subject, and we feel that as a public institution, supported by state and federal funds, it is the duty of this institution to see that these facts are properly presented before this technical board.

"We feel that the figures on cost of production, compiled by Mr. Willard, are such as to prove that the tariff of 40 cents a bushel on flax is justified in protecting this American industry, and that the tariff should not be lowered," concluded President Coulter.

Three States Work Together.

"I have received word from South Dakota saying that they are working on the problem there and suggesting that we should collaborate with them and with the Montana Agricultural college," said Mr. Willard.

"As these three states raise much of the flax grown in the United States, figures compiled from them would give the tariff commission a comprehensive view of the whole flax production situation and there will undoubtedly be a conference on the subject before the hearing at Washington, which is to be held some time next month."

N. D. A. C. TEAM WINS HONORS

Stock Judges Representing This State Score High in Iowa.

First honors in judging Ayrshire cattle, and fourth in judging all breeds were won by the dairy livestock judging team representing the North Dakota Agricultural college at the dairy cattle congress at Waterloo, Ia., in competition with teams representing more than a dozen states. The team consisting of Harry Anderson, Fairview, Mont.; Neal B. Colt, Englevale, N. D.; Ben V. McCaul, Ayr, N. D., was accompanied on the trip by their coach, Prof. J. R. Dice, head of the dairy department, North Dakota Agricultural college.

The victory is significant in view of the honors won by the team representing the college at the congress last year. Last year the team won three silver trophies, a number of medals, and a $400 scholarship for the high ranking member of the team.

From Waterloo the North Dakota group will enter the dairy judging contest at the national dairy exposition at Syracuse, N. Y., October 5.

Minneapolis — Unseasonably cold temperatures throughout the Northwest states, brought the year's first frost to several points in Minnesota and North Dakota and sent city dwellers scurrying for overcoats. In Minneapolis the lowest temperature of 46 degrees was reached at 4 a. m. Freezing temperatures were reported in North Dakota and frosts were evident in northeastern Minnesota. Anoka experienced a frost sufficiently sever to wither potato vines. Near Duluth a temperature of 32 degrees was reported.

WHEAT MISSION AMPLY BACKED

Northwest Emissaries Go In Full Strength to Conferences In Washington.

NEW RELIEF SUGGESTION

Possibility of Tariff Differential Suggested as Wheat Price Parley Draws Near—Bankers Back Farmers in Movement.

Fargo, N. D.—When the committee named by L. B. Hanna as authorized by the recent banker-farmer conference in Fargo, carries the appeal of the Northwest for some immediate aid for relief from depressing prices before President Coolidge and other government officials in Washington this week, they will be accompanied and supported by representatives of the American Bankers association, the National Chamber of Commerce, and the American Farm bureau.

This is the information contained in a letter from A. D. Stephens of Crookston, chairman of the committee, to W. C. Macfadden, secretary of the North Dakota Bankers association.

Full Attendance Likely.

"The committee will have powerful backing," said Mr. Macfadden. "It will go in almost full strength, from present indications."

The four members of the committee from North Dakota all expect to attend. They are J. J. Early of Valley City, who was named by Mr. Hanna to substitute for Frank Sanford of Valley City, who could not go; A. B. DeNault of Jamestown, James A. Buchanan of Buchanan, and G. H. Garrett of St. Thomas.

In addition to Mr. Stephens, of Crookston, chairman, the other members of the committee are: N. J. Holmberg, St. Paul; Frank Clange, Redwood Falls, Minn.; Andrew Kopperud, Webster, S. D.; C. N. Herried, Aberdeen, S. D.; A. L. Stone, Dillon, Mont., and W. F. Jordan, Glendive.

Conference Arrangements Made.

Under present arrangements the committee will see President Coolidge on September 25 and will spend several days with Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and the agricultural committees of congress.

Congressman George M. Young, now in Washington, is making the arrangements for these conferences.

H. B. Fuller, secretary of the North Dakota Farm Bureau federation, has been active in getting a delegation from the American Farm Bureau federation to accompany the committee before the Washington officials.

F. A. Irish, treasurer of the American Bankers association; W. C. Macfadden, A. B. DeNault, and J. J. Early have gone to Atlantic City, where they will attend the annual meeting of the American Bankers association.

TARIFF BOOST WOULD EQUALIZE CANADA PRICE

Washington.—An increase in the tariff duty on wheat as a means of assisting western producers of that commodity was suggested by Representative Anderson, Republican, Minnesota, who discussed the agricultural situation with President Coolidge at the White House. Mr. Anderson declined to talk about his conference with the executive but said he would lay his proposal before the tariff commission.

The Minnesota representative, who was chairman of the commission of agricultural inquiry, declared the present duty of 30 cents a bushel on wheat is absorbed by the differential in prices between the United States and Canada and that an increase in duty would result in an immediate advance in the price in the Minneapolis market.

President Coolidge has authority under the tariff act to increase or decrease duties within a radius of 50 per cent, but no change could be made until there had been an investigation into the differences in the cost of production in this and competing countries, which differences would form the basis for any change of tariff rates. Moreover, the new rates could not become effective until 30 days aft they had been proclaimed by the president.

Hon. L. B. Hanna Bank Receiver.

Bismarck.—L. B. Hanna of Fargo, former governor and prominent state banker, has been named receiver for all the closed state banks in the state by Judge Charles M. Cooley of the district court. Judge Cooley made the appointment following a decision by the state supreme court that the bank receivership law passed by the last legislature is valid. Mr. Hanna stated that he was not prepared to say whether or not he would accept until after a conference with Judge Cooley.

Flax Costs $2.12 a Bushel.

Fargo.—Figures which show that the total cost of producing a bushel of flax in North Dakota this year was $2.12, based on records kept by several hundred farmers in 30 counties of North Dakota, have been compiled under the direction of Rex E. Willard, farm economist, N. D. A. C., for presentation at a hearing before the federal trade commission called to consider a reduction of the tariff on vegetable oils. It is expected that the meeting will be called within the next month.

News Briefs from All the State

Condensed Stories of Happenings of the Week in Minnesota

Little Falls—After sawing their way through a second story cell window, two prisoners held in the Morrison county jail here made their getaway.

Duluth—Nearly 40,000 pounds of explosive will be used by farmers of St. Louis county during 1923, Arnie Amodt, county agricultural agent said.

Worthington—At the annual convention of the Third District Women's Relief corps here, Mrs. Lucinda Gullick of Edgerton was named president for the ensuing year.

New Ulm—A steel gang is laying 90 pound rails from Milford to New Ulm. Following the completion of the work the big "J" type of engines can be accommodated.

St. Cloud—Concrete pouring has been begun on the first strip of the pavement between St. Cloud and St. Joseph. The paving will go to Oseo this fall and will be completed next spring.

St. Cloud—Extension of the activities of the Great Northern railway is reflected in the pay roll of the company for the 30-day period, which shows a total of $197,300 dispensed to approximately 1,500 employes.

Rochester—City and county officials and a committee of the Rochester Civic association are making plans to keep Olmsted county trunk line roads open to travel this winter. The first step will be to confer with state highway officials.

Long Prairie—Local dealers report that 178 automobiles have been sold here this summer and less than a dozen grain binders. At the same time gasoline sales in the town in 1922 exceed the value of the output of the local creamery, one of the largest in the state.

New Ulm—Mrs. William Alwin, Sr., 99 years old, died here. Mrs. Alwin was one of 14 families that came here from Chicago in 1855 and during the outbreak of the Sioux Indians in 1862 her late husband was one of the defenders.

Hibbing—Mrs. Harry Warren, wife of a local automobile dealer, was instantly killed when on a hunting trip. She had just stepped in the lodge when a gun being cleaned by one of the members was accidentally discharged and the bullet passed through her heart.

Austin—At the fifth annual meeting of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Veteran Employes' association, held in Milwaukee, Austin was represented by 11 veterans. Membership in the association is limited to those who have been in the service of the road 25 years or more.

Hibbing — Dealers in Christmas trees are making their annual pilgrimage to points near Hibbing, particularly western Mesaba range towns and the Bear River sector, making preparations for the annual cut of the holiday trees.

Thief River Falls—Through a deal made with the owners of the Middle River Pioneer, which suspended publication two weeks ago, the Tribune of this city takes over the subscription list of the former Marshall county paper.

St. Peter—Superintendent R. M. Davis of the St. Peter high school, together with the school board, is working out plans whereby every girl attending the public schools, will wear uniforms, approved by the board and the superintendent.

Faribault—Renewed activity of a fake "speed cop" on the Jefferson highway north of Faribault came to light in a letter received by Mayor Thomas H. Quinn alleging that two Big Lake boys were stopped on the highway by a man posing as an officer and fined $30.

St. Cloud—Two passenger trains on the Great Northern railroad running from the Twin Cities through St. Cloud to Melrose, will be taken off if the application of the railroad to the state railroad and warehouse commission is granted. In a petition filed with the commission, it is set out that in seven months the two trains, operated at a net loss of $56,752.52.

Fairmont—Hog cholera is reported prevalent in Frazer and Rolling Green townships, northwest of this city, also in Lake Belt and Tenhassen townships, in the vicinity of Ceylon. So far no very heavy losses of hogs are reported, but several farmers in the districts named have lost a few hogs. Measures have been taken to cure the outbreak.

Stillwater—Charles Baldwin, trusty at Stillwater penitentiary, who ignored a hundred chances to escape in the crowds at the Minnesota State Fair, slipped off a prison truck en route to St. Paul and disappeared. He is the second convict to escape under similar circumstances within two months.

Crookston—An average of 80 per cent of Polk county's potato acreage was subscribed in the proposed state co-operative marketing program. A number of farmers subscribed 100 per cent of the acreage, while every township reported a subscription of at least 50 per cent.

Chisholm—The Chisholm board of education has sent to Mike Holm, secretary of state, a request that a special census be taken of this city.

Brainerd—Text books are to be furnished students in the grades of Brainerd public schools absolutely free, following action taken by the board of education.

Fergus Falls—Leonard Carpenter, a member of the Yale rowing crew, was injured in an accidental gun explosion while on a hunting trip near here.

Hutchinson—An unprecedented and unexpected heavy enrolment in the Hutchinson high school has made necessary the engaging of another instructor.

Eveleth—Quo warranto proceedings were brought against Mayor Essling, demanding that he show cause why he should not vacate his office following his suspension by Governor Preus.

Crookston—Plans are under way for a canvass of the entire farming section of Polk county by business men when farmers will be urged to join the five-year state potato marketing pool.

Fergus Falls—The first fatality of the hunting season was recorded here. George Roehl, aged 15, son of J. W. Roehl, was hunting ducks when he was struck in the back of the head and killed.

Austin—Mayor Hirsch of Austin proclaimed a cabbage and apple day in the city, at which time farmers of the surrounding country are expected to bring in their cabbages and apples and place them on sale.

Crookston—Nine of 12 Canadians held here in the Polk county jail for deportation escaped and are believed to have headed for Canada. The remaining three refused to take advantage of their opportunity to get away.

Hibbing—On Oct. 5 the newest village in Minnesota, Frazier—now known as the "Frazier-location" adjoining this village—will take its place in the list of range municipalities.

Moorhead—During six days approximately 3,000 people and more than 850 cars stopped at the Moorhead tourist camp, according to a record kept by George Walker, secretary of the tourist camp committee of the Moorhead Commercial club.

Willow River—Mrs. Thomas D. Schall, wife of Congressman Schaal of Excelsior, received minor cuts and bruises when the automobile in which she and the congressman and a chauffeur were riding, left the road about one mile north of here.

Stillwater—J. J. Sullivan, warden of the Minnesota state prison at Stillwater was elected president of the Wardens' Association of America, at the fifty-third annual congress of the American Prison association in Boston.

Owatonna—Owatonna may invite the Minnesota Crop Improvement association to hold its annual grain show here. A special meeting of the board of directors of the Steele county farm bureau will be held to decide whether to extend an invitation.

Owatonna—The United States department of agriculture will conduct a survey in Steele county next month to discover the benefits and value of state and federal extension work through the medium of farm clubs and units of the county farm bureau organization.

New Ulm—A reassessment of jewelry, diamonds, gold and silver plate and plated ware owned in New Ulm, Sleepy Eye and Springfield has been ordered and the county board of Brown county has named special assessors to carry on the work.

Cleveland—Five bank bandits raided this village, ripped out telephone and telegraph communication, forced the 300 residents to cower in their homes by firing fusillades of shots and motored into the southwest farming country with $18,000 from the wrecked vault of the First State bank.

Austin—Austin's sewage problem, long a thorn in the side of local residents, and subject to much correspondence between local and state authorities, is finally nearing a solution. Council has voted to open bids for the construction of a direct system by oxidation.

Franklin—R. K. Munsell, 35 years old, a stock buyer, saved his life by grabbing the pilot of an engine after it had struck and killed a valuable horse he was riding at South St. Paul. Munsell was bruised and cut painfully but it is not believed his injuries are serious.

Duluth—When most folk speed their automobiles, they are fined, and the fines are not infrequently $10 with $2 costs. But Joseph Roy, pioneer resident of St. Louis county, had better luck when by exceeding the speed limit, he benefitted $12 instead. Roy's automobile struck and killed a wolf and he collected a bounty of $12 from the state and county.

Glencoe—Fifty farmers and businessmen from Sisseton, S. D., will come here to study the dairy and farming conditions in the community. All of the leading dairy farms will be visited and the McLeod County Holstein Breeders' association and the Glencoe Community club are planning an elaborate entertainment for the visitors.

New Ulm—Dealers in the grocery field from southern Minnesota and western Wisconsin will conduct a day's meeting in New Ulm, Oct. 24, to become better acquainted with each other and discuss topics pertaining to their business.

Hibbing—That farmers of the Mesaba range are purchasing more registered stock was evidenced by a sale of cattle at the Mortenson farm. Of 47 head offered, all were purchased by farmers living on the range. Between $4,000 and $5,000 was realized from the sale, according to Mr. Mortenson.

MRS. COFFMAN ILL SEVEN YEARS

Saved from an Operation by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Sidell, Ill.—"I was a nervous wreck. I was suffering from a pain in my left side, which was almost unbearable, and I could not even let the bed clothing rest on my body at night. I had been sick for seven years, but not so bad until the last eighteen months, and had become so rundown that I cared for nobody, and would rather have died than live. I couldn't do my work without help, and the doctors told me that an operation was all there was left. I would not consent to that, so my husband brought me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and begged me to take it. I have taken fourteen bottles of it and I feel ten years younger. Life is full of hope. I do all my housework and have a large garden this year. I never will be without the Vegetable Compound in the house, and when my two little girls reach womanhood I intend to teach them to take it. I am never too busy to tell some suffering sister of my help, and you can use my name and letter to spread the good news of Lydia E. Pinkham's medicines."—Mrs. Ina M. Coffman, R.R. 2, Sidell, Ill.

"What have you said?" he whispered. "La Casa—in the Grenadines? You are Louise L'Estrange? You—are the child of the refugees from Martinique?"

"Monsieur?" she answered wonderingly: "Surely! How could you know?" And then she stepped nearer with a cry that rang: "Monsieur de Almonaster!"

He took her hands, and, bowing, kissed her finger-tips. A great light was in his eyes—the glitter of an incredible triumph. The girl flushed, and her own glance went from one gentleman to the other.

The elder was in rapt surprise. He took snuff gravely from a golden trinket of a box; and then regarded them with the air of one who knew everything, had planned everything, and was but merely watching the consummation of his desires.

Louise Lestron cried out joyfully again, coming closer to the younger gentleman. There was in it a swift relief, as if she hurried to his protection. The gamester had said he loved her . . . that he would claim his pawn . . .

"Monsieur de Almonaster, who befriended me eight years ago after the blacks massacred my family, destroyed our estate!"

"The very same. I went to Paris. I . . . . visited Quebec after my three years at St. Cyr. I searched in the Indies ports—I sought word of little Mademoiselle L'Estrange, the orphaned girl of the slaves' revolt."

There was hardly need to guess at the reason for his search. The girl turned aside. The Captain Sazarac bent upon the younger man a look of odd remembrance.

"My name was changed a trifle—Anglicized, Monsieur, by the family of Colonel Carr. I am his ward." She hesitated and turned to the commander of the Seraphine. "You came to me at the hour of my deep despair, Monsieur. The night at the hotel—I broke with Carr's intrigues from that moment. And then—well, I knew too much for his safety. A discredited adventurer, his commission already recalled by his majesty's government, plotting with the malcontents of the Northwest and with the Spaniards across the Sabine against Louisiana. The conspirators seized me, hurried me upon the Genaron lest I disclose the truth to Mr. Langhorne, my nation's consul at New Orleans. Carr is in the pay of the Spanish king—an agent of the Holy Alliance that wishes to embroil England and America again in war, lest the United States grow too powerful in the West."

"I guessed as much," said Captain Sazarac absently, taking his snuff again. "Even before that night at the hotel, Mademoiselle—"

"That night!" queried Raoul. "It has been a mystery—you did not challenge Colonel Carr, as all the town expected. From that night, there was a change in you, Monsieur Sazarac!"

Monsieur Sazarac shrugged. Louise Lestron's glance upon him seemed to appeal to whatever chivalry there could be in a gamester of the packets.

Suddenly Raoul swept about impetuously and addressed the elder man.

"Monsieur! Do you recall the dinner at my country-seat? A confidence I made to you! A memory—a child—a lovely child—burned in the memory of a dreamer-schoolboy Paris—all the world could not make him forget!"

The other bowed. His faint smile came; the nonchalant voice flowed smoothly on: "I am twice honored. I am twice the chosen confidant. Monsieur Sazarac brings, with a sweep of either hand, two charming stories out of the thin air. He understands everything—does Monsieur Sazarac. He will now be the second jester of the Seraphine."

"Jean!" The young man started to him in hurt grief.

"I beg you!" The master's bronzed hand uplifted.

"Ah, Sazarac!" Raoul placed his fingers on the gold braid of the other's sleeve. De Almonaster seemed stunned by some resurging revelation that he had forgotten. He placed his arm quite about the other's shoulder.

"I will not speak," the flushed youth whispered. "I am in honor not to speak. Monsieur, can you understand me?" And he whispered even lower so that no accent might come to her wondering ears. "You are Sazarac, a gentleman who sails the Seraphine. You have stirred her deeply with some mystery of you . . . Monsieur Sazarac, she shall follow her heart into that mystery or not—as she chooses."

The two gentlemen parted silently.

"Under what flag, Messieurs, is this ship?"

The two gentlemen looked oddly at each other.

"You are, in all honor, bound to send me back to New Orleans, Monsieur," she cried sharply. For even now, with the protecting arm of De Almonaster by her side, she recalled Sazarac, the gamester . . . He had sworn to claim her, and he was here, standing apart with that faint irony in his smile.

"You will sail at once for New Orleans, Messieurs?" she repeated.

"Sazarac—at least," the master bowed, "will find welcome."

And even as De Almonaster stared at this evident madness, there came a step on the emperor's red-plushed staircase. The admiral of Cartagena, second in command upon the Seraphine, came to the tapestried portieres.

"Sir—" he broke in shortly, with a surly glance at Mademoiselle Lestron, as if this affair of the English woman was taking far too much of the hour. "The bullies are howling again. They swear to drag Jarvis from the brig and crown him an emperor of the last buccaneers—"

"Silence—you!" the captain said sternly. "What is this, sir?"

"The wind is picking—" said De Almonaster, turning from the port where now the royal curtain was fluttering. "Sir, a sailing wind!"

"That is it," grumbled Beluche. "The devils have smelled it. They have been waiting for it. They say they have stolen the lady for you, and kept their hands off a helpless prize out of tribute to—Sazarac. Now—"

"Monsieur Sazarac is returning to New Orleans!"

"Sir!" shouted Beluche, and then stopped. The eyes of Sazarac had turned upward to the open skylight above the emperor's cabin. He had thought a gleam of steel, or another eyeball had reflected the glitter of the crystal lamp. And then they all heard above, on the deck, the sound of bare feet retreating hastily, fainter and fainter.

"There was a spy from the fo'cas'le," muttered Beluche. "They wished to know . . . . Perdition! You cannot mean New Orleans!"

"You will go forward, sir," returned the master quietly. "The fellow who laid above this cabin listening—you will find him, and lay him in double irons."

"Aye, sir!" But the old seaman turned pathetically at the foot of the stairs. "But name o' G—d! We might as well put our necks on the block in New Granada for the king o' Spain's men, as lay again to the Place d'Armes in New Orleans!"

"We are returning," said the other steadily, "for the peace of the seas between two nations. Eh, old brawler of the ports! Are you with me? You, Beluche? Bohon, Black Mike, Gorgio—Slit-Nose? Are they not with me?"

The old buccaneer watched the English woman out of hard, blinking, salt-reddened eyes.

"Eh, bien!" he growled at length. "A port for Sazarac! H—l's bells will ring for us! The young gentleman may save his neck, but you and I—Monsieur—Sazarac? Very well—it is for the English woman!"

CHAPTER XIII

Monsieur—of the Cannon Shot.

But that one hour's fitful cap of wind out of the south died ere the watch changed. The lady of the Genaron had been put safely away in the emperor's own suite; and whatever whispered conferences there were, fore or aft, upon the Napoleon ship, never a word of it drifted to her curtained ports.

"You Will Sail at Once for New Orleans, Messieurs?" She Repeated.

Mademoiselle Lestron saw the master but once; after her siesta in the cabin, which was hardly more endurable against the flat heat of the dead calm than the deck, he came to her under the awnings.

"You are comfortable, Mademoiselle, after this blistering day of calm?" Sazarac inquired gravely.

"Your black boys could not have done more—except to enlighten me! Monsieur Sazarac of the Mississippi packets—are you a magic worker that, from a cardroom, you leap to command a gunned schooner?"

"With one trifle of a pause—upon the staircase of a house, a certain night." And after that he left her, the relenting, pretty speech unsaid upon her lips; and she was used to gentlemen awaiting her favor.

The sun was setting when Johanness came up from quarters and raised a moistened finger to feel the air. The heat had been a thing to thicken the blood in a man's skull that day.

That issue of the land breeze, which picks up in these latitudes after the sun goes down, hovered like a ghost over the lacquer table in the cabin of the emperor where there sat to dine with the lady of the Genaron, Beluche, the gold-braided admiral of Cartagena; Dominique, the alderman of New Orleans; the Count de Almonaster, and Sazarac who sat in the host's chair with the guest at his right.

The lamps of brass and crystal shone very bright, but there was one vacant chair among the gentlemen. Raoul glanced at it, seeing that their guest had done the same. The serving man seemed suddenly disturbed. He lingered by De Almonaster's chair:

"Monsieur—of the cannon shot—wished a place set for him, though he cannot come to tell the lady that he loves her."

Raoul glanced at Sazarac. The leader's eyes were on the vacant seat.

The ghost of the lost friend might have sat there, the sorry jester of the new waistcoat, so long the constraint grew among them. Mademoiselle Lestron looked curiously from one to the other; then to the admiral with the trappings of the gimcrack republic of the South, and the velvet-clad respectability of the alderman.

"Monsieur of the Cannon Shot Wishes a Place Set for Him, Though He Cannot Come to Tell the Lady That He Loves Her."

"What is the jest, gentlemen?" she cried. "The guest who cannot come!" She lifted her glass: "A toast to him, then—what say you all?"

The four gentlemen drank it after a curious pause, waiting for the cue of Sazarac.

"And now," growled Beluche, "to a wind against him—a wind o' death!"

"It is a phrase of the coast," put in Raoul hurriedly, seeing the sudden recoil of the smiling lady of the emperor's cabin from this grimness: "The hurricane month is upon us, after these calms. A wind—there must be many of the Spanish king's ships—heavy-gunned frigates—lying in the tides above us, helpless as we. Here's to a topsail breeze to take the Seraphine from under their clumsy feet!"

And as they were drinking this, and Mademoiselle was breaking into a chatter to cover the grotesque menace she could not divine, there came a tap at the door. A face showed there—a fair, young ship's 'prentice, whom De Almonaster remembered as being one of the English deserters.

He raised a warning hand past the black serving man. "A word, sir!"

"Yes, my lad? But what is this?"

The boy crept about to Sazarac's chair as if the master's protection must serve him.

"I am Clark, sir—from the Genaron. Bohon sent me from the wheel. He wished to report privately, sir. There is a light in the south—the steersman says it is a shore light. He does not like the drift in this tide sou'-sou'west, and he thinks the leadsman lies when he says we have more than eight fathom o' water."

"What is the meaning of this?" cried the skipper. "Bohon—why must he send a man in secret to me? Speak up, Clark!"

"He did not wish to arouse them for'ard, sir, and he does not trust the lookout or the sounding. He suddenly fears the watch have a mind to let the schooner beach herself, sir, on a spit o' sand—"

The master's hand had swung up; his face darkling. "What? Has it gone so far as this? They are out of control forward?"

"The deck officer, sir, has disappeared. Bohon is suspicious of something that he cannot put eye or hand upon." The lad stopped, as if he was not telling all. "And, sir, I would have a care how any of your party go above. It might be better if none suspect you are warned—"

The captain raised his hand: "Then, gentlemen, one at a time—to the steersman. Beluche, you follow! Clark, I count on you, sir!"

Given Up to Die, Mrs. Harris Gains 35 Lbs.

Back to normal in every way, with a gain of 35 lbs. in weight after a severe attack of flu, is the remarkable record of the Tanlac treatment in the case of Mrs. Etta Harris, 2834 N. 12th St., Lincoln, Neb.

"Following a terrible attack of the flu," declares Mrs. Harris, "I was so utterly weakened and emaciated that I was just about given up to die. I could hardly stand on my feet, much less walk, and had a bad cough. Sleeping and eating was almost out of the question, and pains in my back and dizziness added to my suffering.

"Tanlac rid me of indigestion, sleeplessness and nervousness and revived my strength in a few weeks so I was healthy as before the flu. Every ache and pain left me, while my weight went up from 110 to 145 lbs. I give Tanlac full credit for my recovery."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.

Tanlac Vegetable Pills are Nature's own remedy for constipation. For sale everywhere.

PATIENTS AIDED BY RADIO

Helped to Forget Their Shattered Nerves and Takes the Place of Sedatives.

Combating the drug habit was not among the uses to which it was believed that the radio could be put, even by its most optimistic promoters. Yet it has been discovered that patients in hospitals equipped with radio sets which can pass along afternoon and evening concert programs, are helped to forget their sufferings and are less in need of narcotics to quiet their shattered nerves. The radio goes far toward carrying into the wards the gayety and cheer that have been hitherto only for the healthy world outside. Inasmuch as all doctors agree that many drug addicts acquire the addiction during convalescence in hospitals, this achievement becomes one of the most important that has thus far been set down to the credit of the radio. The radio may remain a toy or a jest for the healthy and cynical. It has already established itself as a heaven-sent blessing for shut-ins.—New York Tribune.

TO HAUL AWAY MOUNTAIN

Workmen Near Bisbee, Ariz., Are Trying a New Venture in Copper Mining.

For some time past, it seems, workmen near Bisbee, in Arizona, have been trying a new venture in copper mining. Instead of following the prescribed method of hollowing out a mountain and using shafts and tunnels, they dig it down with steam shovels and cart it away. One can form some idea of the magnitude of the task when he learns that it will take more than sixteen years to complete it, that during the process approximately 25,000,000 tons of copper ore will be carted away, and that from it something like a billion pounds of copper will be extracted.

During the five years the work has been carried on five million cubic yards or more of material have been taken from the mountain, though that amount does not represent pure ore. As fast as the material is dug it is hauled over a fifteen-mile railway to smelters and mills, where it is treated.

An engineer humorously remarks that when the huge pile is gone there will be room for the town to grow.

A MAN WHO BECAME FAMOUS

Doctor R. V. Pierce, whose picture appears above, was not only a successful physician, but also a profound student of the medicinal qualities of Nature's remedies, roots and herbs, and by close observation of the methods used by the Indians, he discovered their great remedial qualities, especially for weaknesses of women, and after careful preparation succeeded in giving to the world a remedy which has been used by women with the best results for half a century. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is still in great demand, while many other so called "cure-alls" have come and gone. The reason for its phenomenal success is because of its absolute purity, and Dr. Pierce's high standing as an honored citizen of Buffalo is a guarantee of all that is claimed for the Favorite Prescription as a regulator for the ills peculiar to women.

Odd Name Making.

Is there any relationship between the household cat and the caterpillar? Etymologists trace definite connection, says Nature Magazine of Washington. It is stated that the word "caterpillar" dates back to the Fifteenth century, when it was spelled "caterpyl." The word is said to be derived from the old French "chatepelose" or "chatepelouse," meaning "hairy cat." "Chat" is French for "cat" and "pelouse" is equivalent to "hairy," coming from the Latin "pilus," a hair.

News Briefs from All the State

Condensed Stories of Happenings of the Week in Minnesota

Wheaton—Miss Mary Johnson of Jamestown, N. D., has been obtained as county nurse here.

Windom—The annual meeting of the Cottonwood County Old Settlers, association will be conducted Oct. 10.

St. Cloud—Concrete pouring has been begun on the first strip of the pavement between St. Cloud and St. Joseph. The paving will go to Osseo this fall and will be completed next spring.

St. Cloud—All physicians of Benton and Stearns county were guests with their wives at a luncheon at the St. Cloud Country club which was presided over by Mrs. C. B. Lewis and Mrs. C. F. Birgham.

Keewatin—Plans have been made for a week of services and special meetings to celebrate the completion of the new Community church here.

Luverne—With the passing of September without a killing frost, Rock county is assured one of the best natural refined corn crops in its history.

Owatonna—Owatonna may invite the Minnesota Crop improvement association to hold its annual grain show here. A special meeting of the board of directors of the Steele county farm bureau will be held to decide whether to extend an invitation.

St. James—Bishop Heffron of Winona will be here Oct. 9 for the formal dedication of the St. James hospital and home for the aged. Special services will be conducted in the morning.

Faribault—A petition signed by 50 prominent residents asks the city council to purchase the grounds now used for the Faribault fair and by the local club of the Southern Minnesota league and make them a unit of Faribault's future municipal part system.

Albert Lea—Albert Lea clinched the pennant of the Southern Minnesota Baseball league by defeating Faribault, 9 to 4. The game was featured by free hitting on the part of both teams, with considerable ragged ball in between. The game was the third of the series played to determine the southern Minnesota baseball title.

Hibbing—Raising a protest to what they term an unjust decision, disabled veterans of the World war living in Hibbing and Chisholm intend to protest directly to their congressmen and senators against the action of the government veterans bureau in cancelling government aid to men who are really in need of it.

Moorhead—Equipped with dirt augurs, shovels and spades, Sheriff Malvey of Clay county, and a party of workers are plowing the field on the Peter Engels farm, 10 miles west of Barnesville, in an effort to locate the hidden grave of Ray Smith, farm hand, who is alleged to have been killed following a quarrel, and buried in the field October 18, 1920.

Hibbing—Eight stores and restaurants were ordered closed here under decrees of abatement and restraints made by Judge Martin Hughes in district court.

Deer River—Henry Foss, 50, at Dixon lake, was fatally wounded when he picked up a gun, muzzle first. The charge entered his abdomen. He lived four hours.

Windom—Information has been received here that Mrs. Julia T. Johnson will be named as Windom's new postmaster. Mrs. Johnson ranked second in the civil service tests.

Winona—Alvin Braley, aged 78, former clerk of district court here and former county superintendent of schools, is dead at a hospital. Before his election as county clerk, Mr. Braley had been active in educational circles for more than 40 years.

Stillwater—J. J. Sullivan, warden of the Minnesota state prison at Stillwater was elected president of the Wardens' Association of America, at the fifty-third annual congress of the American Prison association in Boston.

Kenyon—Plans are being made by clubwomen for the annual convention of the Goodhue county federation of women's clubs in this village Monday, Oct. 10. Mrs. Manley Fosseen of Minneapolis, is scheduled to be the principal speaker.

Kenyon—Kenyon will have a new depot following an investigation of the Minnesota railroad and warehouse commission, according to information reaching here. The building will replace the one destroyed by fire two years ago.

New Ulm—Dealers in the grocery field from southern Minnesota and western Wisconsin will conduct a day's meeting in New Ulm, Oct. 24, to become better acquainted with each other and discuss topics pertaining to their business.

New Ulm—A reassessment of jewelry, diamonds, gold and silver plate and plated ware owned in New Ulm, Sleepy Eye and Springfield has been ordered and the county board of Brown county has named special assessors to carry on the work.

Virginia — The extension department of the University of Minnesota will conduct 11 classes on the iron range this season, most of the classes here. This announcement is made by John S. Shadbolt, instructor in charge of the Duluth office of the university.

St. James—Fire destroyed the St. James Poller mills here, doing damage estimated at $15,000. A strong wind fanned the flames, endangering an elevator and lumber yard nearby. The cause of the fire is thought to be spontaneous combustion. The destroyed building was valued at $35,000, while flour and grain contained in it was estimated to be worth $10,000.

Wheaton—A party of five tourists whose combined ages aggregated 401 years passed through here en route to the farm home of Mark Leversee. They were: Mr. and Mrs. A. S. White, 79 and 78 of Castlewood, N. D.; Andrew Ageltine aged 78, of Rowlan, Iowa; Miss Elvira Gage, aged 84, Sioux Falls, S. D., and Mrs. Amelia Collins, aged 82 of Hot Springs, S. D. The three women are sisters. The party motored here from Sioux Falls.

Duluth—Phases of future development in child welfare were discussed by Dr. C. C. Carstens, of New York, director of the Child Welfare League of America, in his address before the annual conference of the Minnesota State Conference of Social Work.

Rochester—Traces of oil found on bailings from the well being drilled on the Bigelow farm has caused a flurry here. Tom Jones, in charge of the operations, said however he was not ready to state that the indications were sufficient to warrant confidence that oil would be found in paying quantities.

Owatonna—The United States department of agriculture will conduct a survey in Steele county next month to discover the benefits and value of state and federal extension work through the medium of farm clubs and units of the county farm bureau organization.

Brainerd—George McColloch and Otto Wendt were killed on a crossing near the Northern Pacific railway stock yards, when the latter's automobile was struck by a switch engine. The pilot of the engine struck the automobile in the side and overturned it.

COMMITTEE GETS ENCOURAGEMENT

Farm-Bank Representatives of Northwest Complete Washington Mission.

PRESIDENT IS GENEROUS

Officials Give Time to Consideration of Plan in Detail and President Displays Keen Interest in Early Solution of Wheat Problem.

Washington.—The members of the Ninth Federal Reserve district farmers and bankers committee have left for home. Before going they prepared a formal report to the bankers and the people of the district, saying in part:

"We went to the White House and were presented to the president by Congressman George M. Young of North Dakota.

"A generous amount of time was given us by the president. Six members of the committee made statements to him, and the situation in the hard spring wheat belt was placed before him as thoroughly and graphically as possible. All members of the committee were impressed with the earnestness and deep interest of the president and his evident desire to know the facts and be helpful.

"At the conclusion of formal presentation of our case the president devoted something like half an hour to asking questions of the members who had spoken and then suggested we go into greater detail in presenting the case to Secretaries Wallace and Hoover.

"The committee was accompanied to the White House by Congressman Young, and Senators Norbeck and Johnson of South Dakota and Frazier of North Dakota.

"Your committee appeared before Secretary Wallace at 2 o'clock and went thoroughly into the situation with him, explaining in full detail the plan for congressional action adopted by the bankers and farmers at Fargo.

"Secretary Wallace said that he had received through the mails our proposed plan of action and that it had been given careful study. He said further that in his judgment the government had a very definite responsibility to the wheat farmers because the government itself is in part responsible through war activities and otherwise for the difficulties under which the farmers are now struggling and that he is hard at work to draft and perfect a plan for legislative action, and that he would report same to the president when completed without delay.

"There was exhibited to us a large number of tables, statistics, and information which had been gathered by Mr. Wallace, showing that he had made elaborate and thorough preparation for his task. The secretary took us into his confidence and spoke freely of the plan upon which he is working, but we are not at liberty to disclose it for the reason that certain features of it may have to be changed or modified upon further study. We are free to say, however, that Secretary Wallace agrees in principles, in four important particulars, with our proposed plan in that he considers necessary the formation of a government corporation, the segregation of the exportable surplus, the establishment of a differential for wheat consumed in the United States, and a reduction of acreage, these being the chief purpose which our bankers and farmers at Fargo had in mind when their plan was drafted."

TARIFF CUT IS NOT LIKELY

State's Washington Representatives Do Not Anticipate Any Change.

Fargo, N. D.—There is little danger of a reduction in the tariff on flax, in the opinion of D. H. McArthur, secretary to Senator E. F. Ladd, as expressed in a letter to H. B. Fuller, secretary of the North Dakota Farm Bureau federation.

The letter is in reply to one sent by Mr. Fuller to the North Dakota representatives in congress, calling their attention to the tariff hearing which is to be held this month, at which the duty on flaxseed oil is to be attacked and a request made for a reduction on this product.

"Personally I am of the opinion that there will be nothing done with regard to the reduction of the tariff on flax" says Mr. McArthur, replying in the absence of Senator Ladd.

"After the hearing the commission will report its findings to the president and then it will be up to the president to issue an order.

Wilkin County to Prosecute.

Barnesville, Minn.—Wilkin county authorities took over the prosecution of Roman Furst, Carl Marwitz, Leonard Mallinger, and Fred Marwitz, held in connection with the alleged murder of Ray Smith, transient farm hand, in 1920, W. George Hammett, county attorney, announced. The four men were taken to Breckenridge by County Attorney Henry C. Wybell and Sheriff James Fitzgerald of Wilkin county and lodged in the Ottertail county jail, pending further investigation, Mr. Hammett said.

STATE BUSINESS ON SOUND BASIS

Questionaire by Large Banking Institution Reveals Better Conditions.

DOWNWARD RENT TEND

Optimistic Tone in Detailed Report Submitted from Many Representative Towns Scattered Over the Entire State.

Fargo.—Business conditions are as good as or better than they were last year, and there are very few vacant stores or residences in the representative towns of North Dakota which replied to a questionnaire sent out by a Fargo banking institution to check up conditions in the towns in which it operates.

These towns are scattered through all sections of North Dakota, indicating favorable conditions prevail throughout most of the state. Almost every town reported business on a sounder basis than last year.

LaMoure.—Business is better. There is no so-called high pressure business in any line now. Business transacted under the present condition is better and safer than a year ago. Population has increased 200 in the past five years. No stores or residences vacant and rents a little lower.

Langdon.—Business not quite so good. Crop less; cream more. Very little business on credit; mostly cash. Business less but on sounder basis. Population about the same; two new residences built and about two of least desirable residences vacant.

Bowman.—Business a little better, but collections may not be quite so good. One vacant store and no vacant residences. Rents a little higher.

Williston.—Business about same as year ago. Population has gained 700 to 800 in last five years. No vacant stores or residences. Rental values up about 10 to 20 percent in past three years. More real estate transfers this year than for several years and rental property in strong demand.

Verona.—Conditions about the same as last year. Population has increased some because of construction of new $80,000 high school. No vacant residences and rental values about the same as last year.

New Rockford.—Business is about the same as last year. There has been a small increase in population. Flour mill has been remodeled for opening. Two small vacant stores and no residences vacant.

Crosby.—There is a good healthy business, about 50 percent better than in 1921 and 1922. The population has increased. There are no vacant residences and rentals are higher than a year ago.

McVille.—Business about the same as a year ago. Population about the same as a year ago. One vacant store and two residences. Rental values are about the same.

Golden Valley.—Business conditions are a little better. Population has increased. No vacant stores or residences, and rental values are about the same as a year ago.

Beach.—Business conditions are better. There has been a decrease in population. A new theater and court house has been built. There are few vacant residences. Rentals are slightly lower.

Cogswell.—Business is better. Population is about the same. There is one vacant store and no vacant residences. Rentals have been reduced.

Dickinson.—There has been a gain in note payments and generally business is better than last year.

ROLL CALL NOW UNDER WAY

State Well Organized for Annual Red Cross Membership Drive.

Fargo.—North Dakota, which began its annual Red Cross roll call Monday, has a more extensive organization than that of last year, according to J. P. Hardy, state director.

Every county but three is organized for work, Mr. Hardy said, while last year only 27 were ready with the opening of the roll call. Excellent results are expected from this larger organization.

Co-operation of many different groups has been given to the Red Cross for the 1923 roll call, according to Mr. Hardy. The county superintendents are organizing their teachers to renew their memberships and secure others.

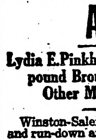
F. C. Mellick, state deputy of the Knights of Columbus, has urged all local councils to give their support to the Red Cross work.

Oct. 8-15 for Fire Prevention.

Bismarck.—The fire menace in the United States has increased until it is now taking an annual toll of 15,000 lives and $520,000,000, Governor R. A. Nestos declares in his proclamation designating October 8-15 as fire prevention week in North Dakota. This loss is largely unnecessary, he adds. He earnestly requests municipal and civic organizations to arrange attractive exercises and parades of an educational nature to bring before the people the need for more care in the prevention of fires

WEAK, RUN DOWN AND AILING

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Brought Relief When Other Medicines Failed



Winston-Salem, N. C.—"I was weak and run-down and had trouble with my side. I had been taking medicine for a long time and nothing seemed to do me any good. My husband went to the drug store and he said to the clerk, 'I want the best medicine you have for women's troubles.' He gave him a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has helped me. In a short time I was able to do my housework, and now I am not only able to do every bit of that and washing and ironing, but I help my husband at the store and feel good all the time."—Mrs. L. K. Myers, 1409 E. 14th St., Winston-Salem, N. C.

Feels New Life and Strength

Keene, N. H.—"I was weak and rundown and had backache and all sorts of troubles which women have. I found great relief when taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I also used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I am able to do my work and feel new life and strength from the Vegetable Compound. I am doing all I can to advertise it."—Mrs. A. F. Hammond, 72 Carpenter Street, Keene, N. H.

Religion as Needed.

The soldiers marched to the church and halted in the square outside. One wing of the edifice was undergoing repairs, so there was room for only half the regiment.

"Sergeant," ordered the captain, "tell the men who don't want to go to church to fall out."

A large number quickly availed themselves of the privilege.

"Now, sergeant," said the captain, "dismiss all the men who did not fall out and march the others in—they need it most."—The Continent.

A "Show Me" Boy.

Bobby had his mother's best bread knife out in the yard where he had been trying to cut bricks. His mother found him at the job, which proved rather difficult, and asked him:

"How in the world do you expect mother to cut bread with that knife when you get through?"

"I don't know, mother. Show me how," came back Bobby, who handed the knife back to the fond parent.

Advising a Judge.

A chicken stealing case was before the court. The culprit pleaded guilty and was duly sentenced.

But the circumstances of the case had provoked the curiosity of the judge, so that he questioned the man as to how he had managed to take the chickens and carry them off right under the window of the owner's house, and that with a savage dog loose in the yard. But the thief was not anxious to explain.

"Hit wouldn't be no use, judge, to try to 'splain dis ting to you. Ef you was to try it you more'n likely would git yer hide full o' shot an' no chickens, nuther. Ef you want to engage in any rascality, jedge, you better stick to de bench, whar you am familiar."

—16—

"I could not stand wi' 'em, sir. They threatened me. They have freed Mr. Jarvis from the brig—he found drink at once for 'em—"

"Jarvis!" Sazarac was upon the companion-stairs, leaving them all in an astounded silence. The empty chair of the jester, to De Almonaster's eyes, seemed to hold a grinning, ragged wastrel of the rue Royale . . . and beyond the health drunk to him, the feast was untouched. The admiral of Cartagena hitched his sword-belt higher, nodded to them, and stole above. Clark was at his heels, and once aft, took the wheel from old Bohon.

"Now, then," said the master, "what do you know, Bohon?"

"It is the strange silence, sir. The ship is flat as a dead ship. Black Michel had charge o' the watch, but it is as if every soul had vanished after they gave me the last sounding. I had the lead out because we made out a spit o' land once at dusk, you remember."

"Beluche, you will come with me to see to this. The older men, surely the Baratarians, are not with the levee renegades we shipped along!"

"It is plunder they came for, sir," grunted the admiral. "First, we must get to the arms room."

"They are watching that, sir," whispered Clark. "They smuggled ten muskets from some concealment, but they lack powder."

"Name o' the devil!" blustered the admiral. "Come! Lafitte's name with the old bullies! No more o' this Sazarac, I say!"

De Almonaster was with the two as they passed the mainmast. Then another figure slipped to them from the shadows. "It has come quick, sir," Nez Coupe whispered. "They must rid the ship o' the English woman, they say; and then ask you a fair word for a prize. If not that, death to Sazarac—"

"They need not wait—" laughed Sazarac. "Come—death to the first three men that show! Then a fair word to the rest! Monsieur de Almonaster, your pistols ready? Come, down the after-companion and to the arms room. How many are there of us to be trusted at the first?"

"I say you must be Jean Lafitte, sir," growled Beluche. "Jean o' the Black Petral for this night. Old bullies will come roaring to you, once this clatter o' Sazarac and the English woman is done among 'em!"

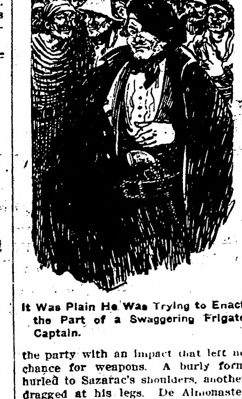
"Well, then—Lafitte," he smiled. "Come, you all, with Jean again!"

"The arms room," Bohon moved like a shadow down the passage. "Once sure o' that, clear 'em to the deck and drive 'em howling! Burke and Crackley to be shot on sight, eh?"

"Aye," retorted Johanness. "Then we'll have the older bullies—they will balk, once they see the mettle in Lafitte's men."

"Come," said the commander. "In silence—"

A dim lantern showed the deck-beams over their heads as they crept along the waist. The arms locker was on the starboard side. Beside the door a figure beckoned to them in the shadows. It must be one of Nez Coupe's loyal ones; the little band stole on past the stowage rooms. Monsieur Sazarac had even turned to speak to the shadowy sentinel, when there came a rush of bare feet from either side. A hoarse shout broke. Steel rang on steel, a pistol exploded in the narrow passage. The rush caught the party with an impact that left no chance for weapons. A burly form hurled to Sazarac's shoulders, another dragged at his legs. De Almonaster broke his rapier at a vain thrust and went down under blows and curses.



It Was Plain He Was Trying to Enact the Part of a Swaggering Frigate Captain.

The affair was over with surprising quickness. There must have been thirty mutineers roaring, struggling in the passageway. Along they dragged the prisoners, and none fought back now, for it was useless.

The mutineers, a howling, disorderly pack, took the prisoners aft, and there, upon the quarter-deck, as one waiting to have honor done him, stood John Jarvis. Apparently he was drunk, or apparently he was posing . . . it was of no moment. Monsieur Sazarac shot him one black look and then would face him no more.

"The commodore!" yelled the brawlers. "The Emperor o' the Bottle, who swore he would yet sleep in old Bony's bed! Turn in to't, Mad John!"

The jester raised an unsteady hand as if he would speak, and then thought better of it. It was plain he was trying to enact the part of a swaggering frigate captain and making an absurd failure of it by a curious doleful humanness. It appeared that the jester was about to speak, to make effort at a leadership of the evil spew he had evoked . . . and then his gesture died away. He, himself, turned away, a ghost figure by the port quarter-rail.

For the English woman had come with Clark, the frightened English boy. There was first a jeer and then a crowding to see her.

"What is this, then?" she cried sharply.

"We are taken, Mademoiselle," returned the master quietly. "That is all there is to it." He turned sternly to John Crackley whose leer upon the English woman boded no good for her. "I demand safety for this lady. Let her return to her cabin. Do you understand me—respect in all things?"

"Eh?" grunted the other. "We'll see to that. Mates—" he glanced uncertainly at his fellows upon whom there had come a curious silence at the captain's assumption of authority, even at this pass: "The woman—now—"

His voice was cut short by the tremendous explosion of a huge pistol upon the poop-deck above them all. A single figure was there, an unkempt, grotesque man who now was peering curiously into the muzzle of his smoking weapon. Every eye had been drawn to him with a start.

Jarvis' pale face, framed in his long, matted black hair, turned down to them.

"You see, I missed it—" he said plaintively.

"Jarvis," Burke, the deserter, croaked, "what's that?"

"The cabin skylight—at ten paces. Name o' God! If I am to be commodore, I will need practice. Some of you kindly reload my pistol."

There was a shout of amazed laughter from them. The deck lamp showed the English woman staring up at him; behind her, the prisoners of the quarterdeck. He came to the low rail and looked down.

Not at the lady who once looked back at him on the Esplanade. She might have been an unseen spectator over the footlights, and he the chief player at the center of the stage, taking his cue from an invisible prompter.

Neither did his old friends of the rue Royale, and of the smugglers' wine-shops of years agone, appear to exist in his eye. He shrugged, with an open palm down to the conspirators.

"Ho—Commodore!" They bawled up at him. "The word, Jarvis!"

The eye of Sazarac was coldly upon him. But to this friend of his old days, as irredeemable as these, he had the same blank stare as he had for Louise Lestron. As if they were not there—as if she was a mere ghost and he looking through her to the evil pack behind her.

Mademoiselle Lestron turned to the man she knew as Gaspar Sazarac, the gamester of Chartres street. "And this has come to you because of me, Monsieur?"

"It is worth a thousand mutinies. Never fear—the Spaniards hereabout are not all cutthroats. You—the ward of Carr, who is the secret agent of their king . . . why, what have you to fear from them, Mademoiselle Lestron?"

But old Beluche shook his head. It might be well at the Spaniards' hands for Mademoiselle Lestron of Quebec, and for the Count de Almonaster of New Orleans, descended from a line of Castilian viceroys of Louisiana; but for Jean Lafitte; for Beluche, of the Cartagenian rebels; Johanness, and the others who had harried the Mexican trade routes for thirty years—there was quick death in any port of New Spain for them all!

But she could not know. When the longboat was ready, and the crew made way silently for her, she turned to Sazarac with a sudden timid softness:

"Monsieur, something is due you from me! Could I not appeal to them—could you not regain command and sail with them—if I was put adrift?"

He smiled; but it was as if he did not care to look upon her. He was as one who had been given to see a beautiful vision, and before it had come an evil jester, a mocking voice to still the faint good he had sought.

De Almonaster had been watching. He followed her as the captain led the way. Near the rail the girl put her hand to Sazarac's sleeve.

"I am bewildered, Monsieur! It is as if you had given up much for me!"

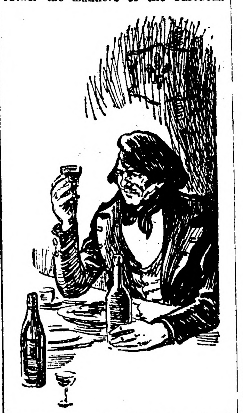
"I have given much up for you," he answered quietly. "The wreck of years—wild evil, infamy, which—God willing—you shall never know!"

She looked back at Count de Almonaster. His face was averted, but he must have heard. He was even a trifle cold to her as he helped her to the ladder.

On his honor De Almonaster would not speak his old boy's love to her when her ever questing eyes were going to the gamester, Sazarac—the mystery of Sazarac, the lure of Sazarac's promise that he would claim what he had won across Maspero's gaming table. She thought it very odd, even at this moment . . . the withdrawing of the two gentlemen from her interest, as if each was waiting, watching, for the other to conclude his play. Two rapiers drawn but withheld, perhaps, for the opponent to tie his shoe.

And with a sigh she followed. But her last glance back showed a glimpse down through the open skylight to the cabin of the emperor. The lamps were very bright there. She saw a slouched figure in the chair of the host. A pale tall man eating and drinking greedily as if with a rare appetite for the viands of the emperor's stores. He jammed his faded velvet cap closer over his eyes, and then his hand found something by the plate that had been next to Sazarac's—her own.

It was a bracelet which she remembered had become disengaged when she drank the health to the chair of the missing guest. The man lifted the gold trinket, examined it under the light—and kissed it. Then he fell to eating with rather the manners of the barroom.



The Emperor of the Bottle Was in the Chair of Sazarac.

The Emperor of the Bottle was in the chair of Sazarac . . . but after all, as was the way with him, when what he wanted was at his grasp, he could not take it. It was the same case as when he could not hit a window with his pistol at ten paces, or swagger his sword without the point catching in a hole of his stocking. He never would aim carefully enough, or wear his sword high enough . . . or love ruthlessly enough.

Outside he heard the splash of the oars waiting to take her away.

The lone guest in the emperor's suite could hear them descending to the longboat. There was a mutter when Johanness swung from the rail. But when old Gorgio, the sullen Catalan cutthroat of other days, the most bloody-minded of all the Black Petral's vanished crew, strode to the ladder, there was a yell.

"The old rib-sticker! He leaves us, mates!"

Gorgio eyed them with fierce disdain. "I sail with men," he growled: "no pothouse lawyers! Who o' ye all, ever put foot across a bloody deck, save Black Mike. Who, o' ye louts, sailed the old days with Jean and Pierre?"

There was a mutter, half amused, half of resentment, both from the exiles in the longboat and from the mutineers crowded at the rail. It suddenly appeared oddly clear to De Almonaster that not once, during the affair, had the name of Jean Lafitte been upon the lips of the most unruly of them all. It struck the count as very strange; he glanced at the girl on the seat before him wondering why the air had not rung with the most notorious name of the decades. Jean Lafitte himself, standing upright in the bow, silently watching the dim mysterious shore of savage Campeche, with its unconquered Indians, and still more ruthless Spanish captains holding every point of refuge, must have wondered.

"Monsieur Sazarac!" the girl cried suddenly, as if, with her own courage, to inspire hope in all the castaways, "I am glad to go! I have a feeling that these are now true men all!—for whatever venture lies ahead, I have no fear!"

The watching mutineers had been so silent that her clear voice carried far. It reached the lone banqueter at the emperor's table.

"Sazarac," he muttered. "Still Saz-a-rac. I, too, have my honor—he can still play Sazarac—the elegant and chivalrous Sazarac—to the end."

For in that one thing the jester had ruled the outlaw crew. He had soberly and stubbornly pleaded and insisted; he had even pointed his rusty, empty horse pistol at their grinning heads and ordained that the English woman must not be told the truth of Sazarac. He had sat in their council to plead for her life and the honor of his friend when he knew the mutiny could not be averted. He had won, and he had sent her away . . . still under the spell of Sazarac, the protecting arm of Sazarac.

Essential to Profitable Farming

The Utility Express Truck $550 Chassis Only f. o. b. Flint, Mich.

Fits any Standard Truck Body

No business can succeed unless its product is profitably sold. Most farms have a fine production department but no sales department. They grow crops and stock bought by buyers who set the price.

One of the chief reasons for this unprofitable situation is the average farmer's poor facilities for moving his crops or stock to the place where he can sell or ship to the best advantage. Because of the time and expense of horse delivery millions of dollars worth of produce spoils annually on American farms. The saving of this waste would, in many cases, change a losing farm to a money-maker.

This low-priced, high-grade, reliable truck was designed as a money-saver and money-maker for farmers and business houses needing fast low-cost haulage of heavy or bulky goods. It fits any standard type of ton truck body. Ask any Chevrolet dealer for price of the style of body you require.

THE PERIL OF EDISON-FORD'S MONEY SCHEME

Would Create More Paper Money Than Russia's Trillions But Add No Real Wealth.

SOME DANGEROUS FALLACIES

Would Remove Safe Restraint of Gold Basis and Open Way to Endless Issues of Paper Money.

How the United States would be swamped, under a greater volume of worthless paper money than has ruined Germany and Russia, by the Edison-Ford commodity currency plan is pointed out in the present article, concluding the reviews, prepared by the American Bankers Association, of the recent exposure of the folly of the whole scheme by William T. Foster, Director of the Pollack Foundation for Economic Research. Mr. Foster says:

"'The supply of money,' says Mr. Ford, 'is inadequate. There is more wealth than there is money to move it.' He draws a vivid picture of 'the golden dam to the stream of prosperity.' From a hundred quarters comes the demand for the government to speed up the printing presses, to order to crush 'the money monopoly,' reduce interest rates, and make it easier for everybody to get money.

"Inflating the currency, however, though it enables people to get more units of currency, does not enable them to obtain more purchasing power, and it does not reduce interest rates. In all her history Germany never had so much money or as high interest rates as in 1922. Money, unlike other forms of wealth, is not easier to obtain simply because the total supply is increased. On the contrary, increasing the supply of money ordinarily increases the demand for money, and interest rates depend not on supply but on the relation between supply and demand.

A Dangerous Fallacy

"We are assured, however, that the Ford-Edison plan provides money for the farmer at virtually no expense to the government or to anyone else. All the government has to do is to print the money. What could be simpler? Here we come to the most dangerous fallacy in the whole project. It is dangerous because of the universal desire to get something for nothing.

"Here is the gist of the matter: Money will buy whatever is produced, not a particle more by any trick of alchemy, or legislation, or finance. The Russians, having multiplied their money 257,000 times, cannot buy as much with it as before. When we print more money there are no more goods for money to buy; not a single additional plow, or hat, or potato.

"Some of those who get the newly printed money can buy more goods than before; all other people can buy fewer goods than before, because their money has fallen off in purchasing power. Since there are no more plows, and hats, and potatoes, and so on, to distribute, if some people get more, others must get less.

"Inflation under the Edison plan is limited mainly because, on account of its indefensible discrimination, most groups of producers of goods and services are not allowed to participate. If all groups were included, as in fairness and in politics they would have to be eventually, the posibilities of inflation would be vast.

The Deadly Spiral

"The total income of the United States is now in excess of fifty billions of dollars. The total money in circulation, including bank deposits subject to check, is not far from twenty-five billions. It follows that the annual production, if used as a basis for new issues on the Edison plan, could at once greatly increase the volume of money in circulation. Every addition to the monetary supply would tend to raise prices. The higher prices became, the higher would be the loan value of a given volume of goods since the size of the loans is based on values and not volume. The greater, therefore, would be the volume of new money that could be issued on the basis of a given annual production. Prices would become still higher; and so on up an endless spiral.

"Even in Russia, where financial printing presses hold the world's record for volume, where new issues of two hundred trillions of rubles per month stagger the imagination, the people complain that 'there is not enough money to do business with.' Without the arbitrary restraint of the gold basis, and with Muscle Shoals inflationists, and sundry other kinds of inflationists constantly pressing their claims upon Congress, it is not at all certain that the United States, once well on the road to financial chaos, would in the end be outrun by Russia."

Labor—that's the Big Cost in Painting

LABOR accounts for about three-quarters of the entire cost of a painting job. Materials cost only about one-quarter—so the possible saving in cost between the best and the cheaper materials is not worth consideration.

And by specifying the best paint, and getting years of extra wear, you save the big labor cost of frequent re-painting. You get the most economical job in the end.

PATTON'S Sun-Proof PAINT

Dig New Bed for Isar River.

By changing the course of the Middle Isar river, Bavaria expects to make possible the development of an electric current totaling 480,000,000 watt hours a year, an output that will put the plant among the largest of the world. It is estimated that this use of water power will result in a saving of 500,000 tons of coal annually. In digging the river's new channel, 7,000 men were employed.

How's Your Blood?
Do You Need a Tonic?

Helena, Mont.—"Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal as a blood tonic or as a liver and stomach medicine. I was in very bad physical condition, due to having liver trouble and gastric stomach condition. My food did not digest properly, would ferment, and gas would form, giving me great distress. I also suffered with severe bilious headaches and my blood was in an impoverished state. By the use of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' I was relieved of all these conditions which had caused me so much trouble and distress. My liver became active, my food digested well, my blood was good and I felt like a new man."—Joseph A. Widmer, 307 Hoback St.

CHAPTER XIV

A Flower for a Ragged Fellow.

The longboat made a shallow pass between two curving reefs of dreary sand, rising to wind-twisted mangrove clumps at the higher points, and was beached in a quiet lagoon. The red sunrise found them there marooned; silent men wandering over the waterless spaces and then coming back near to a shelter canvas which had been roped to the bushes for Mademoiselle Lestron. Then the last lieutenants of Lafitte sat apart to discuss the matter.

The Seraphine lay plainly visible west and north, her sails idle and a flat, smooth coastal tide between.

"She'll be beating off with the morning breeze," growled Bohon. "How much water did Crackley leave to us?"

"Two casks; bread and the salt horse for three days—no more. We count six muskets and twelve pistols. When the Indians put off from the woods to spy us out we can hold 'em off a bit."

"Aye, for what? Where's a river mouth to make?"

"There is none the Spaniards do not hold. There is no cove either way where you would not find the king's men. The rest is jungle. . . . What does the captain say to it?"

Old Dominique puffed his long pipe tranquilly.

"What does Captain Jean make of it?" repeated Bohon to them.

"There is nothing to make of it," returned the alderman. "Eh, bien! A little while of waiting—a day or two, old robbers, in the sun and without water. At that, something will be tried. Leave it to Jean that something will be tried for ye all. The lady is at breakfast with the captain," he muttered irrelevantly. "He has toasted the bread—he has made the coffee himself for the English lady. Name o' G—d!—I have witnessed that!"

"Captain Sazarac is calling to you," observed the count. "Now, go, all—there is a message."

They went slowly, trudging through the sands with dry muttered jests and hopeless prophecies. Men, for the most part, past the prime of life; some heavy, indeed, with years, coming before their captain with an endeavor to assume a sprightly seaman's bearing. Faithful, rugged, implacable faces—adventurers who had given their wild youth to him.

"It is in my mind to put the English lady and my friend, Monsieur de Almonaster, in the way of safety," said the chief quietly. "There is a chance for them. The rest—I, and you—" He stopped and smiled at them.

"There was a shout. "I—and you!" Jean with them? Nez Coupe came closer, tying tight the bloody silken head scarf about his seal-brown skull. His wound-wrecked face took a ghastly grin. They would then still be rid of the English woman by some miracle! Jean would shake free of his burden of the English woman . . . and be with them once again?

"It can be established that Monsieur de Almonaster is of Spanish lineage; and that Mademoiselle Lestron is of a mission that was working in the pay of the Spanish king—" went on Captain Sazarac evenly. "If, then—they could reach a ship—it is probable they would find refuge. The rest—"

And again the shout of grim humor cut him off. The rest! Why, the rest could expect the reef, the tropic sun . . . and their captain! Still their sour, hopeless humor. Certainly there was nothing for the rest of them!

But now the English woman came out of the hot little shelter. "Now, you will listen to me, also, men of the Seraphine!" she cried suddenly. "To me as well as to your captain! Surely there is a way for us after these treacherous mutineers put off with the schooner! Surely, I know your faithfulness to him and to your ship! What is there to fear for seamen who serve loyally their master and their ship?"

They listened curiously. Monsieur the captain pushed back the iron-gray hair from his temple and listened. It was as if he had heard it all and had no more answer than they.

"See, you!" The girl went on hotly. "Monsieur Sazarac, playing the part of a patriot to his adopted country! I—an English Tory—can testify to that! The attack upon the Genaron—surely I can swear to the admiralty of my country, that it was done for me—in all honor. Monsieur Sazarac's honor—"

There was a stir among them—then the silence again. Old Dominique sighed. The honor of Sazarac . . . the word of Captain Sazarac to the admiralties that his men were good and true!

"For me—in all honor. By you all—honorable men—"

Again she was puzzled by their stir and murmur. The grim Baratarians rubbed their heads in doubt themselves. Beluche walked away and began to cut at the grass with his saber, idly. Nez Coupe joined him, feeling of his wreck of a nose.

The English woman knew she was failing with them. Monsieur Sazarac was looking at her pityingly. Monsieur de Almonaster, with folded arms, quietly attentive, his calm face unreadable.

And suddenly this dull impasse was cut through with a shout. Gorgio, on the highest dune, was pointing seaward. "She is coming in! She is making the inlet wi' tide and tops'll air!"

The Seraphine was moving. Then there was another shout. Above her, in the misty offing, another sail showed, dimly and slowly under way.

"The Spanish frigate, sir!" cried Bohon. "Standing in close as she dares, to look the schooner over! Crackley must ha' hammered her rudder on the bar last night—I see a false rig over her end. She's fouled, and he's laying her up in the wooded river out o' the king's big guns!"

De Almonaster shrugged; it meant the end of flight or hiding for those marooned on the open reef. "Ah, well!—" he glanced about: "Mademoiselle, our honorable gentlemen may well look aghast!" He laughed, but to the chief he muttered: "Monsieur Sazarac, we might as well build a fort in the sands and sell our lives dearly. If not the Spaniards, it will be the Campeche savages coming out upon us. If not them, starvation and the sun in a few days. There is no water on this reef, Monsieur!"

Mademoiselle had listened. De Almonaster's tone was light, as if both the gentlemen were affecting a debonair nonchalance for her sake. Monsieur Sazarac's shrug was of delicate dissent to discuss their lives end in her presence. Then he smiled distantly:

"You will recall the instruction I once gave? You were to be my prisoner, Monsieur, in event the Seraphine was taken on the seas? You were to be as one held to an unlawful affair against your will—"

"For Me—In All Honor. By You All—Honorable Men—"

De Almonaster flushed to his eyes: "Monsieur! Do you think that I—" he stopped. Sazarac could not offer him life lightly in her presence!

"Undoubtedly the Spaniard will accept you and Mademoiselle Lestron. Monsieur Dominique, also—a municipal officer of New Orleans . . . there is no reason why the Spaniards should not receive and protect you."

"And you?" The younger man could not help the whispered question.

"I take it that the Spaniards will attack the Seraphine in those woods and leave no soul living on her. I assume that the mouth of every scoundrel on her will be closed by death. Then you—with Mademoiselle Lestron to the frigate—and say that you were marooned by the buccaneers, and claiming protection. Why, the Spanish governor at Merida, or Vera Cruz, must know of Carr's plot! Surely he would welcome Mademoiselle Lestron and her friends!"

"Why, are you not, Monsieur, also my friend, and protected with me?" the girl cried wonderingly. "It is, indeed, a fair story—an intrigue to save us all! Why did I not think the Spaniards would protect us when they will suppose that I am still in the plot of Carr's purpose to aid their schemes? Messieurs, I can safeguard you all to Vera Cruz with that plea!"

They all heard her. But a silence fell. The girl looked eagerly from one weathered face to another of Monsieur Sazarac's few followers. Suddenly Monsieur Sazarac laughed again. Aloud and clearly. He arose and adjusted his neckerchief. There was a gasp, a grumbling bewilderment, and then laughter from all the old buccaneers. They slapped each other on the shoulders, grinning knowingly at their chief.

"My compliments to the lady!" shouted Johanness, "but the climate o' Vera Cruz—my lungs are delicate!"

"And I mind that I might have a humor o' the blood were I there!" mocked Bohon.

"My head—" complained the sour Nez Coupe, "the rest of it might go a-twist at sight of the governor's castle!"

Mademoiselle turned to the captain hotly: "What is this jesting?"

"They mean no disrespect." He motioned to the grinning crew with a serious affection: "Now, get you gone, fellows! See that our wine and little water is stored from the sun. Work the longboat closer in on the tide."

"Sazarac!" they shouted in hoarse laughter and went to obey him.

He saw the hurt pride in her eyes, and the old wonder at his evasion.

She turned to De Almonaster with a pathetic little gesture of despair at the moods of Monsieur Sazarac. She could not understand. She sat drawing figures in the sand, and when she raised her dark eyes, to watch the tall figure out by the sun-wash on the shoals, the young man saw the great tears in them which she presently wiped away.

She dried her eyes with a final, resolute little sob. "Monsieur, do you know—well, once, he came for me . . . it was on the staircase of a court—the Hotel Orleans, and very late. He was going from me, and he had been all chivalry. He turned away, allowing Colonel Carr to boast that Sazarac would not fight, because he wished to spare my name. He said—ah, it was a silly thing for me to do!—but I dropped a flower to him as he left . . . and another man stumbled from the shadows and picked it up."

"Another man?" echoed De Almonaster.

"That was before you had come to me, Raoul, on the Seraphine. As to the other man, that was no matter. I suppose a beggar in the courtyard caught my camellia. I don't know—it was silly to throw a flower to Sazarac, the river gamester . . . I was hot with shame afterward at doing so. But if he had caught it . . . Ah, well! I thank Heaven he never knew it!—after I found myself in his hands upon the Seraphine! The ragged fellow who caught it stared up once and then hurried after Monsieur Sazarac. At the area-arch he turned. It appeared he tried to pose as a—lover, and then he fell over his own foot, or something, very absurdly!"

"A ragged fellow," muttered De Almonaster.

"Like one of these old tattered followers. A ghost of a man fading into moonlight!"

A shout arose from the exiles who were dragging the longboat nearer in the shoals. Monsieur Sazarac had paused half-way to them. He saw what had hitherto been hidden by a low spit of sand.

Five armed boats had drawn inshore, coming from the distant Spanish frigate, without doubt. They had crept unnoticed by the refugees on the reef until they were fair in the break of forest wall where there had been the last glimpse of the Seraphine's snowy sail.

"Do you see, Monsieur de Almonaster?" said the chief of the exiles quietly. "It was as I reasoned. The schooner will be taken this night. It is what one would greatly desire. The dons will have no quarter for Crackley's men—there is no escape for them in the river jungle. After the affair, sir—you are to go with Mademoiselle and parley with the Spanish captain."

"And you?" mademoiselle cried again breathlessly and sprang upon the sands. "You and your men cannot stay here to die!"

Monsieur Sazarac smiled with a high serenity. "The sea is wide, Mademoiselle Lestron. Wide, and far is the way to its secret places. I have a mind I said this once to you. O little place in the sea—a secret place, where a secret may be buried, Mademoiselle." He turned to the younger man: "You will make ready to go, Monsieur, when the hour comes. There are two black men of our company who can pull the longboat for you under a flag of truce . . . two black serving men who will not find the air of Vera Cruz conducive to a fatal malady. The rest of us, I fear, must do without the ministrations of the Spanish viceroy's physician as long as we can—possibly a day or so more, ere the doctor calls for us."

His smile still lingered when De Almonaster came closer, torn by a wild bitterness which he, himself, could not fathom. "Jean," he whispered: "I have not spoken. The choice is hers between you and me—and she might save you from Murillo's men! She might plead with the viceroy that she loved you—even Lafitte of the black flag!"

"That is a jest," murmured Sazarac absently, "worthy of John Jarvis, who played the clown to betray me—a plea for Lafitte's life to Murillo!"

Proud Owner.

An Augusta (Maine) man has a shiny new car. One day the radiator overflowed and left rust all over the front of the car. Whereupon the proud owner drew a $5 bill from his pocket and wiped off the stains. Needless to say, he returned it to his pocket after the job was finished and he had shaken the dust from the bill.

Love's Status.

Love is the business of the idle, but the idleness of the busy.—Anonymous.

CHILDLESS HOMES MADE HAPPY

Presence of Little Ones a Great Blessing

Four Interesting Letters

Cortland, N. Y.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because I was weak and wanted to become strong and have a child. My husband read about it in the 'Cortland Standard' and thought it might help me. It certainly did for I now have a lovely boy fifteen months old who weighs forty pounds. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to my friends and you can certainly use my testimonial in your little books and in the newspapers, as it might help to make some other childless home happy by the presence of little ones as it has done mine."—Mrs. CLAUDE P. CANFIELD, 10 Salisbury St., Cortland, N. Y.

A Message to Mothers

Hamilton, Ohio.—"I have known about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound since girlhood, having taken it when I was younger and suffering from a weakness and backache. Lately I have taken it again to strengthen me before the birth of my child, as I was troubled with pains in my back and a lifeless, weak feeling. I think if mothers would only take your wonderful medicine they would not dread childbirth as they do. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to every woman."—Mrs. JOS. FALCOIN, JR., 552 S. 11th Street, Hamilton, Ohio.

St. Louis, Mo.—"I want to tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me seven years ago. I was run down and had a weakness such as women often have. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and after being married sixteen years became the mother of a sweet little girl. I now have four lovely children—three fine boys and the little girl six years old. I had longed for children all the while and wept many a day and envied every woman with a child. I was 36 years old when my first baby was born. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to any woman who is ailing with female weakness."—Mrs. J. NAUMANN, 1517 Benton St., St. Louis, Mo.

Was Weak and Run Down

St. Louis, Mo.—"My mother took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when I was a girl, and when I was troubled with cramps I took it, and later when I married I again took it to make me strong as the doctor said I was weak and run-down and could not have children. I took it and got along fine and now I have three girls. So you know why I keep the Compound in the house. I am a well woman and do my work and sewing too."—Mrs. JULIUS HARTMAN, 2501 W. Dodier St., St. Louis, Mo.

Edible Drinking Cup Appears.

With the increase in popularity of water ices among patrons of refreshment pushcarts, ball park caterers and other venders the edible drinking cup is appearing. It is of graham cracker ingredients and some are lined with chocolate.

Early in the season water ices were served in paper or paraffin cups. As these were not consumable they created a problem of litter. The new kind of cup, like the cone for ice cream, provides a cake for the water ice. It is also finding a field as a container and accompaniment for soft drinks.—New York Sun and Globe.

A Three-Year-Old's Ambition.

Little Sam Miller, aged three, son of Sidney Miller of Rainbow fame, has an eye to the future and will no doubt follow in the steps of his father should war come.

When his father was arraying himself in the panoply of war in preparation for the Rainbow parade, little Sam was a most interested spectator. He noted the well-pressed khaki suit, and the Sam Browne belt neatly adjusted, the overseas cap well on one side of the head, and sighed. Running over to his mother he said:

"Honey, I wish I could grow big feet and be a Rainbow."

Population of Canada.

The population of Canada is about equally divided between city dwellers and country dwellers. The total urban population is given as 4,352,773 and the total rural population 4,435,710. In Prince Edward Island and Saskatchewan the rural population runs about 75 per cent of the whole.

Auto Ads Take Freak Shapes.

For advertising purposes the wild business getter has never overlooked the possibilities of the automobile. Many are the cars with big painted signs on them proclaiming the advantages of some one's particular flour or the merits of so and so's cheese. They attract considerable attention, but in no way nearly as much as those freak-bodied automobiles designed to resemble a bottle or a shoe, or some such thing with the driver's compartment carefully concealed inside. Most of these are familiar sights, but it remained for a most novel of all—a miniature house on wheels. Perfect in every exterior detail, it represents a suburban residence, and when first sighted coming around a corner is startling.—New York Sun and Globe.

Why Not?

If certain medicinal spring waters benefit human beings why should they not be good for horses who have similar bodily structures? So thought a well-known English horse trainer and his ailing horses at Doncaster are now being supplied with water from the famous Harrogate springs, in spite of laughter of his friends. Did not Epsom salts originate in a spring near the famous race course at Epsom? And is there any significance in that fact?

The Flaw.

"I suppose you are very happy?"

"Yes," sobbed the bride, "but I could be happier. If my husband would only want to do the things I want to do, and never want to do the things he wants to do I think life would be perfect."

Why take the risk?

MANY have found by their own experience that coffee's effect is harmful. Health authorities warn against risking the growth and development of children with the drug element in coffee.

Why take chances with your health, and thus risk comfort, happiness—success?

Had a Season Ticket.

Two brothers had lived in a village near Aberdeen and had traveled to town to business every day by train. Not long ago one of them died, and the other decided to have the coffin containing the body conveyed by train to the city.

He sought the advice of the stationmaster, and was told that he would have to procure a special ticket.

"A special ticket," he gasped in dismay. "What would I do that for? His season ticket hasn't expired yet!"

News Briefs from All the State

Condensed Stories of Happenings of the Week in Minnesota

Mankato—Sixty thousand watermelons have been produced this season by George Macomber of Rapidan.

Mankato—North Mankato has had the greatest amount of building in any one year in its history this season.

Chisholm—A. R. Syme, attorney, named by Mike Holm, secretary of state, to take a special census of Chisholm, has started the work.

Moorhead—H. A. Johnson of Moorhead was elected president of the Clay County Bankers' association at the annual meeting here.

Red Wing—The 1924 budget of the city of Red Wing has been slashed almost $14,000 below that of this year, and is due for still further cuts, according to indications.

Tracy—The board of education has cut the school tax levy $2,500 for the ensuing year. A similar cut was made in the levy last year.

Windom—A picnic dinner, business session and entertainment program will feature the annual meeting of the Old Settlers' association of Cottonwood county to be held.

Austin—R. M. Loeffler, special assessor for the Minnesota tax commission, is in Austin to make a reassessment of moneys and credits for the current year.

Duluth—The sangerfest of the northwest division of the American Union of Swedish singers came to a close here. Fifteen hundred persons attended the final performance.

Hibbing—Retrenchment in public expenditures has hit Hibbing with a vengeance. As the first move 100 employes of various village departments have been cut off the payroll. This will cut the payroll almost in half.

Sandstone—Three persons were seriously inured when Great Northern passenger train No. 24, running between Minneapolis and Duluth crashed head on into a freight engine in the railroad yards here.

Willmar—A crew of 22 men are at work for the Northwestern Telephone company in taking down all telephone poles in the business section and along the new pavement. The wiring is being installed underground.

Mankato—This city has been made defendant in an action to recover $7,500 in a suit filed by John F. Wilson of Minneapolis, for the death of his 10 years old daughter, Anna, by drowning at Mankato July 22 last, in the Minnesota river.

New Ulm—A 2,500 candlepower electric light has been installed on the Hermann monument on Hermann heights here. In addition to lighting the Tourist park the light can be seen by tourists for many miles before they reach New Ulm.

Ortonville—A special election has been ordered here to pass upon the issuance of bonds to the amount of $20,000 to be used in constructing an armory and community building. If the bonds are voted, the state will add $25,000 to the amount of the local bonds.

Granite Falls—Because of the high figures in 30 bids received for digging the so-called "million-dollar ditch" projected for this section, it was decided to advertise for new bids. The scope of the ditch as first proposed has been shortened so that it is hoped to bring cost of construction and damages to approximately $500,000.

Ortonville—As an incentive for pupils to keep up their school work at all times, a plan has been announced in the city schools, which will prove popular, it is believed. All pupils who have an average of 95 per cent in their work will be relieved of taking final examinations at the close of each term of school.

Luverne—More than 300 persons, representing 13 counties, were present at the fourth semiannual convention of the Southwestern Minnesota Fire association here. Representatives from Iowa and South Dakota fire departments were also present to study fire fighting apparatus.

Granite Falls—On a half-acre tract near here which had always been considered worthless because it contained a peat bed, Burt Sebring has raised an enormous crop of celery this year. The crop is now being cut and placed on the market and a profit or at least $700 is expected from the supposed worthless half acre.

Virginia—Characterizing the advancement of training in the last three decades as the product of increased facilities for learning and a greater demand for education, J. C. Brown, president of the St. Cloud Teachers' school, as principal speaker on the opening program of the northwest division of the Minnesota Educational association, pleaded for better qualified teachers and the uplifting of the general standard of education.

Winnebago—Fred Blowers, who this season raised cucumbers as a test crop on less than an acre of land, reports his crop netted him at the rate of $1,184 an acre. The raising of cucumbers has not previously had a fair trial in this section, he says.

St. Paul—Samuel B Wilson of Mankato has begun his term as chief justice of the Minnesota Supreme court. His appointment to succeed the late Calvin L. Brown of Minneapolis was announced by Governor Preus, and the oath of office was administered in the office of Associate Justice Albert Johnson and C. M. Tifft, of Glencoe, present to handle cases, the October term of court was opened here with 105 cases on the calendar.

Red Wing—With District Judge Albert Johnson and C. M. Tifft, of Glencoe, present to handle cases, the October term of court was opened here with 105 cases on the calendar.

Mankato — Byron Hughes, prominent attorney in this section of Minnesota died suddenly at Wells, while attending a Knights of Pythias lodge meeting.

Couderay—A 125-room hotel is being planned for the Victory Heights Catholic summer colony on Lake Couderay.

Mankato—Recently foreman of road gangs working on state highways have reported thefts of large quantities of gas from tanks belonging to the highway department.

Fergus Falls—The general store of A. Hennenfent at Foxhome, 15 miles west of here, was destroyed by fire, causing a loss estimated at $6,500. Origin of the fire is not known.

Sauk Rapids—The new Catholic church of the Sacred Heart was dedicated here. Rt. Rev. Joseph A. Busch, bishop of the St. Cloud diocese, officiated, assisted by a number of priests of this and other states.

Willmar—More than 200 delegates are attending the convention of the women's nonpartisan clubs of the Seventh Minnesota congressional district which opened here. Miss Lily Anderson, of Franklin, is presiding.

Shakopee — George Roulard, an Indian, charged with grand larceny, who escaped from jail at Center, Neb., about a month ago, was taken into custody here by Sheriff Joseph C. Weckman of Scott county.

Litchfield—One man was killed and another seriously injured when a fast freight train on the Great Northern railroad crashed through an open switch at the west end of the railroad yards here.

Waseca—The annual show of the Waseca County Poultry association will be held Nov. 22, 23 and 24, it was announced following the annual meeting. Professor A. C. Smith of the college of agriculture, University of Minnesota, will judge the show at Janesville.

Pipestone—William Knute, aged 27, of Trotsky, Minn., was electrocuted here when he attempted to push his car from an electric light post into which he had driven in a severe rainstorm.

New Ulm—Harold F. McCormick, chairman of the board of directors of the International Harvester company of Chicago, is in this city as a witness in the suit for the partition of an 800 acre farm in Lamberton township, Redwood county.

Austin—The Austin city council has tentatively accepted a bid to install a complete sewage plant for the sum of $289,755, and instructed the mayor and the chairman of the finance committee to go after services of an attorney to ascertain the rights of the city.

Litchfield—Active steps toward marketing 4,000,000 pounds of butter a year, under one label, all of a standard grade, will be begun in a month by the Minnesota Co-operative Creameries association to establish Minnesota butter as the national standard.

Northfield—One of the most powerful radio broadcasting stations in the state is being installed at Carleton college, and will be completed for service about December 1. The new equipment will be rated as a 650-watt installation and its range will be from 300 miles during the daytime to 800 miles at night.

Litchfield—The body of G. H. Palmer, fireman on the east bound Great Northern fruit train which left the rails here, was found in the wreckage and was returned to his home in Willmar for burial. Palmer was killed when he jumped from his cab and was buried in a mass of wreckage.

Owatonna—Steele county farm women, through the agency of the home department of the county farm bureau, are making provisions for the serving of hot lunches to pupils in rural schools of the county. The movement is expected to better health conditions.

Crookston — C. H. Zealand, chairman of the Polk county committee engaged in signing potato raisers to co-operative selling contracts, expresses confidence that the necessary 20,000 acres will be signed up. To date about 10,000 acres have been placed under contracts and with a dozen meetings yet to be conducted it is expected the second 10,000 acres will be obtained.

Hibbing — Work of stripping the famous "North Forty" in Hibbing was started when one steam shovel was moved to the west side of the long disputed tract. This is the first actual work done by mining companies in preparation for mining operations and comes as a result of the court's decision, referring the case to the state supreme court.

Faribault—John Derham, holder of the mortgage for $3,500 on the grounds of the Faribault agricultural and fair association has started proceedings to foreclose his mortgage. Simultaneously with the bringing of the suit, Mr. Derham has offered the city an option to buy for the amount of the mortgage, taxes due and interest and legal expense incurred.

Albert Lea—The Freeborn County farm bureau, with the backing of the four dairy breeders' associations in the county, will hold a co-operative sale of about 125 head of high-grade dairy cattle Wednesday, October 31, at the fair grounds here.

Minneapolis—Radio fans will tune in on WLAG, the Twin City station at 1 p. m. standard time Monday Oct. 15, to listen to David Lloyd George, war time premier of Great Britain. It will be the first address made in the United States by the former premier who comes to Min-

NURSE FINDS A PERFECT REMEDY

"From my long experience as a nurse I do not hesitate to say that I consider Tanlac Nature's most perfect remedy," recently declared Mrs. I. A. Borden, 425 Pontius Ave., Seattle, Wash. Mrs. Borden is a graduate of the National Temperance Hospital, Chicago, and her wide experience in caring for the sick lends particular emphasis to her statement.

"I have used Tanlac exclusively for seven years in the treatment of my charity patients," continued Mrs. Borden, "and my experience has been that, for keeping the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels functioning properly and for toning up the system in general, Tanlac has no equal. Recently I had a woman patient who could not even keep water on her stomach for fifteen minutes. Six bottles of Tanlac fixed her up so she could eat absolutely anything. Another patient, a man, seemed unable to digest any food at all. Three bottles of Tanlac put him in such fine shape he went back to work. These two cases are typical. My confidence in Tanlac is unlimited."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists. Take no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.—Advertisement.

France May Subsidize "Movies."

The government of France has always been a ready friend to art, so it is not surprising that the motion picture has been included in the official family. Although a state subsidy has not yet been given the industry a "comite Francaise du cinema" has been created by the minister of public instruction, who has himself accepted the honorary presidency of it. The president of the committee is Paul Leon, director of fine arts.

DAM RIVER TO STOP FLOOD

Barrage Type Constructed in South Africa to Prevent Collecting of Mud in Reservoir.

After seven years of building, a dam that stops a 40-mile river in South Africa was recently completed. A barrage type was chosen to prevent collecting of mud and earth in the reservoir and to avoid flooding of private property on the river banks. In the average year enough dirt is carried down this river to cover 720 acres a depth of six inches. Passing through tanks and filters and being treated with chemicals clears the water. Thirty-six sluice gates control the huge barrage, 1,400 feet long. When full, the depth of the water will be 25 feet. At the formal opening a British prince officiated.—Popular Mechanics.

Different.

The comedy cinema actor stopped a man he knew. "Look here," he began, "I understand you said last night that I have no sense of humor. A remark of that kind, made publicly, in the presence of other people, is very damaging to a man in my position, and—"

"Hold on," interrupted the other. "I never said you had no sense of humor. What I said was that you had no sense of honor."

"Ah!" beamed the actor. "I thought there must be some mistake. I felt certain you would never run down a pal behind his back."

Carrying Scandals.

To carry scandals and evil reports to others is like poisoning the water you would give them to drink.

Detours Bring Customers.

The motoring public is frequently annoyed by signs marked "Detour" which compel them to leave a good road for a bad one for some distance. They are even more annoyed when the new route is not properly marked out and as a result they sometimes get temporarily lost. A small boy upstate, quick to grasp the situation, fashioned a few detour signs of his own which he erected and which diverted traffic by his father's house.

Then he built in his front yard a small stand at which he sold ginger ale and lemonade to the thirsty and weary travelers and did a good business until the authorities removed the signs and the street once again became a rarely traveled thoroughfare.—New York Sun and Globe.

What a Mean Slap!

Poet—Would that my muse might soar aloft and, cleaving the empyrean blue, find words to sing the glories of your hair of burnished gold.

Maiden — (Titian-haired, but prosaic): That sounds very pretty, Mr. Scribbler, but do you know the difference between your poems and my hair?

Poet—Ah, a conundrum. I give it up. What is the difference, O fairest of your sex?

Maiden—Well, my hair's red.—Stray Stories.

Some of the things you ought to know can be learned in no other way than by reading the advertisements.

Sure to Come Back.

"Sir Basil Zaharof, who has succeeded the Blanc family as the principal owner of Monte Carlo," said a Chicagoan, "took me one night through the gorgeous gambling rooms of the Monte Carlo casino. We halted a while at a roulette table. An Englishman was winning tremendously there. Finally the man cashed in.

"'Goodness!' I said. 'What a haul that lucky bird has made!'

"'Oh,' said Sir Basil, 'that's nothing. It makes no difference to the Casino. It's just a bit of our money sleeping out for the night.'"—Chicago Daily News.

Technicality.

An alleged dope peddler in Frisco had his stomach pumped by government officials to see if he had swallowed any dope. Now he claims his rights were violated because he was forced to give evidence against himself.

Utilize a Hot Spring.

Heat from a hot spring in the Pyrenees equivalent to a ton of coal an hour is being used by a French fruit raiser to force fruits so that they can be gathered for the market before their regular time.

Swiss Adopt Signal System.

The installation of an electrically operated signal system on the Swiss government railways is said to be the first for that class of service in Europe.

A Simple Guide to Proper Food Selection

Nourishment— Grape-Nuts with cream or good milk contains every element necessary for perfect nutrition.
Digestibility— Grape-Nuts is partially pre-digested by 20 hours' baking. It is easily assimilated by child or adult.
Flavor— Grape-Nuts, made of wheat and barley, is sweet with natural sugar self-developed from the grain in the making. It has a delightful, nut-like flavor.
Character— Grape-Nuts is real food—the kind you can depend upon for strength and energy. Its crisp granules invite thorough mastication, thus helping to keep the teeth and gums healthy.
Economy Grape-Nuts is so compact that a package contains many servings; and each serving provides unusual nourishment. A portion for the cereal part of a meal costs about one cent.

GREAT NORTHERN
Prepares
For Busy Season

The territory served by the Great Northern Railway harvests its crops and ships to market its heaviest load in the fall season.

This year the Great Northern is prepared to handle a larger traffic than ever before. It has purchased nearly a hundred large, new locomotives of the most modern type, as well as four thousand new freight cars; it has built new track and improved old; it is equipped to do the people's work well. A supply of cars is one of the important elements in this preparation. The Great Northern not only owns ample equipment for the crop moving season, but it has these cars on its own lines ready for business and in excellent condition. Here is the actual record:

	Owned by Great Northern	On Great Northern Lines
Box Cars (including automobile and furn. cars)	32,572	34,046
Stock Cars	1,893	1,946
Refrigerator Cars	5,508	9,352
Other Freight Cars	18,926	20,315
Total Freight Cars	58,899	65,659

So prepared the Great Northern is confident that it can give adequate service to the Northwest throughout the busiest season of the year. It appreciates your patronage and asks, in your own and its interest, that you help it to

On Thursday of last week, Mrs. Geo. Smith and a number of her school pupils made an inspection of the Marshall County State Bank to study banking in its every day operation. Mr. Lund, cashier, gave instruction on the operation of the checks and deposits, showing how they were entered on the bank records by the posting machine. They visited every department in the bank, the offices, the bookkeeping Dept. and the vault. The pupils were required to give a report in writing of their visit to the bank, and a number of copies will be published in the Holt Weekly.

A Pleasant Surprise Party

Mr. and Mrs. Ole C. Johnson were pleasantly surprised by many of their Holt friends on the evening of October 12th. at the Lund Home. The occasion for the surprise was the fact that Ole C. Johnson and Elvina Sollom are married and have been married since the 15th. of September. No one seemed to have taken the matter seriously when Ole Johnson had stated on several occasion that he was a "Married man", until the records in Warren were investigated and the truth made known. They were presented with a purse of money as a token of remembrance. All reported an enjoyable evening spent. Although the congratulations are a little late, they are the no less hearty.

MAYOR THOMASON PRAISES TANLAC

Judge George Washington Thomason, Mayor of Tarrant City, Ala., and one of the most highly respected citizens of the state, is still another man of prominence and unimpeachable integrity to give his unqualified endorsement to Tanlac.

"Chronic indigestion brought me to the verge of a general break-down three years ago and nothing seemed to afford much relief," said Judge Thomason. "I could hardly eat enough to keep going, and became so weak and nervous I could hardly attend to my duties.

"Finally I started on Tanlac and six bottles fixed me up so fine that I felt ten years younger, and my good health still remains with me."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists. Take no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.—Advertisement.

Poetic Interpretation.

Poetry interprets in two ways: It interprets by expressing with magical felicity the physiognomy and movement of the outer world, and it interprets by expressing, with inspired conviction, the ideas and laws of the inward world of man's moral and spiritual nature. In other words, poetry is interpretive both by having natural magic in it, and by having moral profundity.—Matthew Arnold.

CHAPTER XV

The Bottle Emperor Returns.

Across the mile-wide lagoon in the still hot dusk the last buccaneers of Lafitte listened to the battle in the forest river—the rattle of musketry, and then the boom of the Seraphine's carronades. And strange as it fell out, the castaways wished for the Spaniards to win. They had no hope of escape for themselves, but their hatred of Crackley's mutineers was stronger than their hereditary feud with the sea power of the Spanish king.

So the fugitives lay and listened to the distant battle for the rescue ship of Bonaparte. At times, behind the fringe of forest swamp, arose the crash of musket fire, and then the bark of the Seraphine's guns. And presently this last ceased; the ragged volleys of small arms burst irregularly, died out, renewed; became single shots blotted out by the tropic silence. The Catalan swung to his feet and tied his bloody head scarf tighter.

"I say it is the end. Murillo's men are swarming over." It seemed that a faint burst of cheering came from under the landward stars. Nez Coupe beckoned to his fellows. "The captain will want the word back at the lady's shelter tent. He will send her and the young gentleman to intercept the Spaniards' boats when they come out the pass to regain the frigate. Now, watch for the fire behind the trees—ye see the red ghost of a good ship!"

But presently the captain, himself, and Beluche, the admiral, came through the deep sand and great hummocks to this outlying point of the reef.

"You make out that the affair is done?" inquired the former. "No, there is a shot."

They waited silently. The low murmur of the gentle surf on the outer fringe of sand was all the sound upon the utter calm of the night.

"It is over," muttered Bohon. "I would have given my right hand to have seen Crackley cutlassed and flung to the sharks. And Jarvis, the fool—gibing them to the last! The wastrel had his sea fight, eh?"

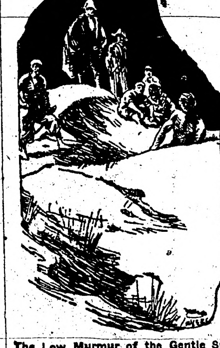
The leader's dark face winced. He raised his hand as if to still this jesting about the jester of the rue Royale, the Emperor of the Bottle, who, at last, did sit in the chair they had ordained for an emperor himself.

And now, from the sea, there came a single signal gun. The frigate was invisible, standing off the shoals, but they knew a thousand enemies were there.

"Come, sirs," said the chief in quiet authority, "the longboat around the point for the English woman. They shall row to meet the Spaniards in the pass—she shall plead that she and Monsieur de Almonaster were the prisoners of the mutineers."

When he had gone from the men who hastened at his bidding, he came upon Mademoiselle Lestron on the highest point of the sand before her shelter-canvas. She was alone, and she saw his quick glance about. "Monsieur de Almonaster has gone to the beach—I sent him away," she said quietly.

"Away? Do you see that light, Mademoiselle, against the forest? It means the Spanish boat crews are returning. They have taken the Seraphine in the river's mouth. You can guess what has happened?—there is no man living who was upon her."



The Low Murmur of the Gentle Surf on the Outer Fringe of Sand Was All the Sound Upon the Utter Calm of the Night.

"The ragged man," she answered intently. "The man who sat in the emperor's cabin and kissed the bracelet I left there?"

"The bracelet?" He was surprised; he had not known of this.

"It belonged, once, to Marie Antoinette," she went on passively. "The queen gave it to a member of my family for a service before they put her to the guillotine."

"Why, then, did you not speak when we left the ship? He—he—the man would have given it to you."

"I did not think," she murmured. "He—had his lips to it." Then she was silent, looking at the empty sea, the savage land. "I inquired of Monsieur de Almonaster . . . he laughed painfully, and would not answer. I could not see the man's face that night. Nor when he jested on the quarter-deck. But always it has seemed that some laughing spirit was near me on the Seraphine—a ghost far off from me, yet ever holding me in his fancy. Is it not strange? I cannot shake this feeling off."

"It is strange," he answered. "But come—you are going now."

"Monsieur Sazarac!" she cried sharply. "Why do you not speak?"

"Of what?" he said simply, in no wonder.

"Ah, I do not know!" The stars showed the paleness of her face, her luminous eyes wide up to him. The web of silence that had been woven about her was a mesh that neither tears nor challenge had yet pierced.

"I, too, am a nameless ghost," he smiled, "the ghost of a man who might have been! Come, now! Monsieur Sazarac bids you respectfully—but firmly, to go. You will obey—Monsieur Sazarac is accustomed to being obeyed. . . . The hands of Monsieur Sazarac have been stained with the blood of those who chose not to obey. Is that enough about Monsieur Sazarac, Mademoiselle?"

He turned away to her little tent. She heard him giving instructions to the silent black steward who had been charged to her service.

The tiny light against the unseen forest shore was growing plainer. She heard a brushing in the coarse grass. Raoul de Almonaster drew out of the starlight and stopped by her with a comment. Apparently he did not notice Monsieur Sazarac at her tent seeing to her few belongings.

"He came to you, did he not?" murmured Raoul. "It is the last moment. I gave him this to speak to you, Louise."

"Why, what should he speak?" she whispered. "But then—he would not!"

The younger man misinterpreted. "He loves you, and he would not speak. Eh, well! It is my honor to keep from him—and from you. I was his first confidant—from the very first. When he was about to challenge Carr, because of you, I offered to second him at the Oaks. From the first, he spoke of you—and he had my pledge of honor. Ah, but I did not know then who the lady was—the pawn of his game at Maspero's—the lady he must retrieve from the Genaron! Monsieur Sazarac—at the parting of the paths, one on to peace, even, perhaps, to honor for a wounded name—chose this to serve you, though he knew it meant the abyss opened for him! Is not that a love, Mademoiselle, that would hold the friend of Sazarac to his honor?"

"Tell me—" she whispered swiftly, "the ragged fellow in the emperor's cabin—his jests, his love—"

"A dead man, telling neither love nor jests—" Then the young man turned hotly on her. "See, here! The boat is making ready! Well, if Sazarac has your heart, Louise, I will not go!"

"Oh, no!—no—no!" she breathed. "Monsieur—"

The figure of Monsieur Sazarac loomed against the stars before them.

"Pardon," he said smoothly. "It is the time for the longboat."

"It is damnable!" De Almonaster sprang to grasp his sleeve: "Sir, a woman's part for me! I will not go! —I will not go!"

Monsieur Sazarac looked from him to Mademoiselle Lestron intently. It was as open to them as a blown rose to the sunshine—De Almonaster would not creep away, saved by a woman's skirts among the Spaniards, and ever after see in her eyes that she was holding in memory another man who died for her.

Monsieur Sazarac smiled, rubbed his slender, bronzed hands. "Come—my children!"

"There is the boat," muttered De Almonaster sullenly. "The blacks at the oars, and Clark at the tiller. The tide is coming out—it is an easy pull. Here is my handkerchief for the truce flag on a boat-pole." He bowed quietly: "Mademoiselle Lestron is going to the Spanish captain's care."

"Sir?" said Sazarac coolly. "You—to that boat!"

A stealthy slur of steel and leather came in the silence. They saw the point of De Almonaster's rapier flash dimly and then held to the sand.

"Monsieur Sazarac, I had the idea long ago that, at some hour, you and I should fight. It was as inevitable as anything could be. It was written by these stars at the birth of each of us . . . as it was written that we each should love a woman whom it has been given us in our lives, to protect. Mademoiselle Lestron to the boat—then, draw, with me, Monsieur!"

The older man did not stir. Twice, then, in so short a time, he must decline a challenge because of her! It was very odd—he laughed slowly.

Mademoiselle had seemed dumb for the moment. Then she sprang, with a hand raised before De Almonaster's blazing eyes and impetuous arm.

"Well, then," went on Monsieur Sazarac quietly, "first, the lady for whom we must fight—to the longboat, Monsieur de Almonaster."

Her cry of terror echoed.

There came then, a slow uncertain trudging through the reef grass. The figure of a man quite close. It was stooped; and presently it staggered or stumbled, rather ridiculously, it appeared, over an empty scabbard which got between its knees.

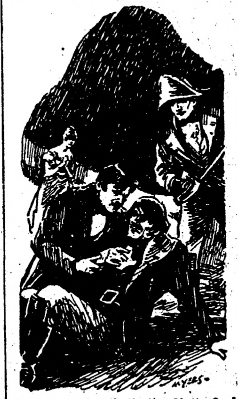
"Jarvis!" cried De Almonaster, and sprang to him.

"Eh—Raoul?" The voice came weakly but gathered strength as if from some choked but over-mastering purpose: "Well, I came to find you!" After that he staggered back and would have fallen if De Almonaster had not eased him to the sand. Then he rubbed a bloody hand across a bloody face and drawled sleepily: "Swords out—what's the matter? I say!—what the devil?" He twisted about painfully. "I'm run through twice, I think—"

The captain had come swiftly to him. "Jarvis!" He knelt and sternly sought the other's eyes. "Monsieur de Almonaster, will you get the brandy from the tent? What is this, Jarvis? What of the Seraphine? How came you here?"

"She is coming out on the tide," said Jarvis thickly. "The dons think to save her as a prize. Four boats are towing. Name o' G—d! Jean!—I had my fight!"

"Tell me this," retorted the other coldly. He looked about. The figure of the woman was dim by the tent.



"Swords Out—What's the Matter? I Say!—What the Devil?"

She was assisting De Almonaster at the chest of bandages and scanty supplies given them by the mutineers. "Jarvis! You deserted me—but, tell me of the Seraphine!"

"I, alone, escaped. Crackley's men fought like wild savages when the end came. The last of us took overboard to the jungle when the Spaniards swarmed aboard. They beheaded Black Mike on a gun-block, and hanged Budge to the shrouds with a fire under him. They chopped old Mariano, arm by arm and leg by leg—and Crackley shot himself to keep away from them. I—was the last who fell in the river reeds. They did not find me, Jean, and when I got sense after these wounds, I crawled to the water's edge. I found a dinghy with three dead Spaniards in it, and heaved them out. Then I floated with the tide. It bore me to the reef—I knew you would be here somewhere. Curse me, it was a fight! There must have been a hundred of them and we did for half!"

De Almonaster forced the brandy to his lips. "Thank you, Monsieur," murmured the painter of the rue Royale. "This thrust through my shoulder—I would not have had it, but, after breaking a don's head, I saw a bottle roll across the deck. I must after it like a cat at the cheese, and some other king o' Spain's man put a saber to me. Eh, I dropped the cognac with cork undrawn—got around and fought again. What luck one has!"

He sighed wearily. His eyes closed. The English woman came nearer, and then at a sign from Monsieur Sazarac, she went apart from them. It would not do for the babbler to talk too much in her hearing. And so, once more, the ragged lover with the new waistcoat did not see the lady of the camellia, nor she him; for when his eyes opened there were but the stars above, and the two men's faces watching close to his.

"Come, gentlemen!" He struggled to a sitting posture between them: "I came here with an idea! A most excellent idea!"

"Jarvis," retorted the captain quietly, "you are dying."

"Eh, bien! Are you a physician, too, Monsieur Saz-a-rac, as well as a bully swordsman, a fellow of pearl-inlaid pistols; a delicate hand at the cards—and wondrous speeches on a lady's staircase?"

He sat up straighter and shook himself. "Dying? Now, see!"

He kicked out both mud-swathed legs, clapped his hands, put a thumb to his nose and wiggled his fingers at the stars. "Let me up," he drawled absently. "I am to tell you what to do. Where the devil is the boat, and our blusterers? Name o' G—d!—buccaneers snoozing in the grass, and John Jarvis in a bloody set-to!"

And despite their protests he did get to his feet unsteadily. About all they could see were his two eyes sticking out of a muck of wet tangled hair. But these seemed to smile comfortingly.

"Jarvis, and his deck o' blood," he mused. "Now, come. The Seraphine is towing out the pass. There is hardly a man on her except the wounded and the officers, for they have every arm at the sweeps in the small boats. I say—we shall retake her, gentlemen!"

Essential to Profitable Farming

The Utility Express Truck $550 Chassis Only f. o. b. Flint, Mich.

Fits any Standard Truck Body

No business can succeed unless its product is profitably sold. Most farms have a fine production department but no sales department. They grow crops and stock bought by buyers who set the price.

One of the chief reasons for this unprofitable situation is the average farmer's poor facilities for moving his crops or stock to the place where he can sell or ship to the best advantage. Because of the time and expense of horse delivery millions of dollars worth of produce spoils annually on American farms. The saving of this waste would, in many cases, change a losing farm to a money-maker.

This low-priced, high-grade, reliable truck was designed as a money-saver and money-maker for farmers and business houses needing fast low-cost haulage of heavy or bulky goods. It fits any standard type of ton truck body. Ask any Chevrolet dealer for price of the style of body you require.

SEDATE OLD WOMAN SHOCKED

Article Hung on Clothesline Brings Many Laughs From Persons Passing Yard.

She is a nice, dignified old lady, living in Suburbia, with an unquestioned reputation for righteousness, and is renowned for her stand on prohibition and her antipathy for anything savoring of gambling. She recently engaged the service of a maid from "the old country."

The maid, a fine, strapping girl, was anxious to give satisfaction, and when instructed to put the attic in order she more than did the job well, for not only did she tidy it, but old rugs, blankets and the like that she came across she put out on the clothesline to air. The line was in full view of passers-by.

It was with an alarmed suddenness that the dignified old lady noticed that those going by her house after gazing surprisedly at her backyard should burst out laughing. Finally she ventured out to see. On the clothesline was hanging among other things a roulette table cloth, the property of a sporty brother of hers, long since gathered to his fathers.—New York Sun and Globe.

Colonel Gives Remarkable Denouement to His Story That Was Interrupted by the Chief.

The colonel had only two types of stories, one concerning his amorous adventures, the other his adventures while tiger shooting. It was night in the mess and the colonel, as was his wont, began to tell an exciting story of an encounter with a wounded tigress which sprang at him before he could reload and bore him to the ground. At the critical moment an orderly entered to report that the G. O. C. wished to speak to the colonel on the telephone, and the colonel was compelled to break off abruptly.

He was absent for ten minutes and on his return had forgotten which of his favorite stories he had been telling.

"What happened, colonel?" asked one of the guests. "You were telling us of your dangerous situation."

"Oh, I kissed her," responded the colonel airily. "She simply couldn't resist me and we dined together that evening."—London Sporting and Dramatic News.

Why the Doctor asks: "Do you drink coffee?"

If you are troubled with headaches, insomnia, indigestion, or sluggishness of the liver or bowels, probably one of the first questions your doctor asks is, "Do you drink coffee?"

He knows, better than anyone else, that the drug, caffeine, present in coffee, tends to irritate the nervous system and is a frequent cause of disturbance to health.

If coffee causes trouble, and you value health, stop coffee and drink Postum.

Postum is a pure cereal beverage—absolutely free from caffeine or any other drug. It has a delicious flavor, that many people prefer to coffee.

Your grocer sells Postum in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages) for those who prefer the flavor brought out by boiling fully 20 minutes. The cost of either form is about one-half cent a cup.

THE FLAVOR LASTS

A Stride of Twenty-Five Feet.

The average ostrich can outrun the best Arab horse, if the bird will continue on a straight-away course. The fact that wild ostriches like to run in circles invariably leads to capture, as a well-trained Arabian horse will follow the shortest course, knowing that ultimately the fleeing ostrich will turn in his direction. In full flight the adult ostrich often shows a stride of 20 to 25 feet, which affords one explanation of its remarkable speed.—Nature Magazine.

MRS. HINCKLEY NERVOUS WRECK

Tells Women How She Was Restored to Perfect Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Memphis, Tenn.—"Two years ago I was completely run-down and my nerves were a wreck. I could not sweep a room without resting. I could not do my work except a little at a time, and the doctor's medicine did not help me. One day some one threw your little book on to my porch, and in it I read several testimonials of women who had been like myself. I went right out and got me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and before I had taken the whole of that bottle I knew it was helping me. I took six bottles, and then in about three months I took two more. Now I am in perfect health. I do all of my own work and could do more. I can truly say that I know Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound gave me my health."—Mrs. O. J. HINCKLEY, 316 Union Ave., Memphis, Tenn.

WHEAT COST BODY NAMED

Coulter, Lewis, Reed Named by L. B. Hanna for Wheat Committee.

ASK FOR HIGHER TARIFF

Co-operative Marketing Plan Opposed Because It Would Take Too Long—What Farmers Need Is Immediate Relief for 1923.

Fargo, N. D.—John Lee Coulter, president of the North Dakota Agricultural college; R. S. Lewis, Fargo, former lieutenant-governor of North Dakota; and Walter Reed, Fargo, were named by L. B. Hanna, chairman of the wheat conference last week as members of a committee to gather statistics on cost of wheat production.

A resolution passed at the conference with Eugene Meyer and Representative Frank Mondell authorized the chairman to appoint such a committee, the statistics to be sent to the tariff commission at Washington for their consideration in dealing with the possibility of raising the tariff on wheat.

"It was urged by the men from Washington at the conference that the conference should go on record endorsing a resolution for co-perative marketing," Mr. Hanna explained. "This the cnference did not do, not because they were opposed to the principles of co-operative marketing, but because it seemed to be the consensus of opinion of those present that it would take too long to get satisfactory results and that if aid is to be given the farmers in the Northwest with their 1923 crop that something must be done that would bring more immediate relief.

Ask Higher Tariff.

"It was felt that the 30 cents a bushel that now stands as a protection to American wheat against wheat produced in other countries is not adequate, and does not cover the difference in cost between the cost of producing wheat in America and the cost in Canada, Argentina, and elsewhere.

"It is estimated that about 50 percent of the 1923 wheat crop still remains in the hands of the Northwest farmers and it is possible if proper representations of the cost of producing wheat is presented to the tariff commission that they will feel justified in recommending to the president an increase in the present tariff that will raise the raise from 30 cents to 45 cents a bushel and as this step does not require congressional action, that results may be obtained in time to bring some relief to the wheat grower of the Northwest.

"The committee that has been appointed will start work immediately and as soon as possible present their findings to the tariff commission with the hope for speedy results."

GOV. AGAINST FARM PLAN

Governor Thinks Diversified Farming and Good Management Best Plan for Northwest Farmers.

Bismarck, N. D.—The proposal of Eugene Meyer, managing director of the war finance corporation, and Director Frank Mondell, that relief for the Northwest wheat growers be obtained through co-operative marketing associations does not meet the present emergency, Governor R. A. Nestos told the two government representatives at Mandan. Governor Nestos conferred with Messrs. Mondell and Meyer while the Northern Pacific passenger train, carrying them farther west, was changing engines there.

Explaining his views upon his return to Bismarck, Governor Nestos made the following statement:

"I told them (Meyer and Mondell) that while I heartily agreed that everything possible should be done to aid and speed the work of the Farm Bureau federation and the National Wheat Growers in their work of organizing the farmers and establishing better marketing conditions for our wheat and other farm products, and in providing capital and honest and efficient management for these organizations, that alone does not adequately meet the present condition. Some government agency, with power to segregate and dispose of our surplus wheat must be provided in order to give that immediate and temporary relief, which alone can save thousands from bankruptcy.

"We know that in the long run, diversified farming with a well-balanced program of production of quality products, together with a highly developed and well managed system of marketing, will prove the best and most lasting improvement of the farmers' lot.

Wheat Growers Open Campaign.

Aberdeen, S. D.—William J. Brown, national head of the American Wheat Growers associated, opened the campaign of the South Dakota association for 65 percent pool of the 1924 crop, at a mass meeting here. He reported growth of the movement everywhere and reported new associations to be started in Indiana, Iowa, Missouri, and probably Illinois. He declared the appointment of the advisory committee at the Chicago conference the most heartening thing of the year.

Greek Cynics.

The Cynics were a sect of Grecian philosophers, founded by Antisthenes about 396 B. C. The Cynics were noted for their morose and gloomy views of life; for their disregard of all sciences, save that of morality; and for their contempt for the ordinary conventionalities of life. The word cynic is derived either from Cynosarges, the place where Artisthenes taught; or from Navinos (Gr., doglike), in allusion to the snarling or surly manner affected by the philosophers of this school. To Diogenes of Sinope, the most distinguished disciple of Antisthenes, the Athenians erected a column of Parian marble surmounted by a dog.

In Columbus' Crew.

The gift to England by the Spanish government of a model of the Santa Maria, in which Columbus discovered America, recalls the little-known fact that the vessel had an Englishman among her crew when she made her immortal voyage. In the list of the ship's company appears the entry "Tallarte de Lajes (Ingles)," and Sir Clements Markham suggests that Tallarte, being the Spanish form of Allard or Alard, the man was probably a connection of the famous seafaring family of Alard of Winchelsea, another member of which, Gervase Alard, became the first English admiral in 1306. An Irishman also was numbered among the crew, entered simply as "William of Galway."

Easy Way to Make Home Improvements.

Almost every man likes to do little jobs of building, particularly when by doing them he can make permanent labor-saving improvements around the home.

If you have been wishing for a sidewalk that will keep the house clean and the feet dry—non-rot steps, porch floors, ornamental gateposts—any one of dozens of improvements, you will be interested to know that you can now obtain complete directions free of cost.

The best concrete construction experience has been drawn upon to provide these directions. You will find everything you need to know about small jobs—how much cement to buy, how to mix the concrete, what forms to use, and all the rest.

A request to the Portland Cement Association, 111 West Washington Street, Chicago, will bring this free booklet, "Concrete Around the Home," by return mail.—Advertisement.

GREAT NORTHERN
Prepares
For Busy Season

The territory served by the Great Northern Railway harvests its crops and ships to market its heaviest load in the fall season.

This year the Great Northern is prepared to handle a larger traffic than ever before. It has purchased nearly a hundred large, new locomotives of the most modern type, as well as four thousand new freight cars; it has built new track and improved old; it is equipped to do the people's work well. A supply of cars is one of the important elements in this preparation. The Great Northern not only owns ample equipment for the crop moving season, but it has these cars on its own lines ready for business and in excellent condition. Here is the actual record:

	Owned by Great Northern	On Great Northern Lines
Box Cars (including automobile and furn. cars)	32,572	34,046
Stock Cars	1,893	1,946
Refrigerator Cars	5,508	9,352
Other Freight Cars	18,926	20,315
Total Freight Cars	58,899	65,659

So prepared the Great Northern is confident that it can give adequate service to the Northwest throughout the busiest season of the year. It appreciates your patronage and asks, in your own and its interest, that you help it to

Load cars to capacity
Load and unload promptly
Avoid diversion wherever possible

MERCHANT GIVES MORE EVIDENCE

W. F. Penny, prominent merchant of Hendersonville, N. C., and a leader in the civic and business affairs of his section, gives unstinted praise to Tanlac, which, he states, has restored his health and overcome troubles that had defied treatment for years:

"For many years," stated Mr. Penny, "I was a great sufferer from indigestion and stomach trouble. Ulceration set in and necessitated an operation. Utter lack of digestive power over a long period so weakened me that I was hardly able to attend to my business.

"Tanlac seemed to reach the seat of my troubles at once and now I have normal strength and activity in every way. Tanlac is undoubtedly the best stomach medicine to be had."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Take no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.—Advertisement.

Butte, Mont.—"I can remember 50 years ago, when my mother used and praised Dr. Pierce's medicines because they had been so helpful to her. When I was developing into womanhood, I was delicate and needed some aid to nature and it was the 'Favorite Prescription' that did me so much good. Again after my marriage when the children were coming into our home, the 'Favorite Prescription' gave me the strength and nerve to keep up with my work. Also when I reached middle life I found the 'Prescription' a wonderful help.

They stared at him unbelievingly. He threw out an arm, kicked the entangling scabbard from his knees and blustered on:

"Sixteen there must be of you! Six muskets Crackley gave to you—and you have pistols and cutlasses around. Sixteen, fair-armed and desperate, and a longboat in the dark! If you remain here Murillo's men will leave you all to the buzzards tomorrow—I know, I heard them say there were men of Lafitte alive on this reef!"

"They know?" muttered the chief.

"They guess! I say, we can retake the schooner!—the prize guard on her is nothing—the teniente in command can suspect nothing! Once they lay her astern the frigate there is no hope for any of you—"

"We were to send Mademoiselle to the frigate in the longboat," murmured Raoul.

"Throw her to the sharks—they're kinder than Murillo's men! The Spaniards think the schooner was bound to the rebel republics of the South. They will spare none who had to do with her—they blot out every life that could tell of her taking!"

He swung an empty pistol holster and tottered back and forth. Monsieur Sazarac tapped De Almonaster on the shoulder.

"It is the truth. It is a chance. Monsieur, our affair—we shall have to postpone it. And d—n your hot head! . . . Will you understand nothing?"

"Give me this action! Let me be the first to board the Seraphine—I shall show you, Monsieur Sazarac, if I am one to be sent away under the protection of a woman!"

"Nom de Dieu! And for that you would fight me!" breathed the other softly. Then he turned away, hastening to the outlaws down the sand spit.

Jarvis had sat down again. He watched the light in the south—the Napoleon ship, drawing slowly out on the ebb-tide, with the Spanish king's men at the tow-lines.

"If they get a wind," mumbled Jarvis, "we are undone. Then I might as well have stayed and died in the grass. I came to save you all—"

"John!" cried De Almonaster, "what madness seized you to turn upon him at the pinch?"

"I saved you all—" grunted Jarvis indifferently. "The dogs plotted to turn on Sazarac from the moment she—the—well—" he seemed plaintively diffident at her name—"well, the affair of the Genaron. I knew it. They hardly kept it from me, after the rum I broached for them. And once the—she—came aboard there was no hope to stop trouble. I played the fool for them; I roared chanteys in the fo'cas'le— I outdrank the best o' them! I made myself, as you saw—the blanket adviser to them."

"You let them put her adrift from the ship!" said Raoul sternly.

"Yes—to save her from John Crackley. To save you all from walking the plank. Well—" he grunted absently. "I see. You are not grateful. No one is grateful. I play the part of a Sazarac—save that I cannot walk with a sword between my legs—I boast, and pose and swagger . . . that is, I try, Monsieur. You recall the other night? I—alone on the quarter-deck—quite had the stage to myself? I was doing well until my d—d pistol went off quite by accident. Discomfited, I hurried below and drank and ate everything that had been spread for the four of you at the emperor's table. Eh—what did the—she—think of me, Monsieur?"

"She," whispered Raoul hurriedly, "apparently never saw you. That is, I believe she laughed—once—at something."

"Name o' G—d!" breathed the jester. "Ah, well, of course! She laughed when she saw me hanging to the lamp-post. On the staircase—well, I could not see plainly. In fact, I never see her plainly. Or she, me. Of course—I am the ghost . . . I try to strut out in the brave light, but there seems laughter always . . . tilt up the bottle, Raoul—give me the last of it!"

He seemed suddenly startled to discover a white cloak so close to him. In fact, he seeemed to hustle uncertainly from it around to the outer edge of the group that gathered about Sazarac and Mademoiselle. And if she saw him at all; or divined that the fellow of the waistcoat was really this bloody figure that had staggered to them but a moment since, it was plain that he vanished from her sight shortly. He had, indeed, meant to stretch a hand of authority, seeing that the mad plot was his; to ring out a swift and pregnant campaign worthy of a pistoling Sazarac, but now he couldn't. He merely hung off in the grass hummocks, swamp mud and his own blood dripping from him, dangling an empty holster, and listening with mouth agape. She put this spell upon him, it must have been that at once, in her presence, he became a ghost of a man, pursuing his tattered mask of a Sazarac.

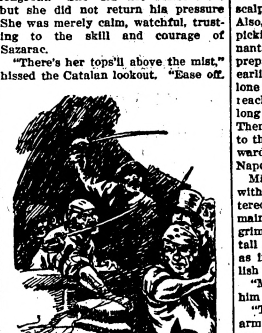
Certain it is that, after the leader had told of the thing to be done, and of Jarvis' coming to them, there was such a puzzled, and then a shouting acclaim for the plan, that every one forgot the author of it.

"By Blackbeard himself!" roared Bohon. "It is a scheme that Jean Lafitte would have loved!"

They scattered to the bushes for their few arms and ammunition boxes. Others were working the longboat from the shoals to where the adventurers could wade as she settled with the load of them in deeper water. There was hushed laughter, grim confidence, a jousting, nudging loyalty to the quiet leader. Two huge fellows carried Mademoiselle Lestron from the sands to the boat, in a chair formed of their brawny arms. Then they pushed the longboat slowly, stealthily out to catch the run of the ebb-tide.

"Sazarac," whispered De Almonaster. He was on a mid-thwart with Mademoiselle Lestron at his side. His hand sought hers in the close press of the adventurers crowded in the longboat. She did not resist . . . but she did not return his pressure. She was merely calm, watchful, trusting to the skill and courage of Sazarac.

"There's her tops'l above the mist," hissed the Catalan lookout. "Ease off.



And Up and to the Seraphine's Deck There Slid a Dozen Silent Figures.

A wind—a touch of air—is fatal to us! In, lads—I hear their haulboats above us. Come, there's her bulk in the fog!"

De Almonaster felt a pressure on his hand. He bent his head.

"Monsieur—your pistol. Give it to me—I will not fall in their hands alive—if we fall!"

"We will not fail," he whispered moodily. "Why—with Sazarac?"

She wondered if the silent leader at the stern had caught this bitter tribute? There was no more speech for any of them. The girl was staring now, between the press of crouched figures, at the great limp disorder of the snowy sails; it seemed but another moment when the muffled oar blades shot the longboat fair under the schooner's stern. Old hands trembled on long unused weapons; there seemed a muttering and a nodding of heads . . . and then a slight jar, the snap of a hook on a wooden rail, and up and to the Seraphine's deck there slid a dozen silent figures, cutlass cords in teeth, fingers to triggers.

De Almonaster writhed with impatience awaiting his turn. A terrified howl had arisen from some wounded sailors lying in the schooner's waist, who first caught sight of the swarming figures in the land mist.

The huge Johanness was the first to reach the wheel. The two officers of the king o' Spain had hardly turned surprised faces at the footfalls ere they died gasping under his two cutlass swings. The helmsman cried out and an iron pike crashed to his teeth.

And amidships a battle was arising. Frightened howls, incoherent commands from fleeing petty officers; while above it, now, came the wild yell of the gulf buccaneers in other days and evil:

"A-Barataria! A-Barataria! Lafitte! Lafitte!"

To that cry these castaways had swarmed chains and shrouds of many a ship now long missing in the ports of the world.

Save for one obscure figure the longboat held none except Mademoiselle Lestron. She shrank lower, closing her ears against the screams and shots of the battle which had thickened forward. The towing boats had turned on the hawsers; they were coming back. The Spanish king's men arose at the bows, attempting to climb and save their helpless comrades.

The shots and cries and trampling went on, and the girl shuddered at the sounds. Who was winning, what had happened to her friends, she could not tell. But slowly there was a stir in the bow-thwarts. A tall man arose, rubbing his eyes as if awakened from a dispiriting sleep. He stared about—she could just see him dimly in the starlight, and then he climbed awkwardly, with frantic haste but slowly after all—to the boarding ladders.

He got over the rail with some difficulty, and then stopped as if considering what he should do next. Louise's startled eyes could not make out his face but his uncouth movements seemed familiar. . . . if she could only see his eyes—whether they were light or dark—or the contour of his face, perhaps, she could know. . . then he staggered and fell.

The girl upstarted. The cries and imprecations seemed growing in volume, coming nearer, as if the attackers were being driven back. But she began to climb the nearer boarding ladder. When she came over the rail she saw first an indistinct group of struggling men forward, with here and there the flash of fire; and then, near her on the deck, under the dim light by the main companionway, a man crawling along.

At the companionway he got to his feet with some trouble and disappeared below. The girl ran back of the after-housing to get away from a dying Spaniard at her feet. There she found three other bodies, and the smooth planks were slippery under her feet. She fled the other way from these horrors and then found herself by the open skylight of the main cabin.

It was brilliantly lighted there. Apparently all the fury of the two battles for the Seraphine had never penetrated to the heavy splendor of rosewood, silken tapestries and ormolu encased mirrors of the emperor's suite. For at the emperor's table sat the ragged man she had seen there once before. He was in the huge, carved, pretentious chair at the head of the board. He rather shone with blood from a scalp wound under his matted hair. Also, she saw that he appeared to be picking over the bones of some remnants of a dish that must have been prepared for Crackley's lieutenants earlier in the day. At any rate the lone guest showed disappointment. He reached for the cognac, and then lit a long reed pipe he found on the board. Then he sat back and smoked, listening to the distant sounds of the battle forward and above on the decks of the Napoleon ship.

Mademoiselle Lestron turned away with fearful curiosity. She encountered a hurrying group coming past the main-mast. Panting, stumbling, smoke-grimed men, among whom she saw the tall Sazarac. He sprang to the side as if to see to the safety of the English woman left in the longboat.

"Monsieur!" she cried, and ran to him frightenedly.

"There is no man of them left in arms!" he shouted, with a brightening eye. "The port watch went overboard at our rush, swimming for their boats. Beluche is tumbling their wounded to a yawl that remains. Mademoiselle," he bowed to her, "you will go below away from these abominable sights. Come—the Seraphine is won!"

"No—no!" she gasped in horror still. "No—not yet!"

Sazarac turned from her for an instant to the wheel where an altercation seemed arising. Old Dominique had taken it; he was shouting, with his eyes aloft. "She is drawing at the top!" the fat seaman bawled. "A man to her shrouds! A man—give me one man!"

A silence had come, strangely silent, after the fury. A groan or two, a coughing fellow forward in the lee scuppers. Dominique was howling once more.

"D—n! She's drawing! We'll be on the sands with this! A seaman for Dominique! Where are ye all?"

The Count de Almonaster suddenly appeared past the tangle of cordage along the starboard rail where dead men were twisted into rope and grimed sail cloth. He threw away a broken small sword and came on.

"Mademoiselle!"

"I am not hurt," she said faintly. "You—Monsieur!"

The roaring of Dominique, the alderman of New Orleans, cut him off.

"Curse me!—fat—heavy as a lout—and here a sea fight such as my old eyes have dreamed! A ship o' blood! A ship o' death!—twice in one day has she been cleared o' the dead louts fallen on her!"

Forward, indeed, a man was heaving corpses to the phosphorescent waters. Yet the ship seemed curiously still. She was drawing on, with Dominique hauling at the wheel; slowly, and with a sighing fill of limp canvas, a weary clatter of blocks . . . sailing, somehow, in unseamanlike disorder, but out of the rippling shallows.

And to the west a heavy gun broke with a spurt of fire. They heard the shot ride sullenly into the sand spit on the port quarter.

"A man aloft!" bawled Dominique. "Break out wi' stays! What's the matter wi' ye all?"

Two had gone aloft. Clark, the young English lad, and Gorgio, the Catalan. The latter was crawling up slowly, a hand to shroud and cat-line. By the light they could see him faintly. Grim, bloody faced, responding to his last order.

HEALTH FOR WORKING WOMEN

Let Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Help You to Become Well.

Thousands of girls have to work in homes, offices, stores, mills or factories who are physically unfit for work, with often an aged or invalid father or mother dependent upon them for support. Standing all day week in and week out, or sitting in cramped positions a girl often contracts some deranged condition of her organic system which calls a halt to her progress and demands restoration to health before she can be of use to herself or anyone else.

For these distressing weaknesses and derangements these girls have found health to do their work in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Brooklyn, N.Y.—"Like many girls, I had troubles every month," says Carolyne Mangels, "and they interfered with my work as I could never be sure of my time. My mother often suggested that I take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, but I never did until lately. I have had very good results, and am now a private secretary and do my work without missing a day. I recommend your medicine to every girl who speaks of having troubles like I have had."—Carolyne Mangels, 407 14th St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Office Worker Helped

Milwaukee, Wis.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine for three and a half years, and they have improved my health wonderfully. My mother also has taken the Vegetable Compound and we recommend it to our friends. I am working in an office now and can always do my work as I do not have the troubles I had at first. I read of your Vegetable Compound in the newspaper and you may use my letter in that way if you wish to do so."—Eleanor Sheblak, 537 36th St., Milwaukee, Wis.

Pains and Headache

Webster, Mass.—"I was all rundown, had a bad complexion, and suffered with pains and backache, and was dizzy at times and felt weak. I worked in a mill and my girl chum told me about your wonderful medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I am feeling much better since taking it."—Mary Plaza, 13 West Street, Webster, Mass.

BOARDING HOUSE FOR PETS

Institution for Care of Dogs and Cats Planned by Humane Society in Kansas City.

Plans for establishing a boarding house for pet animals, principally dogs and cats, were outlined recently by officials of the Wyandotte County Humane society. The plans will be submitted to the board of directors by Miss Sarah Jacobs, president.

The dog and cat boarding house would be self-sustaining. Miss Jacobs said that the plan contemplated would require the construction of suitable sheds, pens, a run or playground for dogs and a modern system for disinfectant to guard against disease.

"I have had more than 100 calls this summer," Miss Jacobs said, "from responsible persons who desired to pay for a temporary home for their pets while away on vacations.

"It appears comical to establish a boarding house for dogs and cats, but the proposal has a serious side. Many animals are valuable, and dogs roaming the streets while owners are away on vacations often become rabid."

Miss Jacobs said provisions would be made to give lodging to horses and cows if the demand was great enough. The boarding house would be under supervision of a veterinary surgeon.—Detroit News.

OHIO'S SANDSTONE QUARRIES

Vast Quantities of Whetstones and Grindstones Taken From Pit South of Lake Erie.

The world's largest sandstone quarries are located in Ohio, a few miles to the south of Lake Erie, in the vicinity of the towns of North Amherst and Berea. From these quarries come also vast quantities of our whetstones and grindstones, and there is very much that is of interest with respect to the industry.

One of the quarries has been mined to a depth of 165 feet in places and the distance around it is a mile and a half. Looking into this pit from one edge, one is reminded of the ruins of the Colosseum, for the walls are cut in shallow terraces, which are not unlike the seats of the open-air theater of the ancients.

In cutting a block of sandstone wedges are driven in sidewise at the base of the block, while steam drills bore holes from the top to meet the openings made by the wedges. A machine called a channeler then cuts the block away.

Do you take orders from a Coffee Pot?

It must be humiliating for thousands of people to confess that they lack the will-power to stop coffee.

They know from experience that it results in irritated nerves; keeps them awake nights; makes them nervous. Yet they don't seem to be able to say "no."

If you find that coffee harms you, change to the pure cereal beverage, Postum. You'll find it delicious and satisfying. And it is absolutely free from caffeine or any other harmful drug, so you can drink Postum at any meal, and as much as you want.

Your grocer sells Postum in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages) for those who prefer the flavor brought out by boiling fully 20 minutes. The cost of either form is about one-half cent a cup.

Eveleth—On motion of Assistant County Attorney Carl Onkka, six criminal indictments charging Mayor Victor F. Essling and City Clerk A. J. Van Buskirk with misappropriating public moneys, were dismissed.

Owatonna—Owatonna, through its delegation to the annual convention of the Minnesota State High School Press association which is to conduct its annual meeting at Chisholm, will invite the organization to have its 1924 convention in this city.

Thief River Falls—Lester E. Rowland of this place has won third prize in the national essay contest under the auspices of the national highway board. More than 400,000 pupils in various parts of the country engaged in the contest.

Austin—Miss Margaret Carew has arrived here, completing a 5,500 mile journey and bringing about a reunion of the Carew family. Miss Margaret, although only 15 years old, has come all the way from Tipperary, Ireland, alone to join her family in Austin.

Hibbing—"Safety first" was the chief topic of discussion at the regular monthly meeting of the Oliver Iron Mining company's safety forces, which was attended by 150 of the company's experts and presided over by M. H. Godfrey, general superintendent.

Owatonna—The Central Baptist association opened its annual conference here with delegations representing member churches in Albert Lea, Austin, Owatonna, Brownsdale, Waterville, West Concord, Blooming Prairie, Clinton Falls and Morristown.

Minneapolis — Lloyd Berkner of Sleepy Eye, Minn., holder of the world's time and distance record in radio relaying, spoke before the Twin City Radio club. Mr. Berkner just returned from a year's service in commercial radio work on board ships operating on both the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, and told members of the club of his experiences.

Fairmont—After paying all bills against the agricultural society incident to the 1923 county fair, Secretary H. C. Nolte finds that there is about $4,000 cash on hand. Besides paying the expense of the fair, the 1923 income also fully paid for the new dining hall, which cost about $3,000.

Red Wing—To spend the 40th anniversary of her wedding serving on a petit jury here was the experience of Mrs. C. H. Meyer. She is the wife of County Auditor Meyer, and working in an adjoining office to that of the corner was C. S. Dana, who was married on the same day as Meyer, Oct. 17, 1883.

Chaska—Reinhard Schallow, aged 22, was killed and his girl companion, Adeline Lenz, 20 of Glencoe, slightly injured when the small touring car he was driving collided with a Minneapolis and St. Louis freight train at a grade crossing two miles east of here.

St. Cloud—P. W. Huntemer, who has filled the position of county agent in Stearns county, with headquarters at Melrose, has been elected county agent for Nobles county and will make his headquarters at Worthington. He has been county agent in Stearns county for six years.

Frontenac—"Come and see a pretty fire," said the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Carlson, farmers near here, to his mother. The mother followed into the yard and found the barn in flames. The boy had found some matches.

Olivia—Miss Anna Nyquist of Winfield has been elected county nurse of Renville county and will take up her duties here Jan. 1.

Faribault — Pupils of the Minnesota School for the Deaf reported for classes after a vacation of four months. About 270 had enrolled for the year's work.

Faribault — Designation of 6,000 acres of land near Union Lake as a game reserve is asked by sportsmen.

Winona—Ground will be broken here for the new chapel of St. Mary of the Angels to be erected at the College of St. Teresa at a cost of $100,000. Construction is to begin at once.

Springfield — Springfield enters the list of Minnesota cities. By a vote of more than 3 to 1 the voters favored changing the village charter for that of a modern city.

Mankato — The new Farmers & Merchants bank of North Mankato will open for business. This institution, the second in the town, is capitalized at $24,000.

Hinckley — Clifford Cole, aged 17, was killed when the car he was cranking ran him down. The car carried him about 100 feet.

Underwood—Mayor M. A. Berg of this place, issued a proclamation designating a rat killing week, during which time all citizens are urged to wage a deadly battle on the rodents.

Red Wing — Lawrence Stenwick, aged 20, sustained injuries to his head and spine and four other workers escaped injuries when the roof of a gravel loading shed collapsed at the Red Wing gravel pit.

New Ulm—The body of Ben Arbes, accidentally killed in a creamery in this city, Sept. 27, which had been interred two weeks, was exhumed at the request of insurance companies and the coroner to permit an autopsy.

Hibbing—The first step in a movement to have more trees in this almost treeless city has been taken here by transplanting a dozen large elms, 30 to 50 years old, from a point several miles distant to the grounds of the village hall.

St. Cloud—A new telephone company in Stearns county is assured by articles of incorporation filed with the register of deeds for the North Ashley Rural Telephone company. The company is capitalized at $10,000, divided into 400 shares.

Crookston — Broadcasting the description and name of a man wanted to share in his father's estate at Pierce, Wis., resulted in locating the man through a scar on his left ankle. The broadcasting was done by the WLAG station of Minneapolis.

Duluth—W. H. Locker, prominent realtor and former president of the Bank of Commerce and Savings of Duluth and J. H. Cook, civil engineer, also of Duluth were killed in a motor-car accident at Midway river bridge four miles east of Carlton.

Ortonville — Taking of testimony in the case of A. V. Randall, former Big Stone county auditor, who is on trial on a charge of second degree larceny, in connection with a shortage of $6,000 in his accounts, began in district court here.

St. James—The town board of Watonwan has formed a health association to assist people in this community to become better acquainted with health laws, to prevent and exterminate contagious diseases and enforce sanitary regulation.

Owatonna—A call for a special election Nov. 5 to give voters of this city an opportunity to express their desires in the matter of a $350,000 bond issue to finance construction of a municipal light, power and heating plant has been issued by the city council.

Austin—Two hundred breeders from all states of the central west, attending a banquet here ended the first day of the sale of Cloverleaf Farm, where the bull Count Walker Homestead Segis was sold for $6,750 to the Highland Farms, Chicago. Another bull sold for $1,025, and a six months old bull calf for $600 to Mayowood Farms, Rochester. The average price paid for 58 head of cattle was $567.50.

St. Paul—There will be a large movement between now and spring of Iowa farmers who are giving up the farms which they have rented and are coming to Minnesota as tenants of developed lands, according to Oscar H. Smith, state commissioner of immigration, who says that the immigration Bureau is receiving many inquiries from these farmers who are no longer able to pay the high rental price demanded for Iowa lands and are anxious to come to this state, believing that farms here can be rented on terms that will assure not only a good living but a profit to the tenant.

Northfield — Northfield again is warring on the slot machine. For a time the machines disappeared but it is alleged that since the colleges opened and hundreds of students have returned to the city, the owners have boldly replaced them in their shops.

Faribault — Faribault health officers this week will turn Pied Pipers when the city launches its intensive drive against rats. Thousands of the rodents are infesting the dumping grounds of the city, and a campaign to exterminate them before cold weather sets in, has been mapped out by the city officials.

Hibbing — Kittsville no longer exists as a village. It automatically became a part of the town of Stuntz, when its residents at a special election decided to dissolve its incorporation.

Pipestone — Claim for damages in the amount of $7,500 has been made against the city of Pipestone for the death of William J. Knuth, aged 27, of Trosky, Minn., who was instantly killed by electrocution on the streets here on the night of Sept. 29. During a blinding rainstorm Knuth drove his automobile into a lamp post.

All Angora Cats Alike.

It was a valuable Angora cat, but its owner was governed as much by humane instincts as appreciation of its value when she took it to a boarding place when preparing to start on a European trip. Though friends offered to take care of it she felt that her pet would have even better care in a regular cat home. It was therefore with considerable surprise and indignation, a day or so after she placed it in the boarding place, that she ran across her cat roaming the streets.

Swiftly she picked it up and descended on the boarding house. For five minutes she gave vent to her wrath. When he got a chance the proprietor spoke.

"Calm yourself, madame," said he. "Your cat is here. The one you hold in your arms is the twin of yours and it belongs to Mrs. Blank." To prove his point he produced the other.—New York Sun and Globe.

Marriage of Convenience.

An Australian woman in London who had difficulty in becoming naturalized took a short cut by paying an old bachelor $150 to marry her, thus making her a British subject. By agreement the bride and bridegroom separated after the ceremony, never to see each other again. The British home office says that several marriages of this kind have taken place.

Method of Measuring Ozone.

Before long it is likely that among other attractions of a seaside resort may be included announcements of the proportion of ozone in the air.

Experiments have shown that it is possible to discover the amount of ozone in the air with fair accuracy.

Slips of white blotting paper are soaked in a solution of iodide of potassium and starch. These, protected from sunshine and rain, are exposed to the air for a definite period. According to the amount of ozone present so is the paper colored in varying shades of yellow. If ozone is abundant the paper will be of a very deep shade.

The Test of True Love.

A bride who had bobbed her hair read a fashion item which thoroughly frightened her. Her husband was reading in the library and when she managed to reach him she was shaking visibly.

"Why, my dear," he asked, "what is the matter?"

"Freddie, do you love me since I bobbed my hair?"

"Of course."

"But this magazine" whimpered the bride, "says that bobbed hair is rapidly going out of fashion."

"It may not know. But what of it?"

"Freddie, will you love me if I go out of style?"

Plague Deadly in Java.

In Java, which has a population a third as big as ours, bubonic plague is so common that it kills half of the children before they are five years old. The Javanese take this as a matter of course, reports William Ferguson, globe trotter. He found the people of Java with the viewpoint that if the plague didn't kill half of the children the island shortly would be unable to sustain the inhabitants despite its fertility.

Nature is cynical in its harshness. She deals only in cause and effect, action and reaction, and the thing we call emotion is alien to her plans. Civilization is merely a banding together for mutual protection against harsh nature. Most of us have lost sight of this original purpose.

Movie Pedagogy.

One movie director can get his actors to follow him perfectly. His scheme is simple enough, too.

"You're a fine actor, Walter," he yells. "Register joy."

Walter registers joy.

"That is, you used to be a fine actor, but you're slipping. Now register disgust."

And Walter does.

Home talent play to-nite

Mrs. Nygaard Seriously Injured

Mrs. Martin Nygaard wss very seriously injured Monday forenoon, as she stepped out of an auto, that had given her a ride to town, and started to cross the road, near the creamery. An auto driven by Targe Sordahl was comming from the opposite direction and when Mrs. Nygaard saw it she became confused and ran in front of his machine and he could not avoid running over her. She was taken at once to the home of her daughter, Mrs. Axel Nelson, and a physician was summoned. Later in the day she was taken to the Thief River hospital where it was found that her arm, that was broken sometime ago, was again broken, also her ankle and a rib, so that it will probably be several weeks before the injured lady will be able to leave the hospital.

Parties at the creamery who were eye witnesses of the accident say that Mr. Sordaul was in no way to blame, and that he was running very slowly to make the turn up to the creamery.

The Smoker a Great Success

The smoker given at the school house Saturday night by the Holt Commercial Club was a decided success in every respect.

The two main addresses were given by editor J. S. Arneson of The Thief River Falls Tribune and county agent J. J. McCann of the same city. Their subjects were sweet clover and alfalfa well mixed with large sized chunks of optimism. They showed that this country had the natural mineral soil so necessary for the successful growing of the above crops, and cited many instances to prove their assertions. Their speeches were greatly enjoyed by everyone present.

The male quartette rendered a couple of selections that brot down the house.

A lunch was served which was also enjoyed, after which the chairman called on editor Mussey of the Grygla Eagle and several farmers for short talks.

The school auditorium was crowded with enthusiastic farmers and townspeople from Holt, Grygla and Theif River Falls, all of whom voted it a dandy good meeting.

Don't fail to attend the home talent play to night.

W. O. Braggans been selected by the county board, for county attorney.

Misses Maude Forsythe and Alice Adams came Wednesday to visit relatives.

Work of graveling the state aid road, north of town, was commenced yesterday.

DOCTORS WANTED TO OPERATE

Mrs. Quillon Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Saved Her from an Operation

Muskegon, Michigan.—"After doctoring for eight or nine years with different physicians without any relief at all, they said at last that medicine would not reach my case and I should have an operation. I had heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and often saw it advertised in different papers where some women had suffered just as I did and got well and strong again by taking the Vegetable Compound. I decided to see what it would do for me, and before I had finished the fourth bottle I was much better, the weakness stopped and the severe pains in my sides left me. I am now much stronger and do my own work and work in the factory besides. I am still taking the Vegetable Compound and give it all the praise."—Mrs. NELLIE QUILLON, 17 Morris St., Muskegon, Mich.

Women should heed such warning symptoms as bearing-down pains and weakness, for they indicate some female trouble, and a persistent and faithful use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will seldom fail to help.

Ridicule for Symmes' Hole.

Among those who thought the earth hollow and inhabited within was Capt. John Cleves Symmes, who lived from 1779 to 1829. He claimed that the earth was open at both the North and South poles for the admission of light and air, and contained within it other eccentric globes, all inhabited in a like manner. His belief in this theory was so strong, notwithstanding the general ridicule heaped upon "Symmes' Hole"—as it was popularly called—that he both wrote and lectured on the subject.

A petition was finally presented to congress in 1823 asking that an expedition be fitted out to investigate, but nothing was done about it.—Detroit News.

CAPTAIN SAZARAC

—20—

"A-Barataria!" he howled. "La—" The Seraphine suddenly heeled with a puff of wind that came as she cleared the shoals. It shook the wounded buccaneer from his failing grasp on the rigging. But even in mid-air, Gorgio, the Catalan, repeated his call of the old days; then his body heaved out and plunged to the opalescent waters, streaking like a comet to the depths.

"D—n!" growled Dominique. "Is this a dead ship? Where are the bullies that I raise not a man? Monsieur de Almonaster! Captain Sazarac! I lay a course—now have this ship worked!"

"Lay her as she is, old gabbler," retorted Sazarac. "Starboard a bit—the mist is closing on the Spaniard, and he cannot stir in the air that moves this beauty! A long trick at your wheel, Dominique!"

Still the rotund politician would not understand. "Our lads—" he fumed. "If I take the deck I want something to work with, Monsieur—Sazarac!"

De Almonaster was holding his arm through whose sleeve the blood would spout despite his efforts. Louise Lestron stared in a wild disbelief from the shadowy disorder forward on the schooner to the master.

When Sazarac spoke, it appeared to be to her: "There are none left—you have seen the last men of a vanished race. You have seen men die in honesty. For you, Mademoiselle—for a woman, at which they would have laughed; for the peace of the world, which they would have scorned! It is a strange thing you see—I and old Dominique alone on this bloody deck—alone more than any human heart can know!"

The two gentlemen took her to the cabin, while the crippled schooner fled on a blinded path, anywhere to be out from the guns of the king o' Spain. They took her to the emperor's suite; and Monsieur de Almonaster found bread and meat for her; and Monsieur Sazarac held wine to her lips.

There, also, the gentlemen discovered a thing which they did not report to Mademoiselle. They closed the door softly to the cabin, and tried to make a jest of all the terrors that came with the taking of the Seraphine.

In the tapestry-hung stateroom, with his boots on and his blood-stained head deep in the pillow, the Emperor of the Bottle lay upon Bonaparte's bed once more. He might be sleeping, or he might be dead . . . the gentlemen could not take time to discover with so many other grim questions mounting to the eyes of each across the emperor's board.

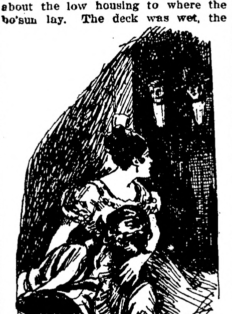
Be that as it may, the Emperor, having reached the privacy of his chamber, flatly refused to leave it again, even though his lady of the camellia was now just outside the paneled door.

CHAPTER XVI

The Loot of a Buccaneer.

The shortened sail was snapping in a clear morning breeze which worried Dominique, still at his trick with the wheel, which was all that a rotund alderman, his knees too much sagged with fat living, might attempt. A fair morning, and a following sea; with not a sail in sight. Pursuit, even from the heavy-footed Spanish troopship might have gone badly with the two hundred-ton schooner, short-handed as she scampered on.

The two gentlemen who had been gravely washing down the decks, came about the low housing to where the bo'sun lay. The deck was wet, the dying buccaneer was wet, Mademoiselle Lestron looked up, the shaggy head with its huge, gold earrings, pillowed on her lap; and her face was wet also—a sparkle lent by the sea and the fountains of her woman's compassion.



"He Will Not Be Moved, Messieurs!"

She turned from her ministrations with a wan smile: "He will not be moved, Messieurs!"

"Old robber—" muttered Sazarac; "stubborn to the end, eh?"

"It is my place—here in the weather. I am no quarter-deck gentry, nor new hag prentice to be laid below in the doctor's room for all a thrust or two."

"Johanness, you are going soon," answered the chief gravely.

"That is what I wanted of you. Send away the English woman—" and though he growled this, when she had arisen he looked about at her from under his gray bushy brows and smiled. "I want to lie wi' you a moment, and look at the flying tops. You will need to shorten sail, and I rage that I cannot spring to the tops again. Name o' G—d!—a seaman on his back and loose blocks clattering! . . . Is the English woman gone?"

"She is well away with Monsieur de Almonaster."

"Good! Now, you are Lafitte, and not this woman's Sazarac. It is this, Jean. In my shrimper's camp back at La Caminada there is a packet in my sea chest. It tells of plunder that Crump and De Jonville and I buried on Cozumel twenty years ago. Some gold, some silver and a handful of jewels. The two others have been dead long since; and I wish the stuff for you—"

"I can never return to Louisiana, Johanness," said the leader gently.

"Eh? Well, that is so!" The old man's voice was breaking lower. He turned his face to watch the white spume arise along the weather rail, the highest glitter of it striking his face. "Well, let me be, my captain! I wish to lie alone staring at the dizzy tops. Naught but them against the blue and the sea weathering up at me. Now—let be, Jean!"

The master put his hand back on his breast and walked aft. The weary group by the steersman looked questioningly up.

"Let no one go near him. It is his wish. I shall roll him from the chains. That, too, is his wish. I—alone!"

And again the girl looked wonderingly at him. "What are you to them all, Monsieur? That rough men turn to you in this fashion, as I have seen them die—the priest, the brother and the comrade?"

"A name," he said, and smiled; and then would say no more.

Louise had bound up De Almonaster's sorely wounded arm. Now they all lay in the shelter of the after-housing, save the lad, Clark, who had taken the wheel. Old Dominique, Monsieur Sazarac and Count de Almonaster with the English woman.

The creak and haul of the gear in the freshening wind was all the sound, and Dominique croaked his misgivings.

"A sore wild night for us all, hearties, if it keeps on. And another mystery there may be for the coffee-houses, and that is the end of the Seraphine and the yelling bullies who stole her from the Place d'Armes! I trust the Mayor Rouiffignac will put flowers on my desk in the council chamber."

They tried to smile for the sake of Mademoiselle. Now and then, with a curious little frowning fear, she had glanced down the raised skylight to the cabin of the emperor. It was, indeed, as if she was watching there for an apparition. At times she would have asked of the ragged man she saw there in the chair of honor with the scalp wound that had given him something the appearance of one who wore a red coronet and jauntily; but always the two gentlemen had courteously evaded her.

The two gentlemen had conferred apart, now and then; reservedly, perhaps, but with common honesty.

"You would make the Mississippi passes with this ship, Monsieur?" inquired De Almonaster. "It appears quite impossible that we should!"

"What is in your mind, Monsieur?" retorted Sazarac dryly.

"Your life again. Granting this shorthanded vessel can be brought to the Mississippi, there is an answer we must make for this affair."

"There is the answer I made to Mademoiselle Lestron."

"True—true!" The younger man shrugged. "There is, in addition, my honor that the Seraphine yet sail on the mission for the emperor. There are gentlemen in New Orleans with money in this venture. If a crew could be shipped by any means—"

Monsieur Sazarac laughed aloud. At the end it amused him—this punctilious regard each had for honor—his own and the other man's, and each for the other's life and future. That was what Mademoiselle Lestron had put upon them, this meticulous notion to stand aside rather than overreach.

"Come," he said good-humoredly. "Is there a quarrel in us, Monsieur?"

"In the end she will know you are Jean Lafitte," went on De Almonaster evenly. "But it is not I who should tell her. Is not that fair?"

"I will bow to her from the gallows the governor will erect in the Place d'Armes, and announce myself, if needs be," said Monsieur Sazarac.

"Jean!" the younger man sprang up hotly. "This is no jesting! She loves you!"

"A ghost—Sazarac," smiled the other. "Ah, indeed, this is worthy of the man who lies below in the suite of Napoleon, babbling a glory which is compounded of fever and cognac! What is there to love in Sazarac, once the mask is torn from him?"

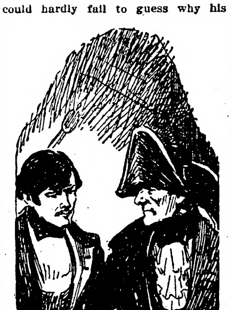
"That is the point of it," retorted the other soberly. "One can love a mask . . . a woman can go on forever loving the illusion she deems a man to be!"

"The irons she will see upon Monsieur Lafitte in New Orleans will not be an illusion." The master smiled again detachedly: "This romantic fancy of hers for Sazarac! Go below, ask Monsieur Jarvis who has suffered for her, bled for her, saved her life and refuses to be anything but the veriest mystery and illusion to her! He refuses to be anything more. . . . My friend, Jarvis, is very wise. Monsieur Sazarac can go no further than the gallows in the Place d'Armes, and there smile down at her regretting he is not himself."

"Ah, well!" the young man started up bitterly. "I can make nothing of it! I love her, Monsieur Lafitte—and she loves the magic of Sazarac!"

He arose and paced the wet deck, wincing as the swordthrust through his left arm cut him under the dressing her hands had made for it. She saw him from her cushioned perch by the steersman. Dominique had taken the trick again, and sent the lad, Clark, to the lookout. A fine hot youth Raoul de Almonaster had come to be under the press of the eventful fortnight since the Seraphine fled from the river's mouth; the languid aristocrat of the sugar plantations had flung against the steel of Monsieur Sazarac and tempered to a man.

She would have called him and tried to win him from his moods, but she feared the flame of him . . . she could hardly fail to guess why his sword had leaped from its sheath on Campeche reef; and surely the Seraphine had seen enough of men's passions and their blood.



"One Can Love a Mask—a Woman Can Go On Forever Loving the Illusion She Deems a Man to Be!"

And Monsieur Sazarac, too, had his moods again. He found affairs to keep him busied, as, indeed, well a sailor might on this man-crippled schooner; but once, happening to glance down the cabin skylight, with her incessant curiosity, she saw him there. He stood in deep thought, it appeared. Then he went to the door of the emperor's stateroom, and rapped upon it with his silver sword hilt. She thought he laughed slightly, as a man who had thought upon a serious matter until it became amusing.

The door opened. She could not tell by whom, but Monsieur Sazarac bowed with an accentuated flourish. There was a sardonic smoothness to this bow; and Sazarac entered the emperor's chamber. The door closed, and for an hour nothing happened in the cabin. It irritated Mademoiselle Lestron. A mystery with grim laughter in it . . . about all the blood and death and fire of the weeks there had seemed grimacing mirth.

Even the dying, wounded fellows, overwhelmed by the boarding Spaniards on the port bow last night; that, too, was a jest, for if the king's men had made one more assault the Seraphine would have been theirs again. The swords of Monsieur de Almonaster and Monsieur Sazarac were the only ones against them when they broke back to their boats. The last dead of the Seraphine lay in a close row before the fo'cas'le hood—Beluche, the admiral; Nez Coupe, the riven-faced; Bohon, the smuggler; Joe Rigo of Isle Grande; Freniere and two others; a fallen rank to which, presently, she saw Monsieur Sazarac carry the last—the bo'sun, Johanness.

Then the master stood bareheaded in the sun and looked them over. He seemed satisfied; he took a deck-broom and swept around them carefully, as if these were a treasure heaped on the schooner's spray-lashed bow; and then he came aft. Mademoiselle Lestron saw that he carried a number of shabby things. A drenched velvet cap, a broken pistol, a faded sash, a cutlass and a gold earring from the bo'sun's head. With these he went down the main companionway to the emperor's cabin, knocked on the door and then entered. The door closed.

She glanced at Alderman Dominique drowsing at the wheel. The flapping canvas, as the schooner wore off a bit, brought his eyes open.

"Monsieur Dominique! What is going on?" she cried.

"Eh? On? I trust my head is still on—and remains so? What—"

"What is this play for me?" she broke in passionately.

STATE POTATO EXCHANGE SURE

Marketing Plan Originating in Fargo Is to Be Carried Out in Detail.

Fargo, N. D.—Preliminary arrangements for the organization of the North Dakota Potato Growers' exchange began at once following the arrival in Fargo of Charles M. Morgan from Warsaw, Ind., who will supervise the meetings which will be held in the state to acquaint growers with the commodity marketing plan.

During the next six or eight weeks it is planned to acquaint growers of the state with the nature of this plan. Mr. Morgan stated that the success of the movement is based upon thorough knowledge by growers of the co-operative marketing plan, and that for the present all efforts will be concentrated on allowing growers and business men to study commodity marketing before any attempts at actual organization will be made among the growers. County and state committees will be formed for the prospective campaign, and meetings will be held at which the commodity marketing plan based on the Sapiro contract will be discussed.

Is Experienced Man.

Mr. Morgan, who is a Californian, has been engaged in co-operative marketing activities for the past four years, and is considered an expert in his field. In that time he has been in the organization, publicity, administration, and other angles of the work, and has traveled and studied co-operative marketing extensively. He organized the first cotton associations in Arizona, worked with the American Cotton Growers, organized the Missouri Cotton Growers, and has just completed a campaign for the Indiana Onion Growers' association.

"From my experience and observation on co-operative marketing from coast to coast, where I have seen the commodity marketing plan operate with a wide range of farm commodities, I have no doubt that the system will greatly benefit both growers and business men of North Dakota, and that within a few years of operation it will bring about much improvement in agricultural conditions."

COUNTY AGENTS CONFERRING

Farmers Will Select Own Program for Work in State.

Fargo, N. D.—Discussions of programs of work to be arranged during the winter months for the coming year are the principal topics before the county agents of North Dakota in a series of conferences now under way in the state.

The farmers in the various counties will select their own programs of work at community meetings to be held later by the county agents in their own programs of work at community meetings to be held later by the county agents in their respective counties. Much of the time of the county agents during the winter months will be devoted to these community gatherings, at which they will discuss the various projects which the farmers desire to have undertaken.

The reports which the county agents make covering their work were discussed at length at the conference here and will be taken up at the other meetings. The aim of the state headquarters at the agricultural college is to get a uniform report, which will conform to the requirements of the federal government.

A considerable portion of the expense of county agent work is borne by the national government, and the Washington officials require detailed information as to work done by each agent.

The reorganization of county agent work in North Dakota about a year ago, when the county agents were made responsible for the three phases of extension work, the work of carrying information developed at the agricultural colleges to the farmers, the farmers' wives, and the boys and girls has also brought about need for changes in the reports.

Hail Insurance Notes Sold

Bismarck, N. D.—The state industrial commission has sold $1,700,000 "more or less" of notes to make possible payment of state hail insurance warrants in cash as soon as issued by the department and state auditor, it is announced. At the same time Governor R. A. Nestos, in response to inquiries, said that he would not call a special session of the legislature for the purpose of either increasing the hail tax beyond the 50 cents and 71 cents levy or to permit depletion of the surplus or revolving fund by paying a part of hail claims out of that.

Never-Stop Railway.

A never-stop railway, the trains of which require neither driver, conductor nor signals, is being experimented with at the Kursaal, South End, where 600 yards of track have been laid for testing purposes.

The speed of the train is automatically increased and decreased. When it arrives at a station the train slows down to about one mile and a half an hour, so that passengers can step on to a "landing-stage" level with the station platform. The principle is similar to that of the escalator. But once past a station the train gathers speed up to 24 miles a hour. Its speed is controlled by a screw, which is driven by a special motor.

No noise is made by the train, and the wheels are rubber tired.—London Answers.

CHEVROLET

Every Farm Needs Two

EVERY farm needs two automobiles, one of which should be a closed model Chevrolet.

The open touring car is best for general farm use, carrying passengers or perhaps miscellaneous bulky produce or merchandise, but for cold or rainy weather, and for church or social use the family needs a closed car, either a 2-passenger Utility Coupé as illustrated, or the 5-passenger Sedan. The extra large rear compartment is a feature of the Coupé.

These closed cars are very finely made, furnished, upholstered and trimmed. The windows are of plate glass and can be lowered, providing as much air as an open car, yet affording full protection against wind, rain, snow or cold when raised.

With a second car on a farm, one is always available for those at home when the other car is out.

The low prices of Chevrolet make the ownership of two cars feasible for most farm families.

Condensed Stories of Happenings of the Week in Minnesota

Chatfield—Pastors from southeastern Minnesota, were in attendance here at the annual conference of the German Lutheran church of southeastern Minnesota.

Winona—Ground will be broken here for the new chapel of St. Mary of the Angels to be erected at the College of St. Teresa at a cost of $100,000. Construction is to begin at once.

Duluth—An attempt was being made to account for the series of explosions which accompanied a fire which destroyed the plant of the Cutler-Magner company, causing a $300,000 loss.

St. Cloud—C. A. Mann, professor of architecture at the University of Minnesota, was elected president of the Minnesota Unitarian conference meeting here.

Rosemount—Fire raging in the Empire Meadows, 160 acres of wild grass and peat land four miles south of here, shot flame and smoke into the sky. The cause of the fire is unknown.

St. James—More than 60 teachers of the rural schools of Watonwan county attended an institute here. Miss Cora Giere of the state department of education was in charge.

Winona—The city council called for bids on a $100,000 sewer project in the east end of this city to be completed by October 15, 1924. The project is the largest of its kind ever undertaken here.

Fairmont—The board of health has issued an order that all owners of dogs must tie them up and keep them confined for a period of 30 days. The order was issued as the result of a rabies scare.

Kenyon—The People's Co-operative Shipping association has been organized here by C. W. Smeltzer, of South St. Paul, who has about completed his membership drive. Officers of the new organization will be elected.

St. Michael—A $7,000 pipe organ, installed in the Church of St. Michael here, was dedicated with a sacred concert. Selections were given by well known organists and singers from the twin cities.

Little Falls—The annual teachers' institute for rural teachers of Morrison county, was in session here with an enrollment of 134. Practically every school in the county was represented.

Mankato—A group of dentists has made an offer to the Mankato board of education to treat free all school children whose parents are not able to pay for dental service. Each dentist will give half a day a week to the work.

Mankato—Kenneth B. Law was chosen head instructor of a new department to be conducted by the Mankato board of education, for the special benefit of 65 former service men now on farms in 29 counties in southern Minnesota.

Faribault—E. P. Lynch, state president of the Retail Implement Dealers' association and a director of the Minnesota Implement Insurance Company of Owatonna, was elected a director of the National Retail Implement Dealers' association at its meeting in Chicago.

Duluth—Duluth and Superior were hosts to Rt. Rev. Nathan Soderblom, archbishop of the Lutheran church of Sweden, and one of the leading church figures of the world, who is making a transcontinental tour of the United States.

Red Wing—Work on the first farm power electric test line ever built in the United States, will be started here immediately, according to the announcement of Charles F. Stuart, assistant general manager of the Northern States Power company and well known Minneapolis big game hunter.

Buhl—Buhl public library board and board of education began the joint operation of a traveling library. It is housed in a bus, and will visit the surrounding mining localities, including Dean, Hartly, Kinney and others in the immediate district.

Pratt—W. F. Barker, station agent here for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway, is dead in a hospital at Rochester, Minn., according to word received here. He was 69 years old and was engaged in railroad work practically all his life.

Pipestone—Minnesota Masons' contribution to the contents of the cornerstone of the George Washington Memorial building soon to be erected at Alexandria, Va., will be an article carved from Pipestone taken from the famous Indian quarries here. Masons in each state of the Union are to send some article to be placed in the cornerstone.

Duluth—Led by their "scout" car and piloted across the Bayfield peninsula and on to the Head of the Lakes, the Apostle Islands Indian pageant boosters of Bayfield, Washburn and Ashland, accompanied by a band of Indians, arrived here.

Blue Earth—The 24th annual convention of the Second district Women's relief corps, closed a two day session here.

Glencoe—An advancing market for good dairy cattle in Minnesota was indicated when tabulation of the sales at the annual auction of the McLeod County Holstein-Friesian association here showed that the 42 head of grade Holsteins had brought an average of $84 each. This is a much higher price than grades of similar age and quality brought a year ago, Joseph W. Uhlis, secretary of the association, said.

Mankato—Residents of exclusive residence districts in the city voiced protests against the establishment of "funeral homes" near their homes before the city council.

St. James—Decision was made here to have the annual Watonwan county poultry show at Madelia in January, 1924.

North Mankato—J. B. Nelson, former mayor, and W. G. Feager, one of the present members of the city council, will be contestants for the mayorality of this city at the municipal election Nov. 6.

Willmar—The $15,000,000 national Yeoman of America Orphans' Home is apparently lost to Kandiyohi county. The heat problem was the obstacle to selecting the beautiful site.

Gilbert—Patrick Murphy, millionaire lumberman and real estate owner of Gilbert, was fatally injured when his automobile struck another machine and was hurled into a ditch. He died at Gilbert a short time after the accident.

Grand Rapids—Buyers from Long Island are in Itasca county, in the vicinity of Grand Rapids, offering $1 per 100 pounds for potatoes though the ordinary market is only 40 cents per hundred. The easterners want certified Green Mountains for seed.

Owatonna—Authorities of Pillsbury academy and republicans here were notified by Senator Irvine L. Lenroot of Wisconsin that he would be unable to come here to speak at a meeting which was scheduled jointly by the academy and republicans.

Albert Lea—The central conference of the English Lutheran synod, conducted at the Salem church here, closed with an address by Rev. Charles L. Grant of the Faith church. The next meeting of the group will be at Madison, Wis., next June.

Rochester—Somewhere in Olmsted county an elk is running loose and surprising those who see it. The animal escaped from the heard at Mayowood farm a few days ago, and since then reports from several points in the county say the residents were astonished to find an elk in their field.

Mankato—The Southern Minnesota Older Boys conference will be in session in Mankato for three days, Nov. 30 and Dec. 1 and 2. A. B. Morris of the state teachers college has been appointed chairman of the local conference committee.

Anoka—After deliberating seven hours, a jury of six men and six women in district court at Anoka, returned a verdict of first degree manslaughter against Tom H. Boyd, 70 year old mootrcab owner, for the shooting of Frank Laferriere last August.

Austin—Joseph Keenan, C. N. Belsecker and Thomas Dugan, all residents of Austin, are the only living members of the first fire department organized here, in 1870. This month the survivors of Pioneer Hook and Ladder and Bucket company No. 1 of Austin have a reunion at which they will revive the experiences of the old days.

Minneapolis—Two things, co-operation between business men and farmers, and the low price of potatoes, are helping immensely to advance the campaign for membership in the new Minnesota potato co-operative marketing association, and the goal of 174,000 acres under contract by Jan. 1 looks attainable, S. G. Rubinow, manager of the membership campaign, said.

Willmar—The railway mail clerks, postoffice employees, city and rural mail carriers of the Willmar district have organized into the Federal Organization of Postal Employees of Central Minnesota. The organization was perfected for the purpose of bettering their services to the public. Frank J. Bingham is president and Ernest Freed, vicepresident.

Caledonia—The proposition to drain the island lands in the Mississippi river between Reno and New Albin received a jolt when the Houston county board of commissioners decided to fight the project. It was figured that the estimate of the engineers, placing the cost at $400,000, would create a burden too great for the taxpayers to bear and far beyond the possible benefits.

Waseca—Building of a baby chick hatchery, which will turn out 100,000 baby chicks in the coming season is contemplated by the Waseca Chamber of Commerce. The foundation for the building, which has been laid, will be completed by December, according to the plans. This new industry is being financed entirely by local capital.

Bemidji—More than 600 farmers of this vicinity were guests of the Bemidji Civic and Commerce association.

Worthington—The contest of the will of the late Daniel Shell of Worthington, former state senator, will be tried before a jury in the Nobles county district court, with Judge E. C. Dean of Fairmont presiding. The estate in controversy is said to inventory more than $200,000. Dan. Shell was one of the best known men in southwestern Minnesota and for many years was a leader in politics and banking.

Winona—Guy E. Maxwell, president of the Winona State Teachers' college, was elected president of the Minnesota Council of Religious Education, formerly the Minnesota Sunday school association, at its 65th annual convention in session here.

Garden City—Old officers were reelected at the annual meeting of the Blue Earth County Agricultural society here. They are, David Crane, president; A. D. MacCormick, secretary; T. [illegible] Crane, treasurer; Frank Wolf, William Just and George [illegible] J. L. Champion and H. C. Krause were named vice presidents.

GIRLS! HAIR GROWS THICK AND BEAUTIFUL

35-Cent "Danderine" Does Wonders for Lifeless, Neglected Hair.

A gleamy mass of luxuriant hair full of gloss, luster and life shortly follows a genuine toning up of neglected scalps with dependable "Danderine." Falling hair, itching scalp and the dandruff is corrected immediately. Thin, dry, wispy or fading hair is quickly invigorated, taking on new strength, color and youthful beauty. "Danderine" is delightful on the hair; a refreshing, stimulating tonic—not sticky or greasy! Any drug store.—Advertisement.

Would Hurt Her Case.

"I wish to get a divorce from my husband."

"What is the trouble?" asked the lawyer.

"Life with him has too many ups and downs. One day he abuses me, the next day he showers me with diamonds."

"Um. How long has this been going on?"

"Four years. Have I grounds for divorce?"

"Of course. But don't come into court loaded with jewels."

A Lady of Distinction
Is recognized by the delicate, fascinating influence of the perfume she uses. A bath with Cuticura Soap and hot water to thoroughly cleanse the pores followed by a dusting with Cuticura Talcum powder usually means a clear, sweet, healthy skin.—Advertisement.

Pardon.

Lawyer—What is the name of the man who struck you?

Witness—Pardon.

"I said, 'What is his name?'"

"Pardon."

"Pardon me, but don't you know his name?"

"Pardon me, I do! It's Pardon."—London Tit-Bits.

Mrs. Christina Van Hess

The Appealing Charm of Health and Beauty

Sioux Falls, S. Dak.—"About two years ago I was in a rundown, nervous condition, my back ached terribly and I had bearing pains. I suffered from functional disturbances, and felt sick and mean all over. A friend told me about Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and she was so enthusiastic about it that I bought a bottle. I never took a medicine in my life that did me so much good; it strengthened me and rid me of all my aches and pains. My system was regulated and my nervousness left me. I am still just as well and strong as can be—never know a sick or wearisome day and I give all the credit to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription."—Mrs. Christina Van Hess, 1425 N. Dakota Street.

Not the Right One.

"You look worried, old man," said Charles. "What's the matter?"

"I called on Miss Graham last night," returned Claude, "and no sooner had I entered the house than her mother appeared and demanded to know my intentions."

"That situation must have been rather embarrassing."

"Yes, but that wasn't the worst. Just as the old lady finished speaking Miss Graham shouted down the stairs:

"'Mother, that isn't the one!'"

In the rough places in life, when men use cusswords to each other, it means endearment.

Hard Stroke.

Bill (who's just received the glassy eye from girl he met on vacation)—Did you notice the way she held her chin up.

Tom—Yes. And to think of the hours you held that chin up teaching her to swim last summer.—Boston Transcript.

A little of everything is nothing in the main.

Vanity is the greatest handicap to greatness.

His Proper Sphere.

Neversweat—I was readin' about a feller who believes that when you die your soul goes into some other person or animal.

His Wife—If that's so when you die I'll expect to find your soul in a settin' hen.

It takes thirteen muscles to make a smile. Don't smile in the wrong place, if you think thirteen is unlucky.

DOCTORS WANTED TO OPERATE

Mrs. Quillon Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Saved Her from an Operation

Muskegon, Michigan.—"After doctoring for eight or nine years with different physicians without any relief at all, they said at last that medicine would not reach my case and I should have an operation. I had heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and often saw it advertised in different papers where some women had suffered just as I did and got well and strong again by taking the Vegetable Compound. I decided to see what it would do for me, and before I had finished the fourth bottle I was much better, the weakness stopped and the severe pains in my sides left me. I am now much stronger and do my own work and work in the factory besides. I am still taking the Vegetable Compound and give it all the praise."—Mrs. NELLIE QUILLON, 17 Morris St., Muskegon, Mich.

Women should heed such warning symptoms as bearing-down pains and weakness, for they indicate some female trouble, and a persistent and faithful use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will seldom fail to help.

Ridicule for Symmes' Hole.

Among those who thought the earth hollow and inhabited within was Capt. John Cleves Symmes, who lived from 1779 to 1829. He claimed that the earth was open at both the North and South poles for the admission of light and air, and contained within it other eccentric globes, all inhabited in a like manner. His belief in this theory was so strong, notwithstanding the general ridicule heaped upon "Symmes' Hole"—as it was popularly called—that he both wrote and lectured on the subject.

A petition was finally presented to congress in 1823 asking that an expedition be fitted out to investigate, but nothing was done about it.—Detroit News.

CAPTAIN SAZARAC

By Charles Tenney Jackson

Copyright by The Bobbs-Merrill Company

"A-Barataria!" he howled. "La—"

The Seraphine suddenly heeled with a puff of wind that came as she cleared the shoals. It shook the wounded buccaneer from his failing grasp on the rigging. But even in midair, Gorgio, the Catalan, repeated his call of the old days; then his body heaved out and plunged to the opalescent waters, streaking like a comet to the depths.

"D—n!" growled Dominique. "Is this a dead ship? Where are the bullies that I raise not a man? Monsieur de Almonaster! Captain Sazarac! I lay a course—now have this ship worked!"

"Lay her as she is, old gabbler," retorted Sazarac. "Starboard a bit—the mist is closing on the Spaniard, and he cannot stir in the air that moves this beauty! A long trick at your wheel, Dominique!"

Still the rotund politician would not understand. "Our lads—" he fumed. "If I take the deck I want something to work with, Monsieur—Sazarac!"

De Almonaster was holding his arm through whose sleeve the blood would spout despite his efforts. Louise Lestron stared in a wild disbelief from the shadowy disorder forward on the schooner to the master.

When Sazarac spoke, it appeared to be to her: "There are none left—you have seen the last men of a vanished race. You have seen men die in honesty. For you, Mademoiselle—for a woman, at which they would have laughed; for the peace of the world, which they would have scorned! It is a strange thing you see—I and old Dominique alone on this bloody deck—alone more than any human heart can know!"

The two gentlemen took her to the cabin, while the crippled schooner fled on a blinded path, anywhere to be out from the guns of the king o' Spain. They took her to the emperor's suite; and Monsieur de Almonaster found bread and meat for her; and Monsieur Sazarac held wine to her lips.

There, also, the gentlemen discovered a thing which they did not report to Mademoiselle. They closed the door softly to the cabin, and tried to make a jest of all the terrors that came with the taking of the Seraphine.

In the tapestry-hung stateroom, with his boots on and his blood-stained head deep in the pillow, the Emperor of the Bottle lay upon Bonaparte's bed once more. He might be sleeping, or he might be dead . . . the gentlemen could not take time to discover with so many other grim questions mounting to the eyes of each across the emperor's board.

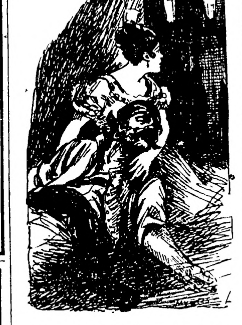
Be that as it may, the Emperor, having reached the privacy of his chamber, flatly refused to leave it again, even though his lady of the camellia was now just outside the paneled door.

CHAPTER XVI

The Loot of a Buccaneer.

The shortened sail was snapping in a clear morning breeze which worried Dominique, still at his trick with the wheel, which was all that a rotund alderman, his knees too much sagged with fat living, might attempt. A fair morning and a following sea; with not a sail in sight. Pursuit, even from the heavy footed Spanish troopship might have gone badly with the two hundred-ton schooner, short handed as she scampered on.

The two gentlemen who had been gravely washing down the decks, came about the low housing to where the bo'sun lay. The deck was wet, the dying buccaneer was wet, Mademoiselle Lestron looked up, the shaggy head with its huge gold earrings pillowed on her lap; and her face was wet also, a sparkle lent by the sea and the fountains of her woman's compassion.



"He Will Not Be Moved, Messieurs."

She turned from her ministrations with a wan smile: "He will not be moved, Messieurs!"

"Old robber—" muttered Sazarac, "stubborn to the end, eh?"

"It is my place here in the weather. I am no quarter deck gentry, or new-thing prentice to be laid below in the doctor's room for all a thrust or two."

"Johanness, you are going soon," answered the chief gravely.

"That is what I wanted [illegible] send away the English woman," and though he growled this, when she had arisen he looked about at her from under his gray bushy brows and smiled. "I want to lie wi' you a moment, and look at the flying tops. You will need to shorten sail, and I rage that I cannot spring to the tops again. Name o' G—d!—a seaman on his back and loose blocks clattering! . . . Is the English woman gone?"

"She is well away with Monsieur de Almonaster."

"Good! Now, you are Lafitte, and not this woman's Sazarac. It is this, Jean. In my shrimper's camp back at La Caminada there is a packet in my sea chest. It tells of plunder that Crump and De Jonville and I buried on Cozumel twenty years ago. Some gold, some silver and a handful of jewels. The two others have been dead long since; and I wish the stuff for you—"

"I can never return to Louisiana, Johanness," said the leader gently.

"Eh? Well, that is so!" The old man's voice was breaking lower. He turned his face to watch the white spume arise along the weather rail, the highest glitter of it striking his face. "Well, let me be, my captain! I wish to lie alone staring at the dizzy tops. Naught but them against the blue and the sea weathering up at me. Now—let be, Jean!"

The master put his hand back on his breast and walked aft. The weary group by the steersman looked questioningly up.

"Let no one go near him. It is his wish. I shall roll him from the chains. That, too, is his wish. I—alone!"

And again the girl looked wonderingly at him. "What are you to them all, Monsieur? That rough men turn to you in this fashion, as I have seen them die—the priest, the brother and the comrade?"

"A name," he said, and smiled; and then would say no more.

Louise had bound up De Almonaster's sorely-wounded arm. Now they all lay in the shelter of the after-housing, save the lad, Clark, who had taken the wheel. Old Dominique, Monsieur Sazarac and Count de Almonaster with the English woman.

The creak and haul of the gear in the freshening wind was all the sound, and Dominique croaked his misgivings.

"A sore wild night for us all, hearties, if it keeps on. And another mystery there may be for the coffee-houses, and that is the end of the Seraphine and the yelling bullies who stole her from the Place d'Armes! I trust the Mayor Rouiffignac will put flowers on my desk in the council chamber."

They tried to smile for the sake of Mademoiselle. Now and then, with a curious little frowning fear, she had glanced down the raised skylight to the cabin of the emperor. It was, indeed, as if she was watching there for an apparition. At times she would have asked of the ragged man she saw there in the chair of honor with the scalp wound that had given him something the appearance of one who wore a red coronet and jauntily; but always the two gentlemen had courteously evaded her.

The two gentlemen had conferred apart, now and then; reservedly, perhaps, but with common honesty.

"You would make the Mississippi passes with this ship, Monsieur?" inquired De Almonaster. "It appears quite impossible that we should!"

"What is in your mind, Monsieur?" retorted Sazarac dryly.

"Your life again. Granting this shorthanded vessel can be brought to the Mississippi, there is an answer we must make for this affair."

"There is the answer I made to Mademoiselle Lestron."

"True—true!" The younger man shrugged. "There is, in addition, my honor that the Seraphine yet sail on the mission for the emperor. There are gentlemen in New Orleans with money in this venture. If a crew could be shipped by any means—"

Monsieur Sazarac laughed aloud. At the end it amused him—this punctilious regard each had for honor—his own and the other man's, and each for the other's life and future. That was what Mademoiselle Lestron had put upon them, this meticulous notion to stand aside rather than overreach.

"Come," he said good humoredly. "Is there a quarrel in us, Monsieur?"

"In the end she will know you are Jean Lafitte," went on De Almonaster evenly. "But it is not I who should tell her. Is not that fair?"

"I will bow to her from the gallows the governor will erect in the Place d'Armes, and announce myself, if needs be," said Monsieur Sazarac.

"Jean!" the younger man sprang up hotly. "This is no jesting! She loves you!"

"A ghost Sazarac!" smiled the other. "Ah, indeed, this is worthy of the man who lies below in the Suite of Napoleon, babbling a glory which is compounded of fever and cognac! What is there to love in Sazarac once the mask is torn from him?"

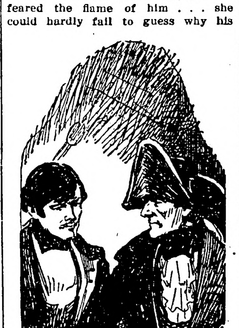
"That is the point of it," [illegible] the other soberly. "One can love a mask . . . a woman can go on forever loving the illusion she deems a man to be!"

"The irons she will see upon Monsieur Lafitte in New Orleans will not be an illusion." The master smiled again detachedly. "This romantic fancy of hers for Sazarac! Go below . . . ask Monsieur Jarvis who has suffered for her, bled for her, saved her life and refuses to be anything but the veriest mystery and illusion to her! He refuses to be anything more. . . . My friend, Jarvis, is very wise. Monsieur Sazarac can go no further than the gallows in the Place d'Armes, and there smile down at her regretting he is not himself."

"Ah, well!" the young man started up bitterly. "I can make nothing of it! I love her, Monsieur Lafitte—and she loves the magic of Sazarac!"

He arose and paced the wet deck, wincing as the swordthrust through his left arm cut him under the dressing her hands had made for it. She saw him from her cushioned perch by the steersman. Dominique had taken the trick again, and sent the lad, Clark, to the lookout. A fine hot youth Raoul de Almonaster had come to be under the press of the eventful fortnight since the Seraphine fled from the river's mouth; the languid aristocrat of the sugar plantations had flung against the steel of Monsieur Sazarac and tempered to a man.

She would have called him and tried to win him from his moods, but she feared the flame of him . . . she could hardly fail to guess why his sword had leaped from its sheath on Campeche reef; and surely the Seraphine had seen enough of men's passions and their blood.



"One Can Love a Mask—a Woman Can Go On Forever Loving the Illusion She Deems a Man to Be!"

And Monsieur Sazarac, too, had his moods again. He found affairs to keep him busied, as, indeed, well a sailor might on this man-crippled schooner; but once, happening to glance down the cabin skylight, with her incessant curiosity, she saw him there. He stood in deep thought, it appeared. Then he went to the door of the emperor's stateroom, and rapped upon it with his silver sword hilt. She thought he laughed slightly, as a man who had thought upon a serious matter until it became amusing.

The door opened. She could not tell by whom, but Monsieur Sazarac bowed with an accentuated flourish. There was a sardonic smoothness to this bow; and Sazarac entered the emperor's chamber. The door closed, and for an hour nothing happened in the cabin. It irritated Mademoiselle Lestron. A mystery with grim laughter in it [illegible] about all the blood and death and fire of the weeks there had seemed grimacing mirth.

Even the dying, wounded fellows, overwhelmed by the boarding Spaniards on the port bow last night; that too, was a jest, for if the king's men had made one more assault the Seraphine would have been theirs again. The swords of Monsieur de Almonaster and Monsieur Sazarac were the only ones against them when they broke back to their boats. The last dead of the Seraphine lay in a close row before the fo'castle hood: Beluche, the admiral; Nez Coupe, the riven faced; Bohon, the smuggler; Joe Rigo of Isle Grande; Freniere and two others; a fallen rank to which, presently, she saw Monsieur Sazarac carry the last—the bo'sun, Johanness.

Then the master stood bareheaded in the sun and looked them over. He seemed satisfied; he took a deck-broom and swept around them carefully, as if these were a treasure heaped on the schooner's spray lashed bow; and then he came aft. Mademoiselle Lestron saw that he carried a number of shabby things. A drenched velvet cap, a broken pistol, a faded sash, a cutlass and a gold earring from the bo'sun's head. With these he went down the main companionway to the emperor's cabin, knocked on the door and then entered. The door closed.

She glanced at [illegible] Dominique drowsing at the wheel. The flapping canvas, as the schooner wore off a bit, brought his eyes open.

"Monsieur Dominique, what is going on?" she cried.

"Eh? Oui! I trust my head is still on and remains so? What—"

"What is this play, for me?" she broke in passionately.

STATE POTATO EXCHANGE SURE

Marketing Plan Originating in Fargo Is to Be Carried Out in Detail.

Fargo, N. D.—Preliminary arrangements for the organization of the North Dakota Potato Growers' exchange began at once following the arrival in Fargo of Charles M. Morgan from Warsaw, Ind., who will supervise the meetings which will be held in the state to acquaint growers with the commodity marketing plan.

During the next six or eight weeks it is planned to acquaint growers of the state with the nature of this plan. Mr. Morgan stated that the success of the movement is based upon thorough knowledge by growers of the co-operative marketing plan, and that for the present all efforts will be concentrated on allowing growers and business men to study commodity marketing before any attempts at actual organization will be made among the growers. County and state committees will be formed for the prospective campaign, and meetings will be held at which the commodity marketing plan based on the Sapiro contract will be discussed.

Is Experienced Man.

Mr. Morgan, who is a Californian, has been engaged in co-operative marketing activities for the past four years, and is considered an expert in his field. In that time he has been in the organization, publicity, administration, and other angles of the work, and has traveled and studied co-operative marketing extensively. He organized the first cotton associations in Arizona, worked with the American Cotton Growers, organized the Missouri Cotton Growers, and has just completed a campaign for the Indiana Onion Growers' association.

"From my experience and observation on co-operative marketing from coast to coast, where I have seen the commodity marketing plan operate with a wide range of farm commodities, I have no doubt that the system will greatly benefit both growers and business men of North Dakota, and that within a few years of operation it will bring about much improvement in agricultural conditions."

COUNTY AGENTS CONFERRING

Farmers Will Select Own Program for Work in State.

Fargo, N. D.—Discussions of programs of work to be arranged during the winter months for the coming year are the principal topics before the county agents of North Dakota in a series of conferences now under way in the state.

The farmers in the various counties will select their own programs of work at community meetings to be held later by the county agents in their own programs of work at community meetings to be held later by the county agents in their respective counties. Much of the time of the county agents during the winter months will be devoted to these community gatherings, at which they will discuss the various projects which the farmers desire to have undertaken.

The reports which the county agents make covering their work were discussed at length at the conference here and will be taken up at the other meetings. The aim of the state headquarters at the agricultural college is to get a uniform report, which will conform to the requirements of the federal government.

A considerable portion of the expense of county agent work is borne by the national government, and the Washington officials require detailed information as to work done by each agent.

The reorganization of county agent work in North Dakota about a year ago, when the county agents were made responsible for the three phases of extension work, the work of carrying information developed at the agricultural colleges to the farmers, the farmers wives, and the boys and girls has also brought about need for changes in the reports.

Hail Insurance Notes Sold

Bismarck, N. D.—The state industrial commission has sold $1,006,000, "more or less" of notes to make possible payment of state hail insurance warrants in cash as soon as issued by the department and state auditor, it is announced. At the same time Governor R. A. Nestos, in response to inquiries said that he would not call a special session of the legislature for the purpose of either increasing the hail tax beyond the 50 cents and 71 cents levy or to permit depletion of the surplus of revolving fund by paying a part of hail claims out of that.

Never-Stop Railway.

A never-stop railway, the trains of which require neither driver, conductor nor signals, is being experimented with at the Kursaal, South End, where 600 yards of track have been laid for testing purposes.

The speed of the train is automatically increased and decreased. When it arrives at a station the train slows down to about one mile and a half an hour, so that passengers can step on to a "landing-stage" level with the station platform. The principle is similar to that of the escalator. But once past a station the train gathers speed up to 24 miles a hour. Its speed is controlled by a screw, which is driven by a special motor.

No noise is made by the train, and the wheels are rubber tired.—London Answers.

CHEVROLET

Every Farm Needs Two

EVERY farm needs two automobiles, one of which should be a closed model Chevrolet.

The open touring car is best for general farm use, carrying passengers or perhaps miscellaneous bulky produce or merchandise, but for cold or rainy weather, and for church or social use the family needs a closed car, either a 2-passenger Utility Coupé as illustrated, or the 5-passenger Sedan. The extra large rear compartment is a feature of the Coupé.

These closed cars are very finely made, furnished, upholstered and trimmed. The windows are of plate glass and can be lowered, providing as much air as an open car, yet affording full protection against wind, rain, snow or cold when raised.

With a second car on a farm, one is always available for those at home when the other car is out.

The low prices of Chevrolet make the ownership of two cars feasible for most farm families.

News Briefs from All the State

Condensed Stories of Happenings of the Week in Minnesota

Chatfield—Pastors from southeastern Minnesota, were in attendance here at the annual conference of the German Lutheran church of southeastern Minnesota.

Winona—Ground will be broken here for the new chapel of St. Mary of the Angels to be erected at the College of St. Teresa at a cost of $100,000. Construction is to begin at once.

Duluth—An attempt was being made to account for the series of explosions which accompanied a fire which destroyed the plant of the Cutler-Magner company, causing a $300,000 loss.

St. Cloud—C. A. Mann, professor of architecture at the University of Minnesota, was elected president of the Minnesota Unitarian conference meeting here.

Rosemount—Fire raging in the Empire Meadows, 160 acres of wild grass and peat land four miles south of here, shot flame and smoke into the sky. The cause of the fire is unknown.

St. James—More than 60 teachers of the rural schools of Watonwan county attended an institute here. Miss Cora Giere of the state department of education was in charge.

Winona—The city council called for bids on a $100,000 sewer project in the east end of this city to be completed by October 15, 1924. The project is the largest of its kind ever undertaken here.

Fairmont—The board of health has issued an order that all owners of dogs must tie them up and keep them confined for a period of 30 days. The order was issued as the result of a rabies scare.

Kenyon—The People's Co-operative Shipping association has been organized here by C. W. Smeltzer, of South St. Paul, who has about completed his membership drive. Officers of the new organization will be elected.

St. Michael—A $7,000 pipe organ, installed in the Church of St. Michael here, was dedicated with a sacred concert. Selections were given by well known organists and singers from the twin cities.

Little Falls—The annual teachers' institute for rural teachers of Morrison county, was in session here with an enrollment of 134. Practically every school in the county was represented.

Mankato—A group of dentists has made an offer to the Mankato board of education to treat free all school children whose parents are not able to pay for dental service. Each dentist will give half a day a week to the work.

Mankato—Kenneth B. Law was chosen head instructor of a new department to be conducted by the Mankato board of education, for the special benefit of 65 former service men now on farms in 29 counties in southern Minnesota.

Faribault—E. P. Lynch, state president of the Retail Implement Dealers' association and a director of the Minnesota Implement Insurance Company of Owatonna, was elected a director of the National Retail Implement Dealers' association at its meeting in Chicago.

Duluth—Duluth and Superior were hosts to Rt. Rev. Nathan Soderblom, archbishop of the Lutheran church of Sweden, and one of the leading church figures of the world, who is making a transcontinental tour of the United States.

Red Wing—Work on the first farm power electric test line ever built in the United States will be started here immediately, according to the announcement of Charles F. Stuart, assistant general manager of the Northern States Power company and well known Minneapolis big game hunter.

Buhl—Buhl public library board and board of education began the joint operation of a traveling library. It is housed in a bus, and will visit the surrounding mining localities, including Dean, Hartly, Kinney and others in the immediate district.

Pratt—W. F. Barker, station agent here for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway, is dead in a hospital at Rochester, Minn., according to word received here. He was 69 years old and was engaged in railroad work practically all his life.

Pipestone—Minnesota Masons' contribution to the contents of the cornerstone of the George Washington Memorial building soon to be erected at Alexandria, Va., will be an article carved from Pipestone taken from the famous Indian quarries here. Masons in each state of the Union are to send some article to be placed in the cornerstone.

Duluth—Led by their [illegible] and piloted across the Bayfield peninsula and on to the Head of the Lakes, the Apostle Islands Indian pageant boosters of Bayfield, Washburn and Ashland, accompanied by a band of Indians, arrived here.

Blue Earth—The [illegible] convention of the Second district Women's Relief corps [illegible] a two day session here.

Glencoe—[illegible] dairy [illegible] Minnesota was indicated when tabulation of the prices at the annual auction of the McLeod County Holstein-Friesian association here showed that the 52 head of grade Holsteins had brought an average of $84 each. This is a much higher price than grades of similar age and quality brought a year ago, Joseph W. [illegible], secretary of the association, said.

Mankato—Residents of exclusive residence districts in the city voiced protests against the establishment of "funeral homes" near their homes before the city council.

St. James—Decision was made here to have the annual Watonwan county poultry show at Madelia in January, 1924.

North Mankato—J. B. Nelson, former mayor, and W. G. Feager, one of the present members of the city council, will be contestants for the mayorality of this city at the municipal election Nov. 6.

Willmar—The $15,000,000 national Yeoman of America Orphans' Home is apparently lost to Kandiyohi county. The heat problem was the obstacle to selecting the beautiful site.

Gilbert—Patrick Murphy, millionaire lumberman and real estate owner of Gilbert, was fatally injured when his automobile struck another machine and was hurled into a ditch. He died at Gilbert a short time after the accident.

Grand Rapids—Buyers from Long Island are in Itasca county, in the vicinity of Grand Rapids, offering $1 per 100 pounds for potatoes though the ordinary market is only 40 cents per hundred. The easterners want certified Green Mountains for seed.

Owatonna—Authorities of Pillsbury academy and republicans here were notified by Senator Irvine L. Lenroot of Wisconsin that he would be unable to come here to speak at a meeting which was scheduled jointly by the academy and republicans.

Albert Lea—The central conference of the English Lutheran synod, conducted at the Salem church here, closed with an address by Rev. Charles L. Grant of the Faith church. The next meeting of the group will be at Madison, Wis., next June.

Rochester—Somewhere in Olmsted county an elk is running loose and surprising those who see it. The animal escaped from the heard at Mayowood farm a few days ago, and since then reports from several points in the county say the residents were astonished to find an elk in their field.

Mankato—The Southern Minnesota Older Boys conference will be in session in Mankato for three days, Nov. 30 and Dec. 1 and 2. A. B. Morris of the state teachers college has been appointed chairman of the local conference committee.

Anoka—After deliberating seven hours, a jury of six men and six women in district court at Anoka returned a verdict of first degree manslaughter against Tom H. Boyd, 70 year old mootcab owner, for the shooting of Frank Laferriere last August.

Austin—Joseph Keenan, C. N. Belsecker and Thomas Dugan, all residents of Austin, are the only living members of the first fire department organized here, in 1870. This month the survivors of Pioneer Hook and Ladder and Bucket company No. 1 of Austin have a reunion at which they will revive the experiences of the old days.

Minneapolis—Two things, co-operation between business men and farmers, and the low price of potatoes are helping immensely to advance the campaign for membership in the new Minnesota potato co-operative marketing association, and the goal of 174,000 acres under contract by Jan. 1 looks attainable, S. G. Rubinow, manager of the membership campaign, said.

Willmar—The railway mail clerks, postoffice employees, city and rural mail carriers of the Willmar district have organized into the Federal Organization of Postal Employees of Central Minnesota. The organization was perfected for the purpose of bettering their services to the public. Frank J. Bingham is president and Ernest Freed, vice-president.

Caledonia—The proposition to drain the island lands in the Mississippi river between Reno and New Albin received a jolt when the Houston county board of commissioners decided to fight the project. It was figured that the estimate of the engineers placing the cost at $400,000 would create a burden too great for the taxpayers to bear and far beyond the possible benefits.

Waseca—Building of a baby chick hatchery, which will turn out 100,000 baby chicks in the coming season is contemplated by the Waseca Chamber of Commerce. The foundation for the building, which has been laid, will be completed by December according to the plans. This new industry is being financed entirely by local capital.

Bemidji—More than 600 farmers of this vicinity were guests of the Bemidji Civic and Commerce association.

Worthington—The contest of the will of the late Daniel Shell of Worthington, former state senator, will be tried before a jury in the Nobles county district court, with Judge E. C. Dean of Fairmont presiding. The estate in controversy is said to inventory more than $200,000. Mr. Shell was one of the best known men in southwestern Minnesota and for many years was a leader in politics and banking.

Winona—[illegible] of the Winona State Teachers' college, was elected president of the Minnesota Council of Religious Education, formerly the Minnesota Sunday school association, at its 65th annual convention in session here.

Garden City—Old officers were reelected at the annual meeting of the Blue Earth County Agricultural society here. They are David Crane, president; [illegible] secretary; [illegible] treasurer; Frank Wolf, William Just and George Bernt [illegible] and H. C. Krause, [illegible] vice presidents.

GIRLS! HAIR GROWS THICK AND BEAUTIFUL

35-Cent "Danderine" Does Wonders for Lifeless, Neglected Hair.

A gleamy mass of luxuriant hair full of gloss, luster and life shortly follows a genuine toning up of neglected scalps with dependable "Danderine."

Falling hair, itching scalp and the dandruff is corrected immediately. Thin, dry, wispy or fading hair is quickly invigorated, taking on new strength, color and youthful beauty. "Danderine" is delightful on the hair; a refreshing, stimulating tonic—not sticky or greasy! Any drug store.—Advertisement.

"I wish to get a divorce from my husband."

"What is the trouble?" asked the lawyer.

"Life with him has too many ups and downs. One day he abuses me, the next day he showers me with diamonds."

"Um. How long has this been going on?"

"Four years. Have I grounds for divorce?"

"Of course. But don't come into court loaded with jewels."

Mrs. Christina Van Hess

The Appealing Charm of Health and Beauty

Sioux Falls, S. Dak.—"About two years ago I was in a rundown, nervous condition, my back ached terribly and I had bearing pains. I suffered from functional disturbances, and felt sick and mean all over. A friend told me about Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and she was so enthusiastic about it that I bought a bottle. I never took a medicine in my life that did me so much good; it strengthened me and rid me of all my aches and pains. My system was regulated and my nervousness left me. I am still just as well and strong as can be—never know a sick or wearisome day, and I give all the credit to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription."—Mrs. Christina Van Hess, 1425 N. Dakota Street.

Not the Right One.

You look worried, old man," said Charles. "What's the matter?"

"I called on Miss Graham last night," returned Claude, "and no sooner had I entered the house than her mother appeared and demanded to know my intentions."

"That situation must have been rather embarrassing."

"Yes, but that wasn't the worst. Just as the old lady finished speaking Miss Graham shouted down the stairs:

"'Mother, that isn't the one!'"

In the rough places in life, when men use cusswords to each other, it means endearment.

GREAT NORTHERN Urges Safety

Be Careful at Grade Crossings

Almost daily there is reported a very large loss of life through preventable accidents, and many people who are not killed outright are maimed and crippled in such accidents.

Carelessness in crossing railroad tracks was responsible for more of these accidents than any other one cause. They are public as well as individual misfortunes. Your turn may come next if you too are not careful. Recklessness on your part will menace those on the train as well as yourself.

There is always a train coming; it may be nearer than you think. A track ahead always means great danger.

About eighty per cent of all automobile drivers do not stop or look in either direction before crossing a railroad track; in about twenty per cent of automobile crossing accidents the automobile is run into the side of a train. No such accidents could happen if automobile and other drivers were careful at every grade crossing.

The train cannot turn out for the automobile, and must cross the highways at its usual speed in order to maintain the service that the people need and demand.

Railroad employees and railroad companies are showing praiseworthy zeal and making rapid progress in the adoption of safety precautions and the liberal use of safety appliances in shops and switching yards as well as on the line. What is being done along this line will be more fully developed in another talk.

Notice!

To all farmers and citizens in and around Holt:

The Twentieth Anniversary of the Red River Valley Dairymen's Association will be held at Crookston, Minn. November 21st. and 22nd.

This is going to be the greatest and the best convention in the history of the association. Besides their regular program the officers of the association have arranged for a pageant, entitled, "The Progress of Dairying in the Red River Valley."

This play will be given in the evening Wed. 21st, under the direction of C. G. Selvig, Supt. of Northwest School of Agriculture. I am sure we would all like to be there and see what progress our Dairymen's Ass'n has made, so let us prepare for it right now.

If possible, and weather is favorable for auto driving, I shall be glad to try and help arrange a tour. I feel that we can go down there with a delegation of 25 or 35 people, if weather is favorable, and all those who wish to go would please report to me Monday and Tuesday of next week, also state whether you have a way to go or not. We shall be ready to leave Holt Wednesday morning not later then 10 o'clock.

Should the roads be poor, one could go on the train Wednesday afternoon and take in the pageant in the evening.

Our First Anniversary

It was a year ago the 6th of November since the Marshall County State Bank commenced doing business in Holt and during this time, it has enjoyed the hearty support of the people of this community. This support has given the bank such a healthy growth that the year ended with total footings of better than $90,000. as may be seen in our financial statement as printed in the Holt Weekly News of this issue.

It is indeed with great satisfaction that the officers of this bank feel towards the people of this community in our years work. We do not pride ourselves alone in our accomplisments, but it is with your united effort together with ours that the bank has progressed so well.

The officers of this bank stand ready to give added service to its many friends of Holt during the coming year. We thank you for the loyalty to us in the past and trust it will always continue.

"I heard you say the seas are wide, and far—far the way to their secret places. It is a chance, Jean." The count seized his arm, for the lieutenant, whom Mademoiselle Lestron had now joined, was returning to them. "Come! I reimburse the gentlemen of New Orleans who were with me in the Girod venture. I give you the Seraphine—without condition."

"Without condition?" Monsieur Sazarac stared oddly at him. Then at Mademoiselle Lestron who had run to them brightly, vivaciously, as if all was arranged, as if the black-hulled schooner and its mysteries would, in an hour, be vanished in the seas . . . and she gladdened at its passing.

"Ah, yes!" Sazarac bowed: "without condition, Monsieur de Almonaster!"

And he bowed again to her, and took her finger-tips and pressed them to his lips. She could not understand this fervor which had a touch of satire. Nor the smile in his somber eyes; his turning away while Monsieur de Almonaster made hurried arrangements with the American lieutenant. Even now they had sent the boat away to apprise the Hornet, and to fetch the improvised crew which would be glad for a berth back to the Indies.

Monsieur Sazarac stood idly apart, twirling his sword knot, as if nothing any longer was affair of his. When Alderman Dominique made some query as to the dead seaman forward he shrugged. That was all.

He strolled forward to stare down at the nine dead buccaneers, and did not return until the Hornet's boats with a crew of strange half-breed men, and two obsequious, grateful, petty officers, were at the Seraphine's side.

While the other party was descending to the small boat he still stood apart. Dominique supposed he was going, dumb hurt as the alderman was at thought of the chance that an instant cry, "Lafitte!" would ring on the Hornet's quarter-deck.

Mademoiselle Lestron thought he was going, for he stood close by the ladder as she was helped away.

But he detained her suddenly at the rail.

"A moment, Mademoiselle—" He exhibited to her a small bracelet. Curiously inlaid, gold of three colors, and a number of pearls . . . the gift of a queen.

Mademoiselle Lestron cried out in joyous wonder. She had never seen Marie Antoinette's bracelet since the night she saw the ragged fellow kiss it in the emperor's cabin, when the mutineers sent her away.

"My bracelet! Monsieur—" All a child's lovely eagerness to grasp a toy was in her face and the hand she reached for it.

Monsieur Sazarac, however, drew it back gravely: "Ah—no!"

"But—my bracelet, Monsieur? I want it!"

"That is the point. It is yours, and you cannot have it."

"Nom de Dieu!" She stared at him incredulously. "Why?"

"It must be stolen. It is essential as a matter of honor."

De Almonaster and Dominique were in the small boat. They looked up astonished; and the girl sat down by them trying to keep back hot puzzled tears.

There was an adieu or so waved from the Hornet's officers in the small boats as they sheered off the schooner's side. Monsieur Sazarac bowed. Bowed to them all with apparently the same debonair dismissal.

Mademoiselle Lestron turned to De Almonaster with a wild whisper. "He is not coming! He is not coming with us!"

For no sooner had Mademoiselle Lestron left the Seraphine that day in 1821, than Monsieur Sazarac turned and ran down in the emperor's cabin. He burst into the doorway of the emperor's stateroom and flung the golden trinket upon the lace and silken coverlet of the emperor's bed.

"There—robber!" he shouted, somewhat impatiently. "Her bracelet—stolen—taken against her will! Are you satisfied?"

The man on the bed looked at it quietly with glittering eyes above his hollow cheeks. He still had his boots on, and the imperial couch was rather the worse for the mud and dried blood upon it. But now he sat up straighter and gestured with superb authority.

"Well, then! You lost her—you will never see her again!"

"I lost her. And neither you nor I will ever see her again!" He looked at the painter of the rue Royale more composedly: "Eh, Jarvis? What should you and I ask of life? Youth turns to youth always—and a fine fellow, this De Almonaster. You and I will never see her again."

"The devil take me if I saw her at all, very clearly. Whether her eyes are brown, or merely very dark blue—and her hair, . . . Eh, well! She never saw me very clearly either. Which is most fortunate. She will remember longest the one who was the greatest mystery. Sir—another peg o' brandy."

"Here—scum o' the seas! Your drink—plunderer o' the ports!"

"Monsieur Lafitte"—the jester crushed back against the emperor's pillows and touched a handkerchief of elegant linen to his lips delicately—"you say I shall die before morning?"

"It is certain as anything I know, Jarvis."

"Jarvis?" The jester grew quite solemn: "Wait a moment, Monsieur Lafitte." He straightened his body a bit: "Now—bring me the cutlass of old Gorgio!"

"I brought it—here," answered Monsieur Lafitte obediently.

"The pistol of Bohon!"

"By your side, there—cleaned and loaded—"

"The head scarf of Nez Coupe!"

"On the pillow by you. And see—the earring of Johanness—"

"Where the devil is the other one?" roared the Bottle Emperor testily.

"I could not get the other one unless I cut the bo'sun's left ear—"

"Name o' evil!—why don't you obey me!" He thrust out a skinny finger and shook it with a lordly wrath.

Monsieur Lafitte shrugged exculpatingly.

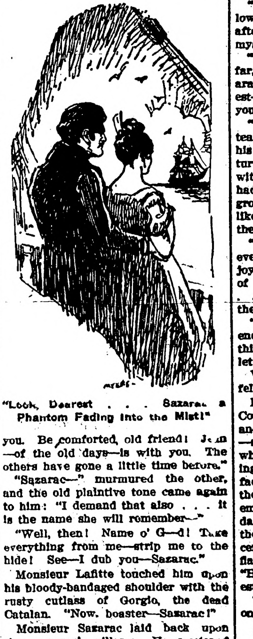
"Eh, well! Can't you be satisfied? You have plundered them all! You have laid a solid shot through a good ship, killed your man on a red deck—boasted, swaggered; robbed nine buccaneers in a row—and looted a jewel from a woman!"

"Not so soon. A pot o' gold, that also is essential. Fetch it at once—"

The master shrugged; then with a patient sigh, he scattered from his pockets an arc of Spanish doubloons across the silken coverlet. "There, corsair! That is all I have to be robbed of. Now, rest, Mad John."

"Another thing. The name—Sazarac—it was the name she loved."

"Perdition!" The other man turned to the bedside: "Well, then—be Sazarac. Monsieur Sazarac was also a ghost. He never dared step from the shadows to her eye, more than did you. Be comforted, old friend! Jean—of the old days—is with you. The others have gone a little time before."



"Look, Dearest . . . Sazarac, a Phantom Fading Into the Mist!"

"Sazarac—" murmured the other, and the old plaintive tone came again to him: "I demand that also . . . it is the name she will remember—"

"Well, then! Name o' G—d! Take everything from me—strip me to the hide! See—I dub you—Sazarac."

Monsieur Lafitte touched him upon his bloody-bandaged shoulder with the rusty cutlass of Gorgio, the dead Catalan. "Now, boaster—Sazarac!"

Monsieur Sazarac laid back upon the emperor's pillows. He motioned to the emperor's decanter. "A peg o' cognac, Monsieur Lafitte."

He moistened his tongue with the drink fastidiously, and rubbed his unshaven chin. A square of blue hung above him through the open skylight, and against it the snowy burst of sail. He could hear the creak of blocks and gear, the faint shout of sailormen aloft to Clark, the English lad at the wheel, as the new crew of the emperor's ship set the royals.

"See here?" exclaimed Monsieur Sazarac thoughtfully. "The flag once painted at my studio in the rue Conti—black with the white bones? You will hoist it tomorrow when they all go over."

"Eh? Over?—Well, I understand, Monsieur, the black flag shall be at the peak."

"How many are there in the row by the fo'cas'le for me to command?"

"Nine. You will make ten, Monsieur Sazarac."

"It must be done by precedence—" ordained the other loftily. "First, I—Monsieur Sazarac—with my plunder. It is all to be wrapped in my silk-lined cloak and tied very tightly to my belt—"

"Dieu de Dieu!" whispered the other; and then to himself: "Is this the fever? . . . the brandy? . . . or the secret soul of my friend?"

Monsieur Sazarac suddenly thundered to recall his lieutenant's mind.

"Silence! I was saying—in precedence! First, Monsieur Sazarac. Then, Beluche, the admiral; Johanness, the bo'sun—and then the others to the green water. I order—you will obey."

"I will obey, Monsieur Sazarac." The last adventurer turned away as if he had a petition to offer. It was hard to conceal that he desired to keep one little thing for himself out of this ravishment.

"See here—Corsair. The little bracelet which you ordered must be stolen? Is it needful that it go to the bottom of the sea with you tomorrow?"

Monsieur Sazarac fixed his bright restless eyes upon the other's somber attentive face. The flicker of a wise ruthless smile came to him.

"It is needful. It is my plunder. It was—hers. Name o' names! There can be no discussion! Pin it to my new waistcoat—do you understand?"

The last man turned away from the emperor's bedside. He took his snuff absently, and sat down with the air of one who had lost the last battle. Then he looked at the plunder of Monsieur Sazarac upon the emperor's pillow.

"Even the bracelet—" he sighed. "What a buccaneer, this Sazarac . . . and tomorrow he will be less lonely than I!"

Monsieur Sazarac, outstretched with some luxurious peace upon the silken, imperial coverlet, appeared to hear this whisper. He turned to see the other man staring out the open port at the sloop rolling in the gentle seas.

"They have reached the deck," murmured Lafitte absently. "She is in De Almonaster's arms . . . she is crying, or laughing, I cannot say which, but she is waving a little hand to us—"

"To Sazarac—I will have that, too," smiled the jester. "My ragged heart has always longed for a tear or a smile from a lady. What riches I have—at the end! Here—Monsieur Lafitte—" He lifted Mademoiselle Lestron's bracelet and tossed it to the other. "Out of the wealth of my empire and my love I give you this trinket as a keepsake from her and from myself. Sazarac must be generous to the last, eh—Jean?"

"He must fail in nothing." The adventurer lifted the bracelet to his lips and smiled in turn: "He must be as she dreamed from the first. Thank you, Monsieur Sazarac."

And the two watched the distant figures on the Hornet. They could not know what the girl was crying out from her lover's arms:

"Raoul! The Seraphine is not following us! She is sailing eastward after all. . . . Oh, Raoul, what is the mystery?"

"The seas are wide—there are many far, secret places for Monsieur Sazarac," he whispered. "Louise! Dearest—and always longed for! . . . you love me! . . . you love me!"

"I love you." She smiled out of her tears, glad for his arm, his tenderness, his understanding, when her eyes turned again to the black schooner with the gold line along the water. It had broken out to snowy sail; it was growing smaller, fainter, in the east, like a lily floating in the sun-wash of the gulf.

"In New Orleans you will know everything," Raoul smiled, out of his joy. "I will tell you everything—and of my love again! Look, dearest . . . Sazarac, a phantom fading into the mist!"

"Ah, but my little bracelet! In the end, perhaps I shall understand everything except why he stole my bracelet!"

Which was exactly the way things fell out.

Long years afterward Madame, the Countess de Almonaster's children—and then the children of her children—stood before a shabby little shop which was once Pierre Maspero's gaming-house, and looked across at the faded facade of the gray house which their forefather built for the exiled emperor. They went, also, of a Sunday afternoon, among the tourists, to the low tomb in the old St. Louis cemetery where the city had carved a flattering inscription from Voltaire's "Henriade" to the memory of an honest councilor:

"The Victor of a Hundred Fights on Sea and Land."

Ah, what jests may live in stone!

Madame, the countess, could relate everything to her children, except about the bracelet of Marie Antoinette. At times, from the gallery of her great house on the Esplanade in old New Orleans, Madame would look across the mighty Mississippi to the dark and flooded forests of Barataria beyond which lay the blue gulf into which Monsieur Sazarac vanished forever from the world of men.

Eh, bien! The adventurer might come again some day with her bracelet . . . but over Monsieur's shoulder would peer his last ragged follower whispering that a jester, too, might love!

[THE END.]

Troops Under British Flag.

Great Britain supports a standing army of 237,500 men and a reserve of 237,500. The untrained reserve is 4,655,500. She also has 17,000 troops in Egypt and 60,000 in Canada, with an available man power of 1,351,000. There are 220,000 in New Zealand and 1,180,000 in the South African possessions. Most of these troops include trained veterans of the World war.

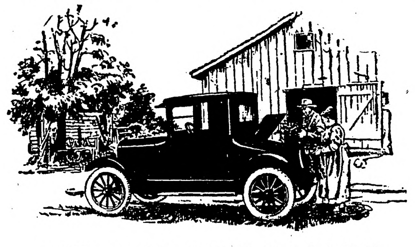
CHEVROLET

Every Farm Needs Two



EVERY farm needs two automobiles, one of which should be a closed model Chevrolet.

The open touring car is best for general farm use, carrying passengers or perhaps miscellaneous bulky produce or merchandise, but for cold or rainy weather, and for church or social use the family needs a closed car, either a 2-passenger Utility Coupé as illustrated, or the 5-passenger Sedan. The extra large rear compartment is a feature of the Coupé.

These closed cars are very finely made, furnished, upholstered and trimmed. The windows are of plate glass and can be lowered, providing as much air as an open car, yet affording full protection against wind, rain, snow or cold when raised.

With a second car on a farm, one is always available for those at home when the other car is out.

The low prices of Chevrolet make the ownership of two cars feasible for most farm families.

FIRST U. S. MILITARY MEDAL

Government Gave Gen. George Washington Decoration to Commemorate Evacuation of Boston.

The first military medal ever bestowed by the American government was one in gold to Gen. George Washington, to commemorate the evacuation of Boston by the British in 1776. Capt. Paul Jones was similarly rewarded after his famous fight with the "Serapis" in 1779, and the three men, Paulding, Williams and Van Wart, who captured Maj. John Andre in 1780, were given special medals by congress.

The first decoration, and so far as Col. Robert E. Wyllie of the general staff of the U. S. A., and author of a work on military and civil orders, decorations and insignia, has been able to discover, which had a general application to enlisted men, was the result of an order issued in 1782 by General Washington. A soldier cited for the decoration was permitted to wear on his facings, over his left breast, the figure of a heart in purple cloth or silk, edged with narrow lace or binding.—Detroit News.

Riches may have wings, but they don't seem to have any tail that one can put salt on.

WIDENS MARKET FOR MEAT

United States Department of Agriculture Gives Hog Raisers Additional Outlet.

A wider market for United States meats, particularly pork, has been made available by the efforts of the United States Department of Agriculture and the State department, the most recent evidence of it being the opening of The Netherlands to shipments of fresh pork. This new market, with the English market, which was opened to the same products about 18 months ago, now gives hog raisers a considerable additional outlet at a time when production is at a high point.

What They Missed.

Hibbing—Hibbing won a sweeping victory at the Virginia meeting of representatives from all parts of the county to discuss the county board levy for next year. The levy of $31,600 for an aviation field here was unanimously approved.

Fairmont — County commissioners of Martin county have drawn up a petition asking Attorney General C. L. Hilton of Minnesota to take legal action to restrain the state of Iowa from completing construction of a dam across Turtle lake, on the Iowa line.

Mabel — Bandits looted the First National bank of $1,000 in silver after entering through an open window. The safe and bank fixtures were wrecked, but the robbery was not discovered until 6 a. m., when villagers found the front door of the bank open.

Owatonna — The entire old administration of the Steele county Red Cross chapter was returned at the annual meeting of the organization here. Heading the organization is Major E. C. Clemans, national American Legion chaplain; Mrs. G. W. Doolittle, secretary, and George R. Kinyon, treasurer.

Ortonville—Organization of the Federation of Club Women of Big Stone county was completed here when the constitution, suggested by the state federation, was adopted. Nearly 100 women were in attendance. The women's club of Graceville issued an invitation to have the next annual meeting in that city.

Owatonna — Owatonna voters approved of the sale of a $350,000 bond issue with which to finance the construction of an electric light, heat and power company, municipally owned, by a majority of 1,199. The vote was 1,750 for the bond sale and 551 opposed. At present this city is served with light, heat and power by the Southern Minnesota Gas and Electric company.

Little Falls — The most important cases to be tried at the November term of district court are those of Alice S. Roberts, and Alfred Roberts vs. A. B. Dennis. The plaintiffs are suing for damages totaling $21,000, alleged to have been received last November when an automobile driven by Dennis ran into one occupied by them on the paved highway south of this city.

Minneapolis — Returning to America with the greatest collection of fossils ever unearthed after three years of field study in the Gobi desert of Mongolia, is Roy Chapman Andrews, of the American Museum of Natural History. A projected expedition of five years in what Mr. Chapman described as the "Paleontological Garden of Eden," was withdrawn after three years of work as a result of the amazing success of the group of scientists in unearthing evidence of animal life of the early periods of the world's history.

Pipestone — Plans are going forward here for the seventh annual Red Cross roll call. The work will start on Armistice day and be continued until Thanksgiving.

Granite Falls — If the weather remains favorable for bicycle riding, Judge Ole Hartwick of this city will soon complete his 4,000 miles in 1923. A week ago the cyclometer on the bicycle Judge Hartwick rides had turned over its 3,650th mile, and he has every hope of adding the additional 350 miles before the snow banks force him to put his bicycle under cover for the winter.

Wreck survivors tell how tobacco kept them going

When food and water gave out on third day, they smoked until rescued

Perhaps they were only pirates of the sea, and deserved no great charity from the hand of Fate. Nevertheless, they were very much human beings when they found themselves miles out to sea adrift in an open boat.

With two days' supply of food and water, they confidently expected to be rescued in plenty of time. But when the third day passed and no friendly sail appeared on the horizon, it began to look like a case for Davy Jones's locker.

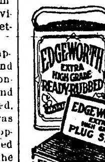
One of the victims, crazy with thirst, suggested that they divide a bottle of iodine and end the agony quickly.

"The tobacco hasn't given out yet," said another. "Let's stick it out a while longer." And they did.

Late in the afternoon of the fifth day a tramp schooner saw their distress signals and came valiantly to the rescue.

"The only thing that kept us going at all was tobacco," one of the survivors admitted when he was safely deposited on dry land again. "We smoked and chewed, and that sort of kept us up."

Tobacco is certainly a poor substitute for food and water—but under the stress of trying circumstances smoking a pipe is a big help.



EDGEWORTH EXTRA HIGH GRADE READY-RUBBED
EDGEWORTH EXTRA HIGH GRADE PLUG SLICE

Pipes filled with Edgeworth probably have no more soothing effect than pipes filled with other tobaccos, but most Edgeworth smokers somehow feel that they need Edgeworth to get complete pipe satisfaction.

If you have never smoked Edgeworth, send your name and address on a postcard to Larus & Brother Company. They will be glad to send you free samples—generous helpings both of Edgeworth Plug Slice and Ready-Rubbed.

Smoke a few pipefuls and judge for yourself whether or not you wish to become a permanent member of the Edgeworth Club.

Edgeworth is sold in various sizes to suit the needs and means of all purchasers. Both Edgeworth Plug Slice and Ready-Rubbed are packed in small, pocket-size packages, in handsome humidors holding a pound, and also in several handy in-between sizes.

For the free samples, kindly address Larus & Brother Company, 73 South 21st Street, Richmond, Va. If you will also include on your postcard the name and address of your regular tobacco dealer, your courtesy will be appreciated.

To Retail Tobacco Merchants. If your jobber cannot supply you with Edgeworth, Larus & Brother Company will gladly send you prepaid by parcel post a one- or two-dozen carton of any size of Edgeworth Plug Slice or Ready-Rubbed for the same price you would pay the jobber.

EX-KAISER HAS PASSPORTS

Former German Emperor Has Passports to Return to His Fatherland.

PRINCE IN GERMANY

Crown Prince Already in Germany and Ex-Kaiser Is Expected Soon His Wireless Has Already Been Installed at Doorn House

Brussels.—The former German emperor is preparing to return to the fatherland. He already has in his hands passports for himself and his suite, and the Brussels Gazette goes so far as to say that it is expected the Hohenzollern monarchy will be restored on December 4, William, or his son, the former Crown Prince Frederick William ascending the throne.

Passports Given Ex-Ruler.

Private advices from Doorn, received by the Agence Telegraphique Belge, say that a courier, Von Hoechst, arrived at Doorn at 4 o'clock Monday with 12 German passports, for the ex-kaiser and his immediate entourage. A telegram in cipher was received there in the morning, and early in the afternoon there was a long conference between William and those close to him. Later, a high Dutch official, Dr. Kan, of the ministry of the interior, called and was closeted with the former emperor for 35 minutes.

A wireless system has been installed at Doorn house, which has been the residence of the head of the Hohenzollerns during the late years of his internment in Holland, and messages are received from Nauen at noon daily.

Oels.—The former German crown prince had not arrived at Oels up to midnight Monday, unless he has succeeded in escaping the vigilance of the waiting correspondents who have been besieging all visible entrances to the castle for the last 20 hours.

Deep and impenetrable mystery surrounds the whereabouts of Frederick William, assuming that he was traveling on the schedule laid out after crossing the Dutch frontier into Germany.

MELLON OUTLINES CUT IN TAX

Tax Revision Suggested by Mellon Asked to be Effective January 1.

Washington.—Federal tax revision under a program applying reductions to the entire range of personal incomes and estimated to cut the nation's tax bill next year by $323,000,000, will be recommended to congress by Senator Mellon.

Secretary Mellon declared that contingent on the non-passage of a soldiers' bonus bill, there should be for this year and for the next four or five years a revenue surplus above ordinary budget expenditures including the fixed debt charges, of something more than $300,000,000. This, he said, gives a reasonable margin for tax revision and reduction.

A soldiers' bonus measure, the secretary asserted, not only would postpone tax reduction "for many years to come," but would mean an increase rather than a decrease in taxes. The treasury, he said, adheres to the "theory that the country would prefer a substantial reduction of taxation to the increased tax that would necessarily follow from a soldiers' bonus."

In the tax revision, which he suggested be made effective next January 1, Mr. Mellon recommended that taxes on earned incomes be reduced 25 per cent and the rate of normal taxes on incomes from four per cent to eight per cent to three per cent and six per cent, respectively. He proposed that the surtax rates be reduced by commencing application at $10,000 instead of $6,000, and scaling them progressively upwards to 25 per cent on incomes of $100,000.

Proposed changes in the earned income and normal tax rates would mean a loss of revenue, the secretary estimated, of $107,000,000, the saving to taxpayers falling largely in the lower income brackets. The proposed scaling down of the surtax rates, he [illegible] higher rather than lower revenues from this source because of the stimulus it would give productive business by the diversion of capital from tax exempt investments.

Important among proposed revisions which would provide taxation increases were limitation of the deduction of capital loss to 12½ per cent of the loss and limitations of the deduction from gross incomes for interest paid during the year and for losses not of a business character to the amount the sum of these items exceeds tax exempt income of the taxpayers.

Wheat Council Urges Acreage [illegible]

Chicago.—The production committee of the wheat council of the United States met here to consider means that might be used to so regulate the production of wheat that it may be generally profitable. Besides promoting an "eat more wheat" campaign the committee proposed to consider improved means for growing the product, grading and regulation of production. "We must start with production in order to reach a lasting solution of the wheat farmer's problem," an announcement said.

Internal cleanliness protects against disease

IT is but a step from those immediate results of constipation—headache, heaviness, loss of appetite—to serious disease. Such minor ailments are a warning that poisons from food waste are flooding your body. Keep clean internally.

In constipation, say intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness including the gravest diseases of life.

Laxatives Aggravate Constipation

Your bath goes only skin-deep.

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is not a laxative and cannot gripe. Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world.

Don't give disease a start. Adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. Nujol is not a medicine. Like pure water, it is harmless. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

GREAT NORTHERN Urges Safety

Be Careful at Grade Crossings

Almost daily there is reported a very large loss of life through preventable accidents, and many people who are not killed outright are maimed and crippled in such accidents.

Carelessness in crossing railroad tracks was responsible for more of these accidents than any other one cause. They are public as well as individual misfortunes. Your turn may come next if you too are not careful. Recklessness on your part will menace those on the train as well as yourself.

There is always a train coming; it may be nearer than you think. A track ahead always means great danger.

About eighty per cent of all automobile drivers do not stop or look in either direction before crossing a railroad track; in about twenty per cent of automobile crossing accidents the automobile is run into the side of a train. No such accidents could happen if automobile and other drivers were careful at every grade crossing.

The train cannot turn out for the automobile, and must cross the highways at its usual speed in order to maintain the service that the people need and demand.

Railroad employees and railroad companies are showing praiseworthy zeal and making rapid progress in the adoption of safety precautions and the liberal use of safety appliances in shops and switching yards as well as on the line. What is being done along this line will be more fully developed in another talk.

Mrs. Halvorsons of Lake Minnetonka, Minn., came Wednesday to visit at the home of her brother-in-law, H. O. Ekerdalen and family.

We will appreciate it very much if all who are owing us, Will call and settle as soon as possible. City Meat Market, H. Walker, Prop.

Gravel hauling on the state road was resumed again Monday morning, and the work will be finished next week, if the weather remains favorable.

A few business men and several of our farmers attended the dairy convention in Crookston on Wednesday and Thursday and report a profitable meeting.

There was a mistake in the announcement of Rev. Myhrer last week. He will hold services Sunday afternoon at home of Hans Ness instead of at his brother's.

P. L. Anderson attended the dairyman's convention in Crookston Wednesday and Thursday and left last night for Fargo to take the government examination.

Lots of dressed turkeys have been shipped out from Holt for the cities Thanksgiving trade. Farmers and their wives are finding turkey and other poultry raising to be profitable. Eggs are a good price too.

Ditch Case Settled

J. A. Sorum received word Saturday from Attorney James Manahan of St. Paul, that one of the members of their firm, Miss Hoogesteger who wrote the brief and argued the case, in the state supreme court, of Consolidated Ditches Nos. 102 and 103., and that said court sustained the order of Judge Grindeland, and that the promoters of the ditch will have to pay all the costs.

This is a great victory and now, many farmers will stick who otherwise would have been compelled to leave their farms.

The original plan called for three main ditches from the Thief River east to the divide in Beltrami County, and including the dredging of several miles of Thief river. The cost would have been close to $2,000,000

The County has spent between $30000 and 40000 in preliminary surveys, and opposing taxpayers spent $5,000 to $6,000 in fighting the case.

This sum would have built several miles of good roads.

Mrs. M. T. Strom returned home Wednesday from a visit with relatives at Thief River Falls.

The interior of the Lutheran church is being kalsomined this week and they expect to paint the floor next week.

Hjalmer Peterson has built a shed over the door of his feed barn and also over the well as a protection against the wintry storms.

Costs Less to Keep Clean.

More than 250,000 deaths and over 4,500,000 cases of serious illness annually are ascribed by Federal and State health reports to needlessly unsanitary conditions. It is an amazing fact that most of this needless lack of sanitation is found, not in the cities, but among the rural and small-town population.

Yet wholly sanitary conditions may be brought about in the country just as quickly and easily as in the city. The actual expenditure involved is very small, especially when you consider how much the family's health will be improved as a result. It will assure also, of course, a great improvement in comfort.

Septic tanks, privy vaults, protection for domestic water supplies, rat-proof outbuildings—all of these can be provided for a little cost and a little work by any man. COULD HARDLY DO HER WORK

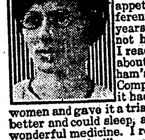
Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her Eat, Sleep and Feel Better Every Way



Chicago, Ill.—"I was weak and run-down and in such a nervous condition that I could hardly do my work. I was tired all the time, and dizzy, and could not sleep and had no appetite. I tried different medicines for years, but they did not help me. Then I read in the papers about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for other women and gave it a trial. I began to eat better and could sleep, and consider it a wonderful medicine. I recommend it to my friends and will never be without it."—Mrs. M. OHLEN, 8640 S. Marshfield Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

It is such letters as these that testify to the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. This woman speaks from the fullness of her heart. She describes as correctly as she can her condition, first the symptoms that bothered her the most, and later the disappearance of those symptoms. It is a sincere expression of gratitude.

For nearly fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been so praised by women.

The Red Lock

A Tale of the Flatwoods

By DAVID ANDERSON

Author of "The Blue Moon"

Copyright by The Bobbs-Merrill Co.

THE BOUND BOY

Three generations ago life on the banks of the Wabash was the life of the frontier—of the backwoods—of the outposts of civilization. Life there was simple—and strenuous. Men were strong and the primitive emotions swayed them. And this is a tale of the days of our grandfathers and of those conditions.

David Anderson, a native of this region, knows it as few do. His "Blue Moon," which told of the pearl fishers, was a great success. "The Red Lock" takes up a time a little later—when the pearl fishers were giving place to permanent settlers. It is a tale of the Flatwoods.

Yes; we have no canal construction in this story. The red lock is a lock of hair recurring in the generations of the Colins—an inheritance from a pirate ancestor who even in those days was regarded as an undesirable citizen. And this red lock played the mischief with any Colin so adorned.

So we have Ken Colin, who mysteriously disappeared, red lock and all; Texie, his pretty and loyal sister; Big Jack—bound boy who loves Texie, and various red-blooded pioneer people who are involved in the results of the reappearance of the red lock.

Nature lovers and woodsmen will find much here to interest them. For the author is close to nature's heart and his pages show his relationship. And Big Jack is an adept in woodcraft, with an efficient eye for an enemy's trail and the quickness of the wild animal life of the Flatwoods.

CHAPTER I

—1—

The Bound Boy.

A girl came out of the back yard of a red-roofed cottage at the up-stream edge of Buckeye, passed around a rather tastefully built barn, with its flanking cribs and pens, crossed the fallow pasture lot in a corner of which it stood, climbed the fence and picked her way up the face of the cliffs that roughly walled the village on three sides, until she stood at last among the jagged and broken pinnacles at the top of Black rock, a lighter speck against the gray green background of the Flatwoods.

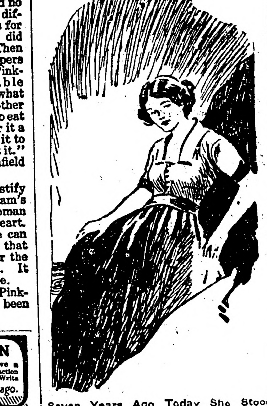
Away beyond the bend where the placid Wabash lost itself among the hills the sun crawled toward the rim of the West. Pendant above the distant timber line its round splendor, burnished bright by the wonder of May, turned a lingering glance at the serene world.

But the girl was not watching the sunset. The splendor of the wide-spread landscape at her feet was lost on her.

Crawling out from under the sunset, halving the village and winding away up the river between cliff and bottom, ran the River road, the one slim artery that connected Buckeye with the great world outside the Flatwoods.

The girl's eyes were on the road. Far up the river—twenty miles of gravel and gray sand—it led to the city. On clear days she had sometimes made out the hazy whiteness of its roofs and spires—the gateway of another world—a world that the errant fancies of girlhood peopled with many a wonder.

Seven years ago to a day she had stood there and watched the Milford stage carry her brother away to the end of that road—through the dim-spired gateway and out into the great world beyond. The East—it swallows up many a man of the West. It had swallowed her brother up. It never gave him back.



Seven Years Ago Today She Stood There and Watched the Milford Stage Carry Her Brother Away to the End of the Road.

The eyes, grown pensive, turned slowly to the upstanding pinnacle of sandstone, polished smooth by a thousand winds, alive in the bronze glow that struck up from the distant riffle. Three names had been rudely carved there, one above the other, so long ago that storm and frost had begun to obliterate them.

The girl picked up a piece of ragged shale and with a sharp corner scraped clean each knife stroke, till the three names stood out clear as the day they were first carved there:

KEN
JACK

She dropped the piece of shale; thoughtfully passed her fingers over the names and glanced down at the foot of the upstanding pinnacle. In a sheltered pocket of the great rock, where only the tempered rays of the sun could strike it, lay a tiny bed of leaf mold set with clumps of yellow orchids not yet abloom—"lady slippers," in the quaint and expressive vernacular of the Wabash country—that had doubtless been transplanted from the deep woods.

The girl stooped above the tiny flower bed—a friendly spot in its setting of stern rocks; plucked away an obtrusive weed or two; let her sobered eyes stray back to the red-roofed cottage, across a small orchard that lay spread at her feet, and out over the rather pretentious farmstead to which the orchard belonged.

Pretentious—just that; a promise of comfort and affluence never fulfilled. There was every evidence that the farmstead had been laid out on a scale much more elaborate than was usual in the Flatwoods, but nothing had been finished—an attempt that failed; a dream that never came true.

Outlined among the weeds and encroaching brambles lay the extensive foundation of the farmhouse, but it had been carried little beyond the foundation. A few sills—huge squared logs, cut and hewed in the upland woods—had been laid. Of the few timbers of the superstructure, some had fallen entirely, others had fallen at one end and hung straining, while even the firmest canted far out of plumb.

Back of this creaking skeleton of time-blackened timbers, and nearer the cliff, stood a mite of a log cabin, rudely constructed, where doubtless a man had housed while dreaming his unfinished dream of house and barns and happy homestead. Rooted beside the door and almost completely covering the cabin, a crimson rambler of many years' growth—a far wanderer that no surroundings can degrade—offered a fragrant suggestion that a woman had shared the dreams of the man.

Three horses grazed in the barn lot down near a big elm that stood at the road gate; some geese squatted along the diminutive rivulet leading from the spring; out in the feed lot lolled a bunch of cattle, fine and thrifty as could have been seen the length of the Wabash.

The eyes of the girl suddenly waked from brooding; darted to a point a short distance up the cliff; livened. The slouch hat and drab corduroy hunting blouse of a tall young woodsman with an immense spread of shoulder had flitted past a break in the bushes as he sprang down the steep and rugged path that picked its way among the rocks from the uplands. She was just in time to see him reach up, put his hand on the top rail of the fence and vault over into the barn lot. The girl missed a breath. Few men in the Flatwoods could have made that leap.

Down by the big elm at the road gate one of the horses, a powerful gelding, glossy black save for one white lock in his foretop, raised his head; came trotting up the lot. The big woodsman put his arm about the arched neck; laid his face against the glossy mane and stroked the soft nose.

"Good ol' Graylock!" he muttered—"bound 'r free, t' you a man's a man—"

A shadow subdued the bold frankness of his face, as a chance cloud draws across a fair field; he gazed hard at the wind-staggered skeleton of the unfinished farmhouse.

His roving eye, following the glow of approaching sunset, found the girl upon the rock, her pliant body softly outlined against the silver-green background of the woods.

"Texie—w'y—!"

In another moment he was facing up the cliff. The girl was waiting for him by the upstanding pinnacle of sandstone, a half sadness in her eyes that gradually subdued the eagerness in his. He laid his big hand on her shoulder; slid it down her arm and gathered her fingers in his great palm. There was not even a twitch of response. He dropped the fingers, backed away a step and stood studying her.

"Jack—? Do y'u know what day this is?"

He puzzled to find the answer she doubtless had in mind; finally ventured the only one he could think of

"Tuesday, May 10th, 1849."

She flared around at him. "You know that ain't what I mean."

The girl pointed to the carved names on the monolith of sandstone. He followed the motion; stepped past her and ran his hand over the three names, lingering an instant over the middle one.

"Pore Ken—" he muttered, "—he could 'a' be'n anything he wanted to, a'most."

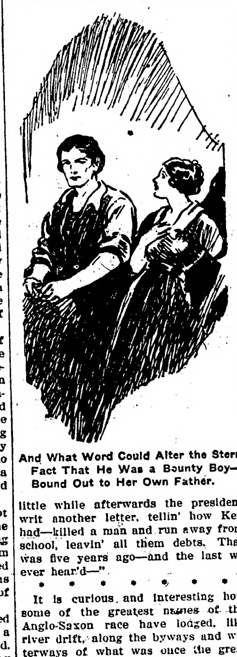
The girl's eyes flinched and turned back to the dim frayed end of the road; the man stood silent.

"Seven years ago t'day," she mused, "you and me stood up here on Black rock and watched the Milford stage haul 'im away off yonder to the city, and out in the big world t' college, and then we—cut them names—"

She paused. He seemed to feel that an answer was expected of him, but made none.

"Two years we got letters—wonderful ones at first. I 'low you ain't f'rgot how we use' t' come up here—you and me—and read 'em." She spoke more to herself than to him. "Then the letters got fewer and farther b'tween, till fin'ly they got s' triflin' ther' wasn't no satisfaction in gittin' 'em.

"Then, y'u know, that terrible one come from the president of the college, tellin' how awful—Ken was carryin' on, and advisin' father t' take 'im home. But he never come, and a little while afterwards the president writ another letter, tellin' how Ken had—killed a man and run away from school, leavin' all them debts. That was five years ago—and the last we ever hear'd—"



And What Word Could Alter the Stern Fact That He Was a Bounty Boy—Bound Out to Her Own Father.

* * * * * * *

It is curious and interesting how some of the greatest names of the Anglo-Saxon race have lodged, like river drift, along the byways and waterways of what was once the great American woods.

Ken, Texie, Jack—the first two Colins; the third a Warhope—names that have been spread wide on English history. And of the two ancient families, probably no purer strain existed than the far-flung thread that had found lodgment here in this out-of-the-way corner of the earth—the great Flatwoods that seventy years ago stretched for many an unbroken mile along the north bank of the upper Wabash.

The man swept a hand toward the distant end of the road. The girl glanced at him.

"Ten more days"—there was a strained firmness in his voice, as if what he was about to say came hard to him—"and I'm ridin' out yonder m'self."

He felt her eyes upon him.

"Ten more," he went on. "This is the tenth of May. When it's the twentieth, I'll be twenty-one—and free. Ten more—I be'n countin' 'em."

A deep seriousness clouded his face; he stared down at the warped skeleton of the unfinished farmhouse. The girl fumbled the bit of ribbon at her waist.

"My father dreamed that dream," he went on. "B'fore it could come true, the Seminoles bolted their reservation and he dropped everything and rushed away to the head of the rangers. You know how he—fell at Okechobee." He paused a moment; gripped his hat and went on. "Mother never saw a well day no more. You know how she lingered along down there under the rose vine till I was twelve. When she—died, it was found out Pap Simon had a mor'gage on everything. He foreclosed; had me—bound out to 'im; and—"

The girl stole a look at his face. It was so hard and bitter that she dared not venture a word. And what word could alter the stern fact that he was a bound boy—bound out to her own father?

> "Wild and savage and terrible, like ol' 'Red Colin' must 'a' looked."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Thanks

By NATHAN HOWARD GIST in Grit

THE cost of saying "Thanks" is not very great. But it sometimes costs a great deal not to say it. Not to say it costs friends, self-respect and a surrender of those sacred instincts which give life its stability, and power, and sweetness.

The one who says "Thanks" is blessed with the virtue of gratitude, is a king among his fellows, and a leader of his kind. He possesses the first qualities necessary to manliness. Those qualities include other rare qualities. That person is like a welcome beacon light on a dark night. It is a pleasure to serve such a one.

The one who lacks this finer sense is to be pitied. He soon becomes lonely and desolate. None care to serve him, for he is unappreciative. He lives a miserable life because he is never awake to the fact that he is a recipient of the good and indispensable things of life. His own ingratitude is his worst enemy.

The value of Thanksgiving lies in the reminder it gives us, that none too often do we say, "Thanks." The season also suggests that we may well say, "Thank you." The expressing of that sentiment does one good. He from Whom all blessings flow is entitled to an expression of our gratitude. That is man's chief blessing—the presence of an Infinite God who created him, in Whom man lives and moves and has his being, and to Whom he again shall go.

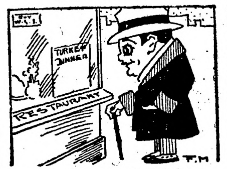
Next to this holy privilege is man's brother man. Each one should be grateful in the depths of the soul for friendships, for fellowship with those about, and for the opportunity of service. Among life's rarest blessings are those which claim our devotion and our share of the world's work.

We should be thankful for adversity more than for prosperity. The best discipline comes through adverse circumstances. That is the best teacher. Superior lumber comes from trees that have long been lashed by storm and tempest. Without hard times and bitterness men would soon become as cattle, grazing knee-deep in the meadow, with no concern and no achievements worthy of more than passing notice.

For the blessing of work, hard work, men should be thankful. He who regards work as a cursed hardship that should have no place in man's life needs to readjust his program. He who fulfills his every task for the fun there is in it is getting the most out of life. Many a man who inherits a fortune from his father does not know the value of things until the crash comes and he loses his fortune. He applies himself to his task. He gathers up the tools of a wasted life. He builds his life's house again. He makes another fortune. This is because adversity, disappointment, hard work put that man on his mettle and brought out the best he had.

Not all of life's blessings are those measured by health, fortune, position and honor. More often they are the things which bring forth and develop the fiber of the individual.

Thanksgiving season should take into account the habits of thrift and industry, the disposition to live wisely and well, contentment with small means, and the riches of patience and perseverance. He who loves God, fellow man, lives honorably, and leaves the world better than he found it is he who knows the blessedness of gratitude. Others also are grateful to him for sowing the good seed of a well-spent life.



THE HAPPY COMBINATION

Thanksgiving joys will soon expand;
The thought that makes a hit
Is an extensive menu and
An appetite to fit.

THINGS FOR THANKSGIVING

To have some books to read,
Some kindly friends to love,
Green grass beneath our feet,
Blue skies and stars above,
Some daily tasks to do,
Enough to eat and wear,
The hopes of each new day
The calm of evening prayer.

USE RADIO IN RESCUE WORK

Series of Experiments Are Being Carried on at Colliery in England.

In the near future radio telephony will probably play an important part in the work of colliery rescue parties. As the rescuers carry out their duties, constant communication will be kept up with those directing operations from a base. That is the object underlying a series of experiments being conducted at Ashington colliery in England. A considerable measure of success has already attended their efforts, and quite recently speech and music were successfully received underground. A party equipped with a three-tube receiving set descended the shaft of the Carl pit and fixed a 20-foot aerial on the bulks supporting the roof. Only one head phone was used, but so clear was the reception that the five men composing the party all heard distinctly. Experiments have already been carried out to depths of 300 yards, and it is expected to test reception at depths of 1,000 yards.—Scientific American.

Passenger (after the first night on board ship)—I say! Where have my clothes gone?

Steward—Where did you put them?

Passenger—In that little cupboard there, with the glass door to it.

Steward—Bless me, sir! That ain't no cupboard; that's a porthole!—London Answers.

ODD SEA MONSTER IS FOUND

It Is Eight Feet Long and Resembles an Elephant Without a Trunk and a Whale.

There has been exhibited in Buenos Aires what South American scientists believe to be a hitherto unknown sea monster, captured some twenty-five miles from the coast near Mar del Plata. It was at first supposed to be a shelless sea turtle, but expert examination shows this is not the case.

It resembles rather an elephant without a trunk, or, more properly, an enormous elephant's head with ears almost perfectly identical with those of that animal. It also has some features similar to those of a whale. Its color is brown, the mouth is large and spherical.

It is nearly eighty feet long and approximately four and a half feet in diameter. It has two vertical fins behind, one above and one below, remotely suggesting the screws of a propeller. The flesh is almost as elastic as rubber.—Living Age.

Visiting Not Necessary.

Test This Out for Yourself—

MANY people who drink coffee regularly are troubled with insomnia; or they feel nervous, "headachy," or suffer from indigestion.

It may be hard for such men and women to believe that coffee is responsible for the way they feel. Because they have always drunk coffee, it hardly seems possible that this old habit could cause trouble.

But there is one sure way to find out whether coffee is harming you. Just stop its use for a week or so, and drink Postum.

Postum is a pure cereal beverage—absolutely free from caffeine, the drug in coffee, which disturbs the health and comfort of many.

After a week or two on Postum, you will sleep better and feel better; then your own good judgment should decide whether you go back to coffee or continue on the Road to Wellville with Postum.

Sold by grocers everywhere!

Postum for Health
"There's a Reason"

Your grocer sells Postum in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages) for those who prefer the flavor brought out by boiling fully 20 minutes. The cost of either form is about one-half cent a cup.

News Briefs from All the State

Condensed Stories of Happenings of the Week in Minnesota

Pipestone — Plans are going forward here for the seventh annual Red Cross roll call. The work will start on Armistice day and be continued until Thanksgiving.

Worthington—Plans are being made for a district convention of the Knights of Pythias in this city. Delegates will be present from the lodges in this section of the state.

Mankato—A case brought by John F. Wilson of Minneapolis, asking damages of $7,500 as the result of the drowning of his daughter, Anna, in the Minnesota river here July 22, has been dismissed.

Montevideo—The symphony orchestra has been reorganized for the season with a membership of 35 musicians. A series of concerts have been planned. Five of these will be given in this city.

Duluth—An affiliation of the chambers of commerce in this section of the country, including Duluth, the Range towns of Superior, Port Arthur and Fort William, will be perfected at a conference here.

Hibbing—Hibbing won a sweeping victory at the Virginia meeting of representatives from all parts of the county to discuss the county board levy for next year. The levy of $31,600 for an aviation field here was unanimously approved.

Winona—More than 100 farmers from all parts of the county attended the first farm bureau "rally day" dinner in this city. Plans for a membership campaign were outlined following an address by J. F. Jones, secretary of the Minnesota Farm Bureau Federation.

Waseca—The Waseca County Poultry association will hold its annual poultry show at Janesville, Nov. 22 to 24. The premium list has been expanded to attract poultry breeders from all over the state.

Rochester—The Olmsted County Tribune, a weekly paper, is about to be established here by W. H. Smeethurt. The paper is to be politically independent. Rochester already has two dailies.

Redwood Falls—The Marshall district Women's Foreign Missionary society of the Methodist church closed here with the election of officers. Mrs. W. J. Robinson of Sleepy Eye, was elected president of the society for the ensuing year.

Redwood Falls—The last of the sugar beet crop is now being shipped from Morgan. The farmers will receive about $8 per ton for their beets and they will average about 10 tons to the acre. Nearly 600 acres were planted to beets this year.

Red Wing—Preston D. Hale of Bazaar, Kan., was named county farm agent to succeed V. H. Kingsbury, dismissed, at a joint meeting of the executive committee of the Goodhue County Farm Bureau and the County Co-operative Extension association.

Red Wing—Old-time river men in this section assert an open winter may be looked for. They have received the "highsign" from the mud turtles, which have not yet sought their winter quarters in the river mud.

Austin—Considerable complaint relative to the loss of hogs in Mower county brought a warning from F. L. Liebenstein, county agent, to farmers to report cases that might be hog cholera. Many herds in the county are sick, Mr. Liebenstein said, and the losses have been heavy

Madison—Frederick Roe has found a large deposit of gypsum in the Minnesota river bottom northeast of here. Samples of the deposit have been obtained for examination to ascertain if the gypsum can be obtained in paying quantities from the river bottom.

Rochester—A project designed to bring about the establishment of a fitting memorial to Rochester's soldiers of all wars, will be launched by the American legion at an Armistice day banquet. Speakers at the banquet will include Senator Allen Furlow, Commander James Pruett of the legion, Dr. A. W. Adson, A. C. Heyerdal and Dr. H. E. Robertson of the Mayo clinic.

Rochester—Company A Third Infantry, which has been spending the past two weeks on recruiting duty here, has returned to Fort Snelling. The company, composed of 60 men commanded by Capt O C Green has taken part in many local activities during its stay.

Chisholm—Hope of finding the bodies of Former Police Chief Oscar Oska and Robert Banta, who were drowned when their boat capsized in 75 feet of water, in Lake Winnibogashish while they were returning heavily laden with game, practically was abandoned.

St. Paul—The Minnesota Railroad and Warehouse commission filed a petition with the Interstate Commerce commission requesting the suspension and investigation of a new tariff which becomes effective December 6, on the Northern Pacific railway on lignite coal from the North Dakota fields to stations in North Dakota, South Dakota and Minnesota.

Granite Falls—Bandits who have been making raids on inland town banks for the past two weeks fired seven charges of nitroglycerine to wreck the safe of the First State bank of St Leo and escaped

Owatonna—Mrs. John Hogan of this city was elected president of the Steele county Ladies' Auxiliary of the Ancient Order of Hibernians at a county convention here.

Mankato—Organization of the Minnesota district of the National Lutheran Education association was completed here.
Epitome

Halloway—A change has been made in banking circles here by which the Farmers and Merchants bank takes over the interests of the Peoples State bank of Halloway.

Wadena—The cornerstone of the new Methodist hospital was laid here in the presence of prominent clergymen from all over the state. A message from Governor Preus was read.

Faribault—Burglars broke into the postoffice and blew the combination from the safe but failed to penetrate to the strong box, and escaped with $300 in stamps and $17 in money.

Willmar—The Kandiyohi Farm bureau has started a drive for 200 members for 1924. The purpose is to raise $1,000 locally so that the bureau will be entitled to state and federal aid.

Wadena—Dr. N. E. Davis of Chicago, executive secretary of the hospitals and homes of the Methodist church, assisted by prominent men, laid the cornerstone for the $100,000 Methodist hospital under construction here.

Stillwater—A new hotel costing between $250,00 and $300,000 was practically assured Stillwater as a result of the splendid response of citizens to the $100,000 bond issue just placed on the market to make the project possible.

Fergus Falls—A special meeting of the school board will be held to determine what punishment will be meted out to the high children who went on strike on Armistice Day and refused to attend classes when the request for a holiday was denied.

Stillwater—Fire damaged the Modern Woodmen of America building here to the extent of $3,000. Besides the Woodman hall, the Cosmopolitan State bank on the second floor and the McGarry Insurance Co., on the first floor was damaged by smoke and water.

Fairmont—Banks, newspaper and landmen of southern Minnesota are joining in a movement to restore and stabilize prices and the market for farm land, according to Clyde E. Southwick, former state representative from Faribault county.

Owatonna—Hundreds of friends and acquaintances of Leonard Virtue, aged 58, who died here, attended his funeral. Mr. Virtue served for three terms as mayor of Owatonna, two terms in the state legislature and was a leader in Owatonna and Steele county and political circles.

Wells—Emma Dorothy Siebert is adjutant of Trosta post of the American Legion here, and is also the only woman member. She was a nurse in the service at Great Lakes station, and in a struggle with a delirious marine she was so badly hurt she has since been unable to follow her profession.

Crookston—G. H. Sanberg is captain of the guard and his lieutenants and high privates are numbered by the score for the campaign to raise $2,000 to be used as a fund to promote the winter show, the dairymen's convention and a number of other conventions that are scheduled or in prospect for this city the coming year.

Owatonna ... Steele county rural school teachers at a meeting here, laid plans for an exhibit of the work of the county's rural school The teachers completed a permanent organization to provide a means of bettering teaching methods and establishing work by means of monthly meetings to discuss school problems.

St. Cloud—A proposal to erect a $100,000 sanatarium for tubercular patients of four counties is under consideration by the Stearns county board of commissioners. The sanatarium, under the proposal, would care for patients from Stearns Meeker, Benton and Sherburne counties.

St. Leo—Hope of apprehending the bandits who wrecked the First State bank was practically abandoned. It was believed that due to the fact that the telephone wires were cut, the bandits got too far away before surrounding towns could be notified to be on the lookout for them.

Shafer—Captured by a posse of citizens four hours after he held up and robbed the Shafer State bank of between $4,500 and $5,000 in currency, Richard Chafee is held in the county jail at Center City. Chafee was overtaken by the posse near Nevers Dam, 10 miles north of Center City. He surrendered without a fight.

Kelliher—A quarrel over a girl on a farm near here resulted in the murder of four persons. His victims are: John Sanders, farmer, 60 years old, father of the girl over whom the quarrel arose. Mrs. John Sanders, 60 years old, the girl's mother. Oscar Timmy, 33 years old, farmer. J A Wilson, 45 years old, marshal at Kelliher, who was shot down. The series of murders arose from a dispute between Portana and Timmy, at Timmy's farm, two miles from the home of Sanders.

Lake City—Four persons were killed at "Dead Man's Crossing," three miles east of here when the fast mail train, No 38, of the Chicago Milwaukee & St Paul railroad, smashed into their automobile The automobile was carried 120 feet and the bodies were mangled almost beyond recognition.

Hibbing—The Messaba range became one big city when 23 different localities, embracing a population of several hundred thousand people, helped Hibbing celebrate the completion of state highway No. [illegible] which extends from Aurora on the east to Grand Rapids on the west.

NURSE GAINS 15 LBS. ON TANLAC

Miss Mary Early, 1531 North 20th St., Omaha, Neb., practical nurse for the past fifteen years, prompted by gratitude for the Tanlac treatment, because of its benefits to her and others, recently gave out the following statement:

"Tanlac is the one medicine I can recommend knowing full well it merits the highest praise, not only because of what it has done for me, but because of what I have seen it do for others. My brother was flat on his back with typhoid for a long time, and afterwards was so weak he could barely walk from one chair to another. I gave him Tanlac and it was simply marvelous the way it built him up.

"Nursing him through this illness left me weak and exhausted. I couldn't eat anything to speak of and my food hurt me, but Tanlac gave me a keen appetite, strengthened my digestion, and I gained fifteen pounds in weight and am still in perfect health. As a nurse and user of Tanlac, I give it my unqualified endorsement."

Cristmas Seals

"The fight against tuberculosis is showing definite and concrete results. In the past twenty years the death rate in the United States, as a whole, from this disease has been cut in half.

In Minnesota, as compared with the tuberculosis death rate of 1911 (when it reached its peak), the figures show that we saved 1,145 lives in 1922.

Seals sell for a penny a piece. Surely nearly every one can buy some and take part in this great work.

Just think what 1,145 more deaths from one disease in one year would have meant, and then consider that the majority would have been between the ages of twenty and forty.

You will be assisting in this great work if you buy some CHRISTMAS Seals"

Iver Engebretson left Saturday to work in the woods near Baudette.

The Security State Bank of Middle River was reopened for business on Monday.

Hoel Bros., have been hauling in baled hay for shipment to E. T. Eide at Spooner.

Renfe Werner got a good flow of water at about 125 feet. Davidson Bros. drilled the well.

John Hagberg has been making some repairs on the pump house, at the creamery this week.

Dr. Froehlich, J. S. Arneson and E. M. Bennes, all of Thief River Falls were Holt business visitors Monday.

O. H. Nohre and part of his road crew came from St. Hilaire Tuesday night with twenty head of horses which they expect to keep here during the winter.

Mr. West of the Central Metropolitan Bank of Minneapolis, was here Monday on business in connection with the old bank.

John Holst and Mrs. J. P. Bennit received the sad news Tuesday of the sudden death of their brother, Fred Holst, which occured the night before at his home near Ada, Minn. They left yesterday for Ada to attend the funeral.

Miss Alma Peterson, formerly of Duluth, writes that she has changed her name and address. Her name is now Mrs. A. D. Turbutt but she failed to say when the change occurred and her address is now Meadow Lands, Minn.

We will appreciate it very much if all who are owing us, Will call and settle as soon as possible. City Meat Market, H. Walker, Prop.

Several committeemen from the townships who opposed the construction of consolidated Ditches Nos. 102 and 103, met in Holt Saturday to figure up the expenses and make the necessary assessments to pay the costs.

The Holt creamery won the third premium, a fine silver cup, for attendance of its patrons at the dairy convention in Crookston last week. We venture the assertion that those in attendance were so well pleased they will all want to attend again next year and take their neighbors with them, and win the first premium for the best little creamery in Northern Minnesota.

ANOTHER NURSE PRAISES TANLAC

Mrs. Leona Culpepper, 17 Lucile Avenue, who was a trained nurse for fifteen years, is another highly esteemed Atlanta woman whose gratitude and desire to help others prompts her to tell of the wonderful results she derived from the Tanlac treatment.

"I had suffered from nervous indigestion and loss of appetite for four or five years," said Mrs. Culpepper, "and was nearly always nauseated. I had heartburn so bad I could hardly stand it, and became so weak and nervous I could hardly do my housework.

"Reading what Tanlac had done for others, I decided to try it, and by the time I finished the first bottle I was feeling so much better that I bought two more. When I had finished the third bottle I was feeling fine and had actually gained sixteen pounds. Tanlac is all that is claimed for it."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Take no substitute.—Advertisement.

Toad Spurts Blood.

The so-called "horn-toad" of our Southwest, which is really a small lizard, has a habit of "spitting blood," as the boys of that region will tell one. But Prof. Vernon Baily, chief field naturalist of the United States Department of Agriculture's biological survey, says the blood comes from its eyes. The Mexicans call them "sacred toads," because they weep tears of blood. The weeping, however, is more like shooting, or squirting, a fine stream or spray, sometimes to a distance of several feet.

THE RED LOCK

A Tale of the Flatwoods

By DAVID ANDERSON
Author of "The Blue Moon"

Copyright by The Bobbs-Merrill Co.

THE PREACHER

SYNOPSIS.—On the banks of the Wabash stand Texie Colin and Jack Warhope, young and very much in love. Texie is the only daughter of old Pap Simon, rich man and money-lender. Jack is the orphan bound boy of Pap Simon, who had foreclosed a mortgage on the Warhope estate. At first Texie and Jack talk sadly of Ken Colin, the girl's missing brother. Then Jack says that in ten days his servitude will be over, that he will ride out into the big world to seek his fortune. Both know what that will mean to them.

She glanced away along the distant windings of the road.

"When men of the woods ride out—yonder, they don't come back. Ken—didn't."

The man's eyes searched her face for some hidden meaning in her words; apparently did not find it.

"I ain't aimin' t' let the big worl' out yonder swaller me up like it did—Ken. Some flatboatmen told me yesterd'y there's a wagon train makin' up in the city for the gold diggin's in California. Y'u know, when a bound boy's time's out, the man he's bound to most gener'ly starts 'im off with a hoss and saddle and bridle. Pap Simon said he fig'r'd on givin' me Graylock.

"I 'low we'll jine that wagon train—Graylock and me. And when we find gold, we're—comin' back."

He stole a shy look at her. She dropped her eyes.

"You'll f'rget the Flatwoods when you've found—gold."

He seemed to search her words again for some meaning that he wished much to find. But her face was very thoughtful and turned aside.

"F'rget the Flatwoods! Where else in the world is there a sight like that? The minute I've got money enough I'm comin' back. I'll buy the homestead back f'om Pap Simon; finish the house; and then—"

An arm unconsciously reached toward her. The movement brought the red-roofed cottage into his line of vision—the red-roofed cottage, where lay a paper that bound him to servitude. He drew his arm back; crushed his hat rim in his powerful fingers.

Down by the rivulet in the barn lot the geese honked and clapped their wings. The sound aroused the man from the half bitter mood and he glanced at his companion, to find her eyes upon him.

"Jack—" she hesitated; "do y'u s'pose it could be the red lock that made Ken act like 'e did?"

The question was so at variance with the man's trend of thought that he was a long time considering it.

"It ain't the red lock," he finally answered in his slow way, "it's the drop of blood that come along with it. F'r that matter, though, every man gits a bad drop 'r two out of the past. But them bad drops can be overcome, if a man bucks ag'in 'em. The trouble with Ken was it didn't 'pear like he wanted t' buck ag'in' his."

"The 'curse of Colin,'" was the girl's musing comment. "F'r hundreds of years—ever sence the days of 'Red Colin,' the old sea pirate—it's be'n breakin' out in the family every few generations. It alw'ys worried Ken that it broke out on him. I've sometimes thought it would 'a' be'n better if he'd never 'a' found out the meanin' of that red lock—that it was the 'curse of Colin'—"

"That's it," he commented. "I 'low Ken fig'r'd the curse had 'im anyhow, and so it wasn't wo'th while t' buck ag'in it."

"Mother kep' the lock cut off, y'u know, till Ken was big enough t' notice it himself. After that he alw'ys kep' it combed under so's it didn't show. I don't reckon anybody in the Flatwoods but you and me and father know'd 'e had it."

"Yes," the woodsman interrupted, "ol' Uncle Nick Wiffles knows. But that's as good as sayin' it's dead and buried. Nothin' ever gits a-past Uncle Nick's jaw."

He grinned, pushed up the mop of tousled hair that fell over his brow and pointed to a scar.

"That's where Ken struck me with 'is whip han'le the day I found out 'e had it."

The girl ran her slim fingers over the scar.

"And he cut me with the whip b'cause I flew at 'im when 'e done it."

"And then I hit 'im with a rock b'cause 'e cut you."

The girl shivered.

"I thought he'd kill y'u that day," she said. "His hat fell off, his hair was mussed, and y'u know how awful it made 'im look when that red lock worked out and fell down over 'is eyes—wild and savage and terrible; like ol' 'Red Colin' must 'a' looked. He jerked y'u up and drawed the butt of 'is whip—mercy! It makes me shiver t' think about it. But he only laughed—hard and wild—and let y'u go."

A smile crawled across the bold features of the woodsman, narrowed his eyes and pinched out two queer little wisps of friendly frankness.

"This ain't Fourth o' July, n'r Chris'mas, n'r nobody's weddin'. How come the scenery?" He reached out his big hand and touched the smart bow of ribbon at her waist.

"W'y, didn't y'u know, the new preacher's a-comin' on the Milford stage this evenin', and we're all goin' t' meet 'im—you, too."

The twinkle at the corners of the man's eyes deepened.

"Am I?"

"Father's already fixed it f'r 'im t' have the use of ol' preacher Mason's study at the parsonage—Mis' Mason's terrible lonesome sence the ol' preacher died, and he'll be company. He'll do 'is writin' and makin' up 'is sermons there. He'll board with us—he ain't married, y'u know."

She paused and laid a hand on the man's arm. He covered it with his great palm; looked hard at her, with suddenly sobered eyes.

"He was a classmate of—Ken's," she went on, "and he's now one of the teachers and preachers in the very college where Ken went."

The man's eyes widened. She drew her hand from under his palm.

"I 'low that's why father was s' quick t' hire 'im; and mebbe that's why he was s' willin' t' come. He ain't none too well, his letter said, bein' nigh broke down with teachin' and preachin', and he 'lowed this would be a good place t' rest up in."

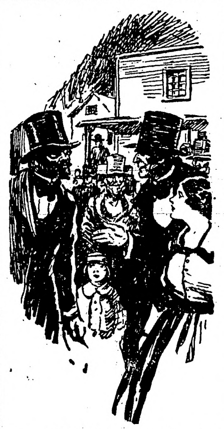
Her eyes swept the serene landscape; suddenly she raised an arm and pointed to the blurred end of the road. His eyes followed the direction of her rigid finger. The Milford stage was just crawling out of the bronze shadows and coming into view. The next moment she had seized his hand and was dragging him, half unwilling, down the cliff.

CHAPTER II

East Meets West.

Of four stages that passed through Buckeye each day—the evening stage from up the river—from the city twenty miles above—was by far the most important. Its arrival was the one big event of the day. Half the village was usually gathered about the broken porch of Zeke Polick's general store to see it come in.

The Buckeye post office shifted back and forth across the River road about as often as the nation changed presidents. Zeke Polick was a Whig, and the man in the White House in far-off Washington happened to be a Whig. That's why the post office was in a store on the north side of the road in the year of grace, 1849, instead of in a store on the south side.



The Old Man Grinned, as Broadly as the Pinched Shrewdness of His Dry Face Would Allow.

The River road was a bigger institution than the town. It not only halved the town; it well-nigh halved its political faith. From the Warhope farmstead at the east edge to the schoolhouse at the west edge, it formed, in political years, a sort of "devil's lane" between the north siders and the south siders. The farmstead and the red-roofed cottage—which is to say Jack Warhope and the Colins—were both on the north side of the road.

Simon Colin had once been Zeke Polick's partner, but had dissolved the partnership years before to follow the more lucrative business of lending money and collecting rents—mostly his own. A banker without a bank, so shrewd was his judgment and so hard the bargains he drove, that half the Flatwoods was under mortgage to him.

He still kept a sort of office in the store—a desk by the dusty window; a narrow shelf nailed along the tops of the palings at the longer side; a chair; a table against the wall, on it three or four law books that were never opened. There was no safe. That was at the red-roofed cottage.

Not a very imposing office—but the commerce of the Flatwoods passed across those time-faded, unpainted palings. Even Zeke Polick, Simon's closest business associate, would have been astonished to know the actual wealth that journeyed in an old satchel back and forth every day between house and store.

Dangerous?—twice the attempt had been made to see inside that satchel, and a man had died each time. The old banker carried a huge double-barreled horse pistol, loaded half to the muzzle with buckshot, and he knew the way to its light trigger as the weasel knows the way to its den.

And the safe at home—a cracksman from the city tried that one night. The old man blew a hole in his ribs the size of an open hand with a sawed-off shotgun he always kept near his bed.

The old banker had just closed his desk, picked up the rusty satchel, and come out on the porch of the store when his daughter and the big woodsman joined the crowd around the post office—a crowd doubly large, gathered for the doubly auspicious occasion.

The girl ran to her father and slipped an arm about his waist. He looked down at her and grunted. It was the only sign he gave that he knew she was there.

Up beyond the Warhope farmstead there came a prodigious rattle of wheels, a clatter of iron-shod hoofs, and the Milford stage dashed into sight; roared across the wooden bridge where the River road crossed Eagle run; rumbled past the church into the village and pulled up in front of the post office.

The crowd flocked around it. The guard threw off the mail sack. Zeke Polick picked it up and carried it in, and the lumbering stage rattled away down the river.

One passenger had alighted, a tall young man wearing a full beard, neatly cropped and pointed—the new preacher, without a doubt—quite the oddest array of satchels and umbrella, patent leather boots and high hat, stiff neck stock and enormous spectacles, that had ever invaded the Flatwoods.

He seemed nervous as he stood at the side of the road peering through his enormous spectacles, slightly amber tinted, upon the crowd.

The old banker, with his daughter a step behind him, advanced, touched his faded black hat and extended his hand.

"The Rev. Caleb Hopkins, I 'low?"

The eyes behind the huge spectacles lighted. The young preacher dropped one of his satchels and met the outstretched hand.

"Ah—Mr.—Colin, I take it?"

"All but the mister. I'm jist plain Sime Colin."

The old man grinned, as broadly as the pinched shrewdness of his dry face would allow.

"I want y'u t' meet my daughter." He half turned; jerked his thumb toward the girl; jerked it back toward the preacher. "Texie, Mr. Hopkins."

The young preacher touched his tall hat; dropped his other satchel, grasped the girl's hand in both his own and pressed it closer than the occasion could possibly warrant.

It may have been merely the expression of a genial nature touched with the fervency of his profession—the outflowing of a benevolence that embraced all humanity—but even so, it brought a quick flush to the girl's face, and drove her eyes to the ground.

The old banker had turned to the crowd.

"Step up, step up," he called, "and shake hands with the new parson. The way y'u hang back, he'll think he's dropped off amongst a pack o' publicans and sinners."

The crowd had evidently been waiting for just such an invitation. Stolid faces raveled into grins, and the quaint vernacular of the Flatwoods had an airing. Odd bits of philosophy, ancient jokes, that nobody would have dared to spring on his neighbor, were freely sprung on the hapless and helpless sojourner from the polite East.

The informal reception was over and most of the crowd gone when Texie noticed Jack Warhope still leaning against the porch post where she had left him. She ran back, caught his arm and dragged him forward.

"Mr. Hopkins, meet Ja—Mr. Warhope."

"Glad to meet you, Mr. Warhope."

The young preacher stretched forth his hand; the other grasped it. The peering eyes behind the heavy glasses studied him with curious intentness, but the woodsman, only mildly interested, missed the inquisitive look.

The old banker had taken a step up the road.

"Well," he said, "I 'low that jist about winds up the how-d'-y'-doin'. Texie, run in and git the mail, and we'll be moseyin'."

He half turned and glanced back over his shoulder at the preacher.

"I've dickered the use of our ol' preacher's study f'r y'u at the parsonage. Sister Mason—the widder, y'u know—she 'lows she'll be right glad to have y'u come over and use the study, she's that lonely sence the parson died. We'll stop as we go a-past, and you can take a look at the study, and meet Sister Mason. But, as I writ y'u, I'm aimin' f'r y'u t' put up with me, at least f'r a few days"—the brisk, raspy voice softened—"I'm honein' t' have a talk with y'u about—the boy."

He glared down at the road; the preacher studied him curiously.

So long had the old money-lender been accustomed to dominate everybody about him that it did not once occur to him to inquire what the preacher's wishes might be. He strode another step or two up the road, remembered that his daughter had gone in after the mail, stopped and frowned half impatiently toward the store door.

At that moment Texie came out with half a dozen letters in her hand, saw the big woodsman, and, with a tiny wisp of roguishness in her eyes, stopped on the edge of the porch.

> "Yes; there's a fairy peeping into the spring right now."

Janesville — The Evangelical Trinity Lutheran church was dedicated here in the presence of hundreds of persons from all over the state.

Mankato — Stockholders of Bethany college have turned down the offer to exchange the local college property for 11,000 acres of North Dakota land.

Big Falls — Bandits, who entered this village by automobile cut all the telephone wires leading out of the town, dynamited the safe of the Al Schalsby soft drink parlor and escaped with $500 in cash and checks.

Winona — Purchase of the Young Women's Christian association administration building in this city by the council of the Knights of Columbus was announced here. The building is to be used as a lodge quarters and clubhouse for the new owners.

Thief River Falls — Dr. George Milan, for the last four and one-half years medical director of the Oakland Park Sanatorium near this city, has tendered his resignation to the board of directors.

Stillwater—Fire damaged the Modern Woodmen of America building here to the extent of $3,000. Besides the Woodman hall, the Cosmopolitan State bank on the second floor and the McGarry Insurance Co., on the first floor was damaged by smoke and water.

Marshall — Merwin Kiel, a farmer near here, has no cause to complain of his corn crop this year. On a tract of 145 acres Kiel will have more than 9,400 bushels of corn, the average being about 65 bushels to the acre. Last year the same field yielded 7,100 bushels of corn.

Breckenridge — Authorities sent the 2½-year-old boy, found brutally beaten in an outhouse at Nashua, back to his father and little brother in Denver. The father, John J. Randall, was located through the efforts of Judge Ben B. Lindsey, of the juvenile court at Denver, who reported to the officials here that the parent was an honest, hard-working father who had placed the child in care of a couple which recently disappeared from town.

Duluth — Handcuffed and locked in a stateroom on board the steamer Huronic, John Donald Lockwood, age 25, former Toronto, Can., policeman, who was detained here for the Fort William, Ont., police where it is said he escaped from jail Nov. 4, and who was being returned to Fort William, disappeared in mid-lake before the ship reached Port Arthur and was missing when Fort William authorities met the boat to take him off.

Hibbing — Seventeen minutes after the jury took the case, the jury returned a verdict of not guilty in the case of C. G. Alexander, charged with grand larceny in connection with padding the payroll while superintendent of schools. The verdict brings to an end a trial which has been followed with interest by the people of the entire range. This was the second trial for Mr. Alexander and his second acquittal.

Faribault — State Highway Commissioner C. M. Babcock has notified County Auditor Frank M. Kaisersatt that Siems, Helmers and Schaffner, contractors who built the Faribault-Northfield concrete pavement on Trunk Highway No. 1, cannot collect $92,000 in damages which they have asked from Rice county because of an alleged delay resulting from the county's failure to furnish the proper subgrades.

Kelliher—A quarrel over a girl on a farm near here resulted in the murder of four persons. His victims are: John Sanders, farmer, 60 years old, father of the girl over whom the quarrel arose. Mrs. John Sanders, 60 years old, the girl's mother. Oscar Timmy, 33 years old, farmer. J. A. Wilson, 45 years old, marshal at Kelliher, who was shot down. The series of murders arose from a dispute between Portana and Timmy, at Timmy's farm, two miles from the home of Sanders.

Hibbing — Not only will the village of Hibbing levy on the basis of the 1923 population, as revealed by the recent census, but it will levy for $370,343.87 more than it did several months ago, according to a resolution passed at a meeting of the village council.

Shafer—Captured by a posse of citizens four hours after he held up and robbed the Shafer State bank of between $4,500 and $5,000 in currency, Richard Chafee is held in the county jail at Center City. Chafee was overtaken by the posse near Nevers Dam, 10 miles north of Center City. He sur-

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Relieved of Nervousness and Other Distressing Ailments by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Brooklyn, N. Y.—"I first took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound four years ago, and am taking it now for the Change of Life and other troubles and I receive great benefit from it. I am willing to let you use my letter as a testimonial because it is the truth. I found your booklet in my box and read it fully, and that is how I came to take the Vegetable Compound myself. It has given me quiet nerves so that I sleep all night, and a better appetite. I have recommended it already to all my friends and relatives."—Mrs. ENGLEMANN, 2032 Palmetto St., Ridgewood, Brooklyn, N.Y.

For the woman suffering from nervous troubles causing sleeplessness, headache, hysteria, "the blues," Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will be found a splendid medicine. For the woman of middle age who is passing through the trials of that period, it can be depended upon to relieve the troubles common at that time.

Remember, the Vegetable Compound has a record of nearly fifty years of service and thousands of women praise its merit, as does Mrs. Englemann. You should give it a fair trial now.

Only Escape From High Rent.

The only way to get away from paying such high rents is to own one's home. Costs of construction have advanced also and real estate is higher than ever before, but the land will be dearer still as time goes on, while there is no indication that building will ever be cheaper. The most important consideration to the average family is that a home is bought with money that otherwise would have gone for rent, plus a little more that would have been spent for nonessential things and for extravagances.

The habit of saving, or rather of avoiding wastefulness, is taught by buying a home. That good habit is retained after the home is paid for, and usually takes the form of savings bank deposits.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Mrs. James had just moved into the neighborhood and it was her first meeting with the local sewing circle. As the conversation turned on the absent men, one of the women said to Mrs. James: "What does your husband do?"

"Oh!" said Mrs. James, "he is manager of a pail factory."

"Pail factory?" said the other. "Why, I didn't know we had such a factory in town. Where is it located?"

"Well," replied Mrs. James, "husband calls it a bucket shop, but I think pail factory sounds much better."—Forbes Magazine.

New U. S. Fur Farm.

The new experimental fur farm of the bureau of biological survey, United States Department of Agriculture, is located in Greenfield township, Saratoga county, New York. This farm consists of about 20 acres of well-drained and wooded land and contains a farmhouse which is being renovated to be used as a residence for the superintendent of the farm and his family. Present plans call for a series of modern pens to accommodate foxes, martens, and skunks and other fur bearers. The animals and equipment were moved from Keeseville to the new farm recently.

Timely Hints for Christmas

RIBBONS USED IN GIFTS

A large proportion of the gifts that contribute most to Christmas joys are small furnishings and personal belongings that friends make for one another. The picture above illustrates a case for a score tablet and a sewing case, both made of ribbon. Black-and-gold is favored and a heavy black satin ribbon with sprays of gold wheat is used for the score tablet case while black moire makes the sewing case. In each, narrow gold braid is used for binding and plain black satin for lining. The tablet case carries a pencil and may be made to carry cards.

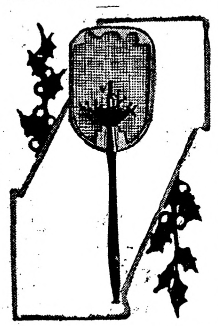
TOYS MADE OF CLOTH

Scraps of canton flannel, eiderdown, plush and velvet serve to make many little animals, cut by paper patterns, the parts machine stitched together and stuffed with sawdust or cotton. Glass-headed pins or buttons serve for eyes; covered wire, colored paper and yarn stitching help in many cases to supply details.

* * *

FLY-SWATTER FOR GIFT



The decorative fly-swatter is added to the list of useful things appropriate for Christmas gifts—and here it is, shown with bright red yarn buttonhole stitching about the edge and having a basket of red and black yarn, filled with little flowers and foliage, done in gay colors (in cross-stitch) just above the end of the handle.

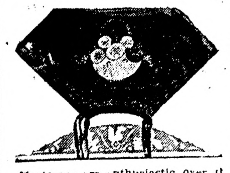
COVERS FOR CARD TABLES



Hostesses are enthusiastic over the new card table covers, made of black sateen and gayly decorated with applique flowers cut from colored bits of silk or cotton fabrics. Silk floss outlines the flowers, and black braid or ribbon provides the ties for the corners.

During the past few years thousands of black-tailed prairie dogs have been exterminated in the Colorado district through the systematic efforts of the local people under the direction of the biological survey of the United States Department of Agriculture and the Colorado Agricultural college. Swarms of bees have been discovered going in and out of these chimneys, and the buzzing in the enlarged cavities below indicates that honey is being stored there.

Health and good looks the reward of internal cleanliness

HEALTH and good looks go hand in hand. If you do not keep clean internally, your looks and health are undermined together. A clogged intestine breeds poisons that reach every part of the body. These poisons ruin the complexion and undermine health. Constipation brings on such ailments as headaches, bilious attacks, and insomnia—each of which saps your health and vitality. Soon much more serious conditions follow.

Good Looks Throughout Life If You Keep Clean Internally

In constipation, say intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness including the gravest diseases of life.

Laxatives Aggravate Constipation

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation.

Physicians Favor Lubrication

The lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Not a Medicine

Nujol is not a laxative and cannot gripe. Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world.

Cleanliness Demands More Than Bathing

Don't give disease a start. Adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. Nujol is not a medicine. Like pure water, it is harmless. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Seven Hundred Forty and No-100 Dollars, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain Mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Fritz Peterson and Alice Peterson, his wife; and Andrew Rudeen and Nelee Rudeen (also known as Nellie Redeen, and as Nellie Rudeen), his wife, Mortgagors, to Henry F. Drobisch, Mortgagee, bearing date the 14th. day of August 1915, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds, in and for the County of Marshall and State of Minnesota, on the 18th. day of September 1915, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 76 of Mortgages, on page 393.

Which said Mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Henry F. Drobisch Mortgagee, to M. H. Bishop by written assignment dated the 10th. day of October 1923, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds, on the second day of November 1923, at one o'clock P. M., in Book 115 of Mortgages on page 539, and no action or proceedings having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said Mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, Therefore, Notice is Hereby Given, That by virtue of the power of sale contained in said Mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said Mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said Mortgage, viz:

The East one-half (E 1-2) of the Southeast Quarter (SE 1-4) of Section numbered Twelve (12); and the North one-half (N 1-2) of the Northeast Quarter (NE 1-4) of Section numbered Thirteen (13); all being situated in Township numbered One Hundred Fifty-eight (158) North of Range Forty-four (44) west of the Fifth P. M., in Marshall County and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Marshall County at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Warren in said County and State, on the 22nd. day of December 1923, at One o'clock P. M., of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of Seven Hundred Forty and No-100 Dollars, and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and Fifty Dollars, Attorney's fees, as stipulated in and by said Mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

"The Law-Abiding Element of the Nation Is Entitled to Protection" Says President Coolidge

A Determined program for rigid enforcement of the Prohibition Laws, that divides the burden of responsibility between the Federal and state governments, was adopted at the request of President Calvin Coolidge, October 20th, by the governors of thirty-seven states, who met with him at the White House.

"Enforcement of law and obedience to law" says the President, "by the very nature of our institutions, are not matters of choice in in this republic, but the expression of a moral requirement of living in accordance with the truth. They are clothed with a spiritual significance in which is revealed the life or the death of the American ideal of self government. The great body of the people are thoroughly law-abiding. This great law-abiding element of the nation is entitled to support and protection. I propose to give that support and protection to the limit provided by the Constitution and the law of the land against every lawless element. The executives are required to enforce the law."

THE RED LOCK

A Tale of the Flatwoods

"BIG JACK!"

SYNOPSIS.—On the banks of the Wabash stand Texie Colin and Jack Warhope, young and very much in love. Texie is the only daughter of old Pap Simon, rich man and money-lender. Jack is the orphan bound boy of Pap Simon, who had foreclosed a mortgage on the Warhope estate. At first Texie and Jack talk sadly of Ken Colin, the girl's missing brother. Then Jack says that in ten days his servitude will be over, that he will ride out into the big world to seek his fortune. Both know what that will mean to them. Texie and Jack talk of the red lock of "Red Colin," inherited by Ken. And Jack says he's coming back as soon as he finds gold in California. Then arrives the new preacher, Rev. Caleb Hopkins.

"Mercy! but you're a hard man t' herd. Don't y'u know you're goin' home with us t' supper?"

"First I hear'd of it," the woodsman drawled, shifting his shoulder against the post.

The girl glanced at the preacher standing at the edge of the road, jerked her head ever so slightly toward him—a motion so elusive that it would have escaped anybody else but Jack Warhope—and lowered her voice to a whisper:

"We'll git 'im t' tell us about—Ken."

She turned away. The shoulders left the porch post, and the man followed.

The old banker was holding out his hand for the letters. He glanced them over, grunted, thrust them unopened into the pocket of his faded coat; muttered a word, drew them forth again, sorted out one, stared hard at the address and postmark; and then, with a half petulant grimace, knocked the bunch of letters together, crammed them back into his pocket again and, followed by the others, trudged away up the road.

The venerable widow, like the rest of the village, must have been on the lookout for the new preacher, for she was at the door to meet him as he came up the walk with the others. The old banker presented him.

"So glad to have you come, Brother Hopkins. It has been so dreadfully lonesome since—!"

The mild old eyes floated full of tears. The preacher seemed not to notice.

"I saw your husband's obituary in one of the church papers."

The widow dabbed at her eyes with a black-bordered handkerchief; the preacher, in his hesitating, jerky way, went on.

"I immediately wrote to Mr. Colin offering to come on a—ah—sort of vacation trip and serve the congregation until the vacancy could be filled. I was the more attracted to the thought of coming because my health had given way under the dual strain of preaching and teaching. And then, too, I had heard much about Buckeye and the Flatwoods from a—ah—classmate of mine while a student in the college in which I now have the honor to hold a professorship."

The banker frowned thoughtfully; Texie glanced at Jack.

Evening shadows were gathering thick in the corners of the room. The old man, becoming aware of them, glanced about him and turned to the widow.

"Well, Sister Mason, if you don't mind, I'll jist show Brother Hopkins the study, and then you better g' 'long over with us t' supper."

With the fine courtesy of one trained to the parsonage, she excused herself; the old banker went on:

"I b'lieve you said he was t' have the use of the study?"

The Widow Mason was only too well used to the crisp curt ways of Simon Colin. She turned to the young preacher.

"Brother Hopkins, I don't want you to feel that you are to have merely the study. My home is your home. Please feel free to use all of it or any part of it."

The young preacher bowed very low, and turned to the banker, who led the way up the stairs with as much authority as if he owned the place—which, in reality, he did.

The study, with its writing desk and leather easy chair, with its shelves and shelves of books, showed that its late owner had been a man of studious habits and apparently scholarly attainments.

An immense apple-tree grew by the east window, thrusting its stout branches so close as almost to brush the panes. Through its opening blossoms and half sprung leaves enough of the day remained to catch a view of the old banker's two or three acres of park-like orchard that lay between the parsonage and the red-roofed cottage.

The young preacher stood at the window and gazed out over the orchard, aromatic with promise, green with its thick mat of blue-grass white under the trees where the blossoms snowed down.

The banker slapped him on the shoulder. He must have been deeply absorbed in the spell of the place, with its quiet and repose, for he started and laughed nervously.

"I must have been dreaming."

The old man tossed a hand toward the window.

"Not s' bad, is it?"

"It is very beautiful."

"I 'lowed y'u'd like it." The old man rubbed his long bony hands together in a sort of grim satisfaction. "My daughter fools away hours and hours in that seat yonder under the big maple by the spring. I 'low ther' ain't a bird comes by she cayn't mock."

The preacher looked at him curiously, half sternly.

"I can well believe you," he said. "A girl like your daughter, with her quite obvious gifts and possibilities, and so much a part of this wonderful profusion of wild nature about her, would naturally seek some such diversion to keep her life from starving in this out-of-the-way place."

The money-lender pondered these words and seemed on the point of resenting them; but only jerked his thumb toward the window again.

"Took a right smart pile t' fix it up like that. Money wasted, I tell 'er. We'll go across that way t' the house, if y'u like."

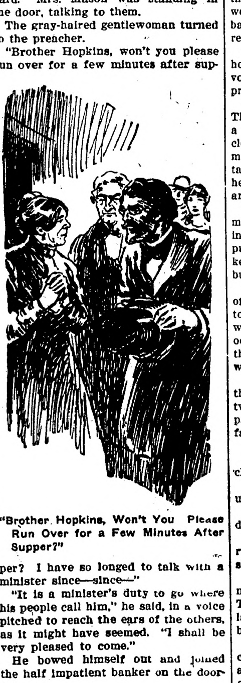
"It would please me greatly."

The momentary sternness had left the eyes behind the spectacles, the jerky precise voice had resumed its effusive drawl.

When they came down, Texie and Jack had already gone out into the yard. Mrs. Mason was standing in the door, talking to them.

The gray-haired gentlewoman turned to the preacher.

"Brother Hopkins, won't you please run over for a few minutes after supper? I have so longed to talk with a minister since—since—"



"Brother Hopkins, Won't You Please Run Over for a Few Minutes After Supper?"

"It is a minister's duty to go where his people call him," he said, in a voice pitched to reach the ears of the others, as it might have seemed. "I shall be very pleased to come."

He bowed himself out and joined the half impatient banker on the doorstep.

"Come on," the old man called to the others down the walk, "we're goin' across the orch'id. Brother Hopkins 'lows he'd like to."

There was no gate between the banker's park-like orchard and the parsonage yard. The fence had to be climbed. When they reached it the preacher offered his hand to the girl, who, to the amazement of the woodsman, took it and allowed him to lift her down—a concession that meant much in the Flatwoods.

At the bridge over Eagle run—merely a huge foot log broad-axed flat along the top—the girl allowed the preacher to assist her again, and the woodsman was treated to his second surprise. He had seen her, hundreds of times, skip across that log as sure-footed as a squirrel.

The path beyond led past the big maple with the rustic seat beneath the shelter of its far-flung branches. At its roots a spring gushed up, lapping the white pebbles of the tiny gutter it had worn for itself on its way to Eagle run.

"Whispering spring," said Texie simply, raising her eyes to the preacher. "Jack named it that. He can think of s' many names f'r things. He's a poet I guess."

The woodsman fidgeted. The preacher glanced toward him, but made no comment.

"My brother, Ken, use' t' tell me the fairies come down out of the cliffs at night t' dance around Whispering spring, and I b'lieved him—I b'lieved everything he told me them days—and I use' t' watch f'r the fairies."

She looked up at the preacher; then back into the spring.

"Do you b'lieve in fairies?" she asked the question as if she hoped he did believe in them.

He glanced down at the reflected face in the water. "Yes; there's a fairy peeping into the spring right now."

The old banker grunted; the woodsman turned to the face behind the huge spectacles. It was the first thing the preacher had said that caught his interest.

The girl was so entirely an unspoiled creature of the woods that she let the preacher see how much the neat compliment pleased her. With the color tingling over her face, she sprang over the gnarled roots of the great maple and ran a few steps up the path to the edge of the yard, paused and then hurried on. The preacher looked after her in his peering way, while the woodsman strode up the path and overtook her at the kitchen door.

"I'll run over and do the chores, and then come back," he said.

He walked on a little way and then came slowly back. The girl, just going into the kitchen, seemed to know that he had turned—seemed to know that he would turn back. With her hand on the door casement she waited for him to speak.

The man glanced out over the orchard; up the side of the cliffs; along the timber line that bearded them; came back to the eyes. The inquisitiveness had lessened; the roguishness deepened.

"You let 'im lift y'u!" he muttered.

With an odd, hard little laugh she darted in at the kitchen door.

CHAPTER III

Three Candles.

The last flare of sunset had followed the Wabash out under the rim of the west by the time Jack Warhope came back along the orchard path to the red-roofed cottage.

From the porch at the front of the house came the drone of the banker's voice, broken occasionally by the preacher's precise, jerky sentences.

Warhope listened for a moment. The money-lender was talking about a quarter-section that he had foreclosed on the day before. The woodsman had heard many an hour of that talk. With a shrug of his shoulders, he pushed the gate open and walked around to the kitchen door.

With a step that the woods had made light as a falling leaf he slipped in and stood motionless. The portly, pudgy form of Mrs. Curry, the housekeeper, was bent over the cook stove, busy with the supper.

The flit of a shadow and the clink of dishes in the adjoining dining room told the grinning intruder that Texie was "settin'" the table. For such an occasion there would be a white cloth, the best silver would be out, and there would be three candles instead of one.

The clink of the dishes ceased and the girl appeared in the doorway between the two rooms. Seeing Jack, she paused, tried to look severe, but failed.

"Now look at that!"

Mrs. Curry straightened, and exclaimed:

"Big Jack! Mercy, how you can slip up on a body."

"Put 'im t' work, Mis' Curry. We don't 'low no loafers, do we?"

The housekeeper in reply was interrupted by a misbehaving skillet and she turned back to the stove.

Supper was on the table. The woodsman took his place with the others. The banker dropped his hands in his lap, nodding toward the preacher, and bowed his head.

The traditions of the Flatwoods called for a long and sonorous grace—a sort of sermonette—when the preacher was a guest, but the new minister seemed never to have heard of any such tradition. The grace he said was so short, so direct and concise, yet so beautiful in thought and diction that the banker looked at him in pleased surprise.

Supper over, there fell a moment of silence—the delicious breath of repose that almost always follows the evening meal in quiet country homes. The old money-lender sat marking on the tablecloth with his fork, as if mapping out the boundary lines of other quarter-sections that he hoped to have the chance to foreclose in a short time.

The girl seized the favorable moment, and leaning forward, said: "Now, Mr. Hopkins, tell us about—my brother—Ken. I've be'n wishin' all evening t' ask y'u."

Her father stopped marking on the tablecloth and sat very still; the housekeeper crossed her knife and fork on her plate, as the Christians of Spain used to do in the days of Moorish domination; the woodsman let his thoughts revel in the faultless profile of the girl's face. The preacher caught the wistful look in her eyes—the subdued eagerness of one who could not resist the desire to ask, yet dreaded the answer. He fumbled his napkin.

"P. S.—Mr. Colin is dead. He died before he could quite finish signing his name."

HIS OPINION OF ACTRESSES

Stage Aspirant Relates Remark Made by Photographer When She Needed Encouragement.

The trials and tribulations of the embryo actress are legion. One learns from many sources of all the obstacles placed in her way. She is told that success means hard work and so forth, and those girls with courage enough to go on, their eyes fixed on a shining goal, are the first to agree that hard work is the real means to an end.

"We have our disappointments and discouragements," said one, "letters from managers that when you follow them up often turn out to be only form letters, kindly written, it's true, but still form letters. And one can't blame the manager. He gets so many letters from aspiring applicants. But"—with a courageous and determined toss of a lovely brown head—"I'll have a part this fall!"

"I've had a good many blows and disappointments, discouragement and the like, but the funniest of all was the photographer's I visited the other day to have some professional pictures taken. He looked me over. 'Going on the stage?' said he. 'Well, I suppose by next spring you'll be posing for the cloak and suit trade.'"—New York Sun and Globe.

MUST HAVE GOOD MEMORY

Checker of Hats in Hotel Can Give No Adequate Explanation of His Power.

The checkers of hats in large hotels have remarkable memories. Doubtless many young men were employed and discharged before one was found who could learn to take 300 hats from men entering the dining room and distribute them as the diners left, without checks and without an error. In a city luncheon club with nearly 400 members, for example, says Edgar James Swift, the usual method of paging a man who is wanted has been changed to asking the colored man in the hat room whether the man in question has arrived. And a glance over the hat racks gives accurate information.

Conversation with those who display this wonderful and peculiar memory has always brought essentially the same reply. They have no system. They talk vaguely about something which, in psychological language, is association between the appearance of the hat and the face of the owner.—Scribner's Magazine.

MOTHER OF LARGE FAMILY

Recommends Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to Other Mothers

Windom, Minn.—"I was so run-down that I was just good for nothing. I was to become the mother of my ninth child, and I thought I did not have the strength to go through with it. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has surely done all I could ask it to do and I am telling all my friends about it. I have a nice big baby girl and am feeling fine. You may use this letter to help other sick mothers."—Mrs. C. A. MOEDE, Box 634, Windom, Minn.

My First Child

Glen Allen, Alabama.—"I have been greatly benefited by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for bearing-down feelings and pains. I was troubled in this way for nearly four years following the birth of my first child, and at times could hardly stand on my feet. A neighbor recommended the Vegetable Compound to me after I had taken doctor's medicines without much benefit. It has relieved my pains and gives me strength. I recommend it and give you permission to use my testimonial letter."—Mrs. IDA RYE, Glen Allen, Alabama.

Condensed Stories of Happenings of the Week in Minnesota

Northfield—C. E. Wales was elected president of the Waterford Farmers club at its annual meeting.

Faribault—Members of the First Methodist church here are making elaborate preparations for the dedication of a new $10,000 pipe organ.

Pipestone — The members of the Zion Evangelical church of this city are making plans for the celebration of the 25th anniversary of their organization.

Hibbing — Investors holding more than $40,000 worth of Hibbing warrants in various parts of the country, have overlooked the various calls issued by the village treasurer. Interest on them has been stopped.

Albert Lea—M. L. Head was elected president of the Freeborn County Fair association at its annual meeting here to succeed F. S. Ruble, veteran head of the fair, who expressed a desire to retire.

Hibbing — Phil Stone, former county attorney, has resigned from the state attorney general's office because of ill health. Mr. Stone is now in Morris, Minn. He was advised by his physicians to give up the practice of law for at least a year.

Northfield — Torger G. Thomson, prominent Dane county, Wisconsin, farmer, has left $40,000 to St. Olaf college through his will. The money is to be used to assist needy Scandinavian students in attending the college.

Rochester — Miss Mavorette J. Rubert, Rochester's "queen of beauty," who is an entry in the national beauty contest to be held at Madison Square Garden, New York, for the east. She will go to Washington to meet President Coolidge and then to New York.

Fairmont — Frederick W. Betz, aged 67, prominent in state politics, died suddenly at his home here. Betz formerly was postmaster here, was a colonel on former Governor Van Sant's staff and was a delegate to a national republican convention.

Jasper—W. R. Kingston, the last Jasper surviving veteran of the Civil war, is dead as the result of a stroke of paralysis. Kingston was a member of Company F, First Regiment, Minnesota Volunteers, enlisting on March 25, 1865.

Thief River Falls — Heavy shipments of poultry through Thief River Falls is reported by the express company. Since the 15th of this month an average of 100,000 pounds per day was shipped or transferred through the office.

Minneapolis — Sale of the Robert Hall farm at Balaton, Lyon county, on the basis of $165 an acre, was the outstanding transfer of Minnesota farm lands as reported to the Minnesota Realty association. The farm comprises 80 acres, and was purchased by J. H. Kibbe of Curlew, Iowa.

Austin — The first highway project in Mower county constructed by funds secured under the Babcock law is completed. It 's on highway No. 9, between Austin and Grand Meadow, on which 20,000 yards of gravel were used. The work was completed at a cost of about $53,000.

Albert Lea — B. J. Johnson, a farmer, brought to town an ear of corn containing 998 perfect kernels and eight imperfect kernels, a total of 1,006 kernels. Mr. Johnson challenges any farmer in the county to produce an ear of corn as well developed and with anywhere near that many kernels.

Owatonna — All members of a charter commission composed of 15 local business men named by District Judge F. W. Senn have finally qualified to revise the city charter. The principal change will provide for the appointment of a public utilities commission to operate the proposed light, powler and heating plant.

Marshall — At a meeting of the directors of the newly organized Marshall Farmers Co-operative Creamery company, a decision was made to purchase the property of the Marshall Creamery company for a consideration of $20,000. The new company has 200 stockholders and 1,600 cows have been signed for.

Owatonna — The rural carriers of the Owatonna postoffice will begin to take the fall pig survey of Steele county. Pig surveys are made by the rural carriers on thousands of farms in each state on June 1 to Dec. 1 of each year, which shows facts concerning hog production, for the use of the federal department of agriculture.

Chisholm — The Lake Superior Tax association has entered another protest to the supreme court levy set by the school board, claiming that the levy set this year exceeded the legal amount by $75,000. The population in the school district was 9,709 in 1920, which at $60 per capita, totals $582,540, instead of the $658,790, which was levied this year.

Minneapolis—The Northern Pacific railway is preparing to spend $56,000,000 in improvements in the next three years, Charles Donelly president of the road, told the interstate commerce commission's railroad rate investigating committee.

Grand Rapids—This city which dedicated a new $250,000 high school now has two of the finest high schools of their class in this section of Minnesota. The district served by these schools is one of the most unusual in the United States, according to educators, as parts of the district are 70 miles from the high schools.

Madison—In order to provide more adequate protection from robbery the city council made arangements to have the city streets patrolled between dark and daylight.

Fairfax—The Fairfax Co-operative company has closed a deal for the purchase of the Fairfax department store and the two stocks will be combined in the department store.

Moorhead—Mrs. Johanna Freeman, known as "Grandma" for the first time in her life spent her birthday in bed this week, when she celebrated her 102d anniversary.

INDUSTRY WAS FORMER SIDELINE

Poultry Raising in North Dakota Has Developed Wealth Bringing Business.

Fargo, N. D.—"A $5,000,000 industry in North Dakota today," is the way O. A. Barton, poultry specialist at the North Dakota Agricultural college, characterizes the poultry industry of this state.

"The attention given to poultry in its various aspects is steadily increasing and mighty strides have been made in developing this sideline of farm activities in North Dakota during the past few years," continued the poultryman. "The federal census of 1900 and 1910, supplemented by statistics compiled in 1921 and 1922, show how this industry is rapidly developing into one that brings millions of dollars into the pockets of farmers of this state."

Why is this development? What are the factors responsible for the rapid increase of interest in poultry keeping? Is there any hope for continued growth of this as yet infant industry of the West? Many North Dakota residents are asking these questions which Mr. Barton answers readily and enthusiastically.

There are four outstanding reasons for the recent phenomenal growth, he thinks. First, and by no means least, is the naturally favorable conditions of the state. With plenty of room for range at little expense, an abundance of green feed available and with more hours of sunshine than most states can furnish, and with an arid atmosphere which materially hampers the cold, the conditions are extremely favorable for rapid growth, a healthy and vigorous stock, good meat and egg returns and economic production.

Millions of acres of grain land furnish food that costs the farmer exactly nothing. Grain that lies on the ground and that the reaper is unable to get becomes admirable chicken food. Chickens, turkeys, geese and ducks could secure close to the farm buildings food that would otherwise be wasted. In the winter and early spring the fowls need care and feed. This feed at these seasons generally has a value on the market and could be sold. But for the greater part of the year the poultry birds scratch their own living out of the fields and barnyards.

The atmosphere is not so damp as to make for dumpish, unhealthy birds and the slight aridness tempers the cold so that the birds are not unduly suffering from frozen feet and combs. And, more important still, the climate makes for a healthy, vigorous stock which is capable of making good meat and egg returns.

DIKE BREAK CAUSES DISASTER

Hundreds Are Missing as Flood Sweeps Whole Villages in Italy.

Paris.—A news agency dispatch from Bergamo says that more than 600 persons are missing in the Dezzo dike disaster. Forty bodies have been recovered in the village of Angolo, forty in Mazzano, and forty at Darfo. The Milan garrison has been rushed to the scene, together with ambulances, doctors, and food supplies.

Milan.—The huge artificial lake at Dezzo, near Bergamo, has overflowed and broken through the dike, the waters sweeping down through the valleys, overwhelming villages, and drowning inhabitants by the scores. The number of victims is computed at 300 or more by some of the authorities.

The heavy rains which have been falling for the past few weeks caused the streams to overflow and filled the lake to the bursting point. Millions of cubic yards of water were let loose, and the terrific force of the flood swept everything before it The village of Dezzo, originally containing 600 inhabitants, and the adjacent villages of Menaggio and Teveno were directly in line of the rushing waters and were inundated Many of the people, however, were apprised of the break in the dike and fled, together with hundreds of other refugees, to the hills.

Red Cross relief has been organized and the government is using all efforts to aid the sufferers.

The artificial lake was situated in the fertile valley of Camonica, about 500 feet above sea level The bursting of the dike was followed by tragic scenes. The whole valley of Dezzo is devastated, and eight villages at least have been blotted out Dezzo itself was completely destroyed by the waters, which covered every house. Only the church steeples can be seen. Five generating plants were so badly damaged that the city of Bergamo is without lighting power

Army engineers will give every possible aid in the reconstruction work.

The dike was 50 feet in height.

New Ship Replaces "North Dakota."

Washington—The navy has gained one of the proudest ships afloat with the commissioning at the Norfolk navy yard of the battleship West Virginia. Embodying all of the knowledge of naval architecture and protective devices gained during and since the battle of Jutland the big fighting craft, a sister ship of the Maryland and the Colorado, takes the place of the North Dakota, which is to be scrapped under the provisions of the Washington conference on naval treaties.

'RAIN TREE' SUPPLIES WATER

Beautiful and Common Tree in Tropical America Holds Liquid in Leaves.

The name "rain tree" has been given to a beautiful and very common tree of tropical America. The name is probably due to the fact that the tree has the habit of closing its leaflets before and during rains, and not to any tendency to shed water from the leaves.

The original rain tree story, as found in the narratives of early voyagers back as far as the Fifteenth century, located the tree in the island of Ferro, one of the Canaries. This island has no springs and a scanty rainfall, but, according to the story, derived an ample supply of fresh water from a single tree.

The natives say that the famous rain tree that once supplied the whole island was blown down in a storm.—Detroit News.

Nothing Serious.

Applicants for positions under the municipal government of a certain Middle Western town are required to undergo a physical examination. During the examination of one candidate the physician asked: "What did your grandfather die of?" The applicant looked nonplused for a moment and finally admitted that he did not remember, but hastened to add, "But I know that it was nothing serious."

Knew Where It Was.

Pat had got a job as steward on board a liner and on his first trip he was anxious to have everything as nice as possible so as to please the captain. Accordingly, the first thing he did was to have a good cleanout of the captain's quarters, and among other things he polished up the tea service, of which the captain was very proud.

Unfortunately, he let the teapot slip overboard and it sunk like a stone to the bottom of the sea.

He did not know what to do, but at last an idea struck him and, approaching the captain, he said:

"Captain, can anything be lost if you know where it is?"

"No; certainly not," replied the captain, rather sharply.

"Well, sir," retorted the Irishman, "your silver teapot is at the bottom of the Atlantic."

Christmas Seals

"The fight against tuberculosis is showing definite and concrete results. In the past twenty years the death rate in the United States, as a whole, from this disease has been cut in half.

In Minnesota, as compared with the tuberculosis death rate of 1911 (when it reached its peak), the figures show that we saved 1,145 lives in 1922.

Seals sell for a penny a piece. Surely nearly every one can buy some and take part in this great work.

Just think what 1,145 more deaths from one disease in one year would have meant, and then consider that the majority would have been between the ages of twenty and forty.

You will be assisting in this great work if you buy some CHRISTMAS Seals"

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

Farmers Attention

The Alfalfa Association of Pennington County is ordering a carload of certified Grimm alfalfa seed for distribution to the farmers of that county. It is possible that the farmers of Holt and community can include an order thru this shipment and secure seed at the lowest possible price. Many farmers have already placed orders with The Marshall County State Bank of Holt for their seed in this shipment and we ask that those who are wishing to secure seed for next sping, will kindly see the officers of the bank at once and give them the amount of seed or the number of acres that you intend to put into alfalfa next spring. This Bank strongly endorses the movement of seeding more alfalfa for the milk cow and it is hoped that every farmer will put in a crop of alfalfa next year. There is no better feed for your milk cow on the market today, so get it by raising it on your own farm.

THE RED LOCK

SYNOPSIS.—On the banks of the Wabash stand Texie Colin and Jack Warhope, young and very much in love. Texie is the only daughter of old Pap Simon, rich man and money-lender. Jack is the orphan bound boy of Pap Simon, who had foreclosed a mortgage on the Warhope estate. At first Texie and Jack talk sadly of Ken Colin, the girl's missing brother. Then Jack says that in ten days his servitude will be over, that he will ride out into the big world to seek his fortune. Both know what that will mean to them. Texie and Jack talk of the red lock of "Red Colin," inherited by Ken. And Jack says he's coming back as soon as he finds gold in California. Then arrives the new preacher, Rev. Caleb Hopkins. Pap Simon introduces the villagers to the new preacher, who was a college mate of Ken.

"Really, Miss—Colin, there is very little to tell. Your brother was the—ah—most puzzling psychological problem that I ever tried to solve. He could have been one of the most brilliant scholars the institution ever turned out. He literally drank up everything the college had to give, and that without apparent effort—as the desert drinks the dew. His penmanship; his drawing; his command of English—very remarkable. I was his roommate and classmate, and yet I never saw him apply himself seriously to study. I don't think he did. And that was probably his limitation—learning came too easy to him. It can, you know."

He stopped, as if he had no more to say; stared at his napkin and folded it with careful precision.

"The president's letter said that—that—?"

The girl seemed unable to finish the question, but the preacher guessed what she wanted to know. He again fumbled his napkin, unfolded it, and looked around the table. It was an embarrassing moment.

"With all due respect to you, his family"—he glanced at Mrs. Curry and the woodsman—"and friends, though I would rather not speak of it at all, and should not do so, only that it is my duty as your minister to tell you the truth—Kenwood Colin was a very severe trial to the college authorities. His talent for learning was equaled only by his talent for mischief. Yet, wild as he was known to be, nobody thought that he would ever have forged his father's name. He was deeply in debt before his very clever forgeries were even suspected, much less detected.

"Then came his sensational killing of a gambler over a card game, and his subsequent escape somewhere into the great underworld of the city. Since that, nothing more seems to have been heard of him."

There was a moment's silence. The girl leaned forward; her lips apart; her eyes wide.

"Pore Ken—!" she said softly. "He couldn't help bein' what 'e was. It was the—red lock."

The preacher raised his spectacled eyes up from his plate and stared at the girl curiously.

"Red lock—?"

"Didn't you know 'e had it?"

The preacher looked his bewilderment.

"Then please, please, don't mention that you know it! Please, don't ever! I 'lowed you knowed, bein' his roommate, or I wouldn't 'a' told. He was that 'shamed 'e had it, and alw'ys kep' it combed under so's it didn't show."

The banker had been staring at the tablecloth. He lifted his face.

"The 'curse of Colin,'" he commented thoughtfully. "He was a sea pirate in the days of Queen Elizabeth. 'Red Colin,' they called 'im. Looks like his blood would 'a' run out b' this time, but it hain't. Every three 'r four generations it shows up, gener'ly one child in a family with a lock o' hair as red as fire. Nobody would think a lock o' hair and a drop o' blood could set a child back hundreds o' generations t' what ol' 'Red Colin' must 'a' be'n, but it does.

"The minute I saw that red lock on Ken, I knowed 'e was doomed. I've licked 'im and reasoned with 'im and prayed over 'im—but I knowed all the time it wouldn't do no good. That's the main reason I sent 'im off t' the kind of a college I did—where thar ain't nobody much but preachers a-runnin' it. He didn't like t' go t' that kind, but I hoped bein' throwed amongst men like that might head off what I knowed was in 'im."

The preacher leaned back in his chair; dropped his hands in his lap.

"Permit me to say," he observed in his jerky fashion, "that was as grave a mistake as you could possibly have made."

"Mebbe so," the old man answered. "But the devil 'imself couldn't 'a' coped with that boy."

The old man beat the tines of his fork on the table; gazed absently at a candle, reached over and snuffed it."

"Ain't it strange," he went on, "how the past fangs the present—the past with its sins and blunders and imperfections? Now there's Texie, cradled in the same arms and nursed at the same breast, and she's as different f'om Ken as sunshine is different f'om the wo'st storm that ever wrecked the woods."

The preacher put his napkin by. "Heredity plays many a queer trick," he said in a tone of finality.

In the silence that followed the old banker took the bunch of still unopened letters from his pocket, laid it on the table and began to sort them. The preacher looked around the room and, noticing the night at the windows, rose.

"If you will please excuse me, you remember I promised to run over to the parsonage for a few minutes, and Mrs. Mason probably retires early."

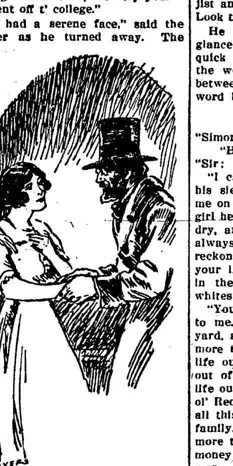
The others rose and gathered about him in polite protest, but the preacher insisted. Mrs. Curry picked up a candle and led the way into the sitting-room, while Texie brought his tall hat from a rack in the corner. He stood gazing about, peering through the open door to the right into the room where the banker kept his safe and papers; into the bedroom at the left where the old man slept; past the fireplace and through the open door to the parlor, as if impressed—possibly amused—by the novelty of a Flatwoods home.

His eyes, searching the walls, came at last to the portrait of a woman, framed in gilt and hung above the fireplace.

The girl followed his gaze.

"My mother," she said softly. "Seven years ago she left us; the very year—Ken went off t' college."

"She had a serene face," said the preacher as he turned away. The banker crossed the floor, picked up a key from the mantel and unlocked the door leading from the porch to the parlor.



At the Spring the Preacher Suddenly Grasped the Girl's Hand in His Own.

"I 'lowed I'd better show y'u where y'ur room is b'fore y'u go, so's y'u'll know how t' git in if we're in bed when y'u come back. We Flatwoods folks turn in purty early."

He took the candle that Mrs. Curry was carrying and led the preacher in across the parlor to the spare bedroom opening from it on the east, where the two satchels and umbrella had already been carried.

"I 'low this might be called a preacher's room, purt' nigh. Ain't nothin' but preachers slep' in it hardly sence it was built."

The old man chuckled as he led the way back to the porch, closed the parlor door, locked it and handed the key to the preacher. The latter stopped a moment on the step and fumbled his tall hat.

"Miss Colin, won't you please accompany me as far as your—an—Whispering spring and show me how to get a drink?"

The darkness hid the flush of color that played up into the girl's face. She glanced at the woodsman; turned to the preacher and followed him down the steps.

The big woodsman stood looking after them, stirred by an unfamiliar emotion to see Texie walk away into the dark with another man.

At the spring the preacher suddenly grasped the girl's hand in both his own and held it with the same fervid eagerness he had shown that evening in front of the post office. She suffered her hand to remain slightly longer than it had before, then she gently withdrew it.

"Miss—Texie—you will grant me the privilege of calling you by your first name, will you not?"

She did not answer.

"Your—brother, my—roommate, was very enthusiastic about his pretty sister. But even he did not do you justice. You are—"

He stopped abruptly, stared past her into the night, as if groping for words to clothe a thought unusual with him. The look of a tired student came slowly back to his face, and his shoulders dropped as if weary with bearing the burdens of others. Mumbling a further word or two, he turned from her, crossed the foot-log with mincing step, and passed on through the orchard toward the parsonage.

The girl walked back up the path and sat down on the porch step.

Words were never too plenty with the woodsman, even in his most fluent moments. He leaned against a post and looked down at her. She seemed busy with her thoughts. The silence was so deep that the clink of the dishes, as Mrs. Curry put them away, and the crinkle of the old banker's letters, as he sat reading them at the head of the dining-room table, carried to them out on the porch.

The man roused himself from the spell of the silence; stepped off the porch and sat down by the girl's side.

"What d' y'u think of him?" she asked.

It was characteristic of the woodsman that he should answer by another question.

"What d' you?"

The girl laughed—a contented little laugh like the lilt of the happy water at the bridge.

"Oh, I think he's—"

There came a groan from the dining-room, and the sound of a heavy fall. They sprang up and dashed into the house, just as Mrs. Curry ran in from the kitchen. The money-lender lay sprawled on the floor, in one hand an open letter, in the other an empty envelope.

The girl darted across the room and bent above the shrunken figure.

"Jack—! Jack—!"

"Texie, no, don't be flustered. It's just another one o' them faintin' spells. He'll be all right in a minute."

He raised the old man in his great arms and laid him on a sofa at the side of the room.

Mrs. Curry had hurried back to the kitchen for cold water and cloths, and Texie was urging Jack to run for the doctor, when the old banker opened his eyes.

"Doctor!"—he panted hard for breath. "Who wants a doctor? It's jist another one o' them fainty spells. Look there—!"

He held up the letter. The girl glanced at it carelessly; then, with a quick exclamation, turned it toward the woodsman. And thus holding it between them they read it slowly, word by word.

"Somewhere in New York,

"Simon Colin,
"Buckeye, Ind.

"Sir:

"I caught a fellow with a card up his sleeve and called him. He beat me on the draw, and here I am. This girl here says I can't last till the ink's dry, and I'm not doubtin' her. She's always played square with me. I reckon you wouldn't allow her inside of your little old synagogue down there in the Flatwoods, but she'd be the whitest one there—except Sis.

"You've been one h—l of a father to me. I've heard you pray by the yard, and I've heard cussin' that was more religious. You starved mother's life out, and you're starvin' the life out of Sis, but you didn't starve my life out, d—n you. I've got a drop of ol' Red Colin in me—him that brought all this cussed red lock mess into the family. I've had my fling—and that's more than you can say, with all your money that you've wrung out of better men.

"I reckon I've got but a few minutes to live. I'd give half of them to see Sis. But if you'd come in right now, I'd try to get up and kick you out. I'm dyin' as ol' Red Colin died—with my boots on. I'm expecting to meet him and you both—in h—l—

"KEN CO—"

"P. S.—Mr. Colin is dead. He died before he could quite finish signing his name. You can see the blot where the pen fell. I am respecting his wishes and sending this letter without any street address, or other marks, whereby you might trace him. His confidence I shall never betray. I will only say that he shall have decent burial.

"THE GIRL."

"But ain't he some looker—Barrin' that killin' rig he's hobbled up in?"

Strange Mongolian Whisky.

A kind of whisky known as airik is distilled from mare's milk by the natives of Mongolia. This milk, which is thicker than cow's milk, has a sort of sour taste even when fresh. After being allowed to stand for several days it attains the consistency of buttermilk. Then it is put into a huge pot and covered with what looks like a barrel with both ends knocked out. The vessel is suspended in the middle of the barrel, a kettle of cold water is set on the top, and after a few minutes of boiling in this primitive still the milk is changed into pure spirit.

Sandstone—Mrs. Robert Meisner of Traer, Iowa, is a guest at the home of her parents here, pending the outcome of a search now being conducted in Iowa for her husband. Mr. Meisner left Traer last spring to go to Webster City to engage in business, and later all trace of him was lost. Since then his father has died, leaving him a $52,000 estate.

Moose Lake—Moose Lake will have its annual poultry show in January.

Bovey—Stripping operations of an ore body consisting of approximately 8,000,000 tons, to be known as the Lewis mine has begun, following the formal announcement made by the Oliver Iron Mining company. The mine will include four 40-acre tracts and will extend to what is now known as the Walker pit through the Danube mine, northwest of Bovey.

Crookston—L. R. Boyd, business manager for the 1924 winter shows Feb. 3 to 8, is at work preparing the premium lists. He will have the active co-operation of the Northwest School of Agriculture, Red River Valley Development association, Red River Valley Soils and Crops association, Red River Valley Livestock association, Northern Poultry association and the Crookston Association of Public Affairs.

Mankato—The Civic and Commerce association has taken up the question of leasing the Mankato Randolph branch of the Great Western railway with the Mankato Electric Traction company.

Jordan—Scott county is to secure a tuberculosis test for cattle. At county commissioners' meeting a petition was presented to the meeting asking for a county wide area test for tuberculosis of all cattle in Scott county. The petition contained the names of 1,075 cattle owners, which is a large majority of the cattle owners of Scott county.

Willmar—Kandiyohi county poultry raisers will hold their third annual poultry show here, Jan. 15 to 18.

Madison—In order to provide more adequate protection from robbery the city council made arangements to have the city streets patrolled between dark and daylight.

Fairfax—The Fairfax Co-operative company has closed a deal for the purchase of the Fairfax depatrment store and the two stocks will be combined in the department store.

Moorhead—Mrs. Johanna Freeman, known as "Grandma" for the first time in her life spent her birthday in bed this week, when she celebrated her 102d anniversary.

St. Peter—As the result of a resolution adopted by 100 mothers, members of the Washington Mothers club, the high school girls will themselves decide the question of a uniform dress.

New Ulm—J. A. Kennedy of the New Ulm Gas company, was elected president of the Commercial club here, H. W. Bockus vicepresident, and Myers Jorgenson secretary.

Winona—County Attorney Morris J. Owen was elected chairman of the republican county committee to succeed Earl Simpson, who died last summer. Mr. Simpson also was county attorney.

Red Wing—Frank Ferlin is the new president of the local chamber of commerce. Other officers chosen are C. H. Tiedeman and K. R. Seller, vicepersidents, and R. W. Putnam, treasurer.

Duluth—Dan Neville, for years in charge of the ice making at the Duluth Curling club, started ice making in preparation for the curling season which will be formally opened December 15.

Park Rapids—At the annual meeting of the Shell Prairies Agricultural association here, reports of officers showed the association to be in good financial condition. More than $1,500 was paid out in premiums at this year's fair, it was reported.

Wabasha—A. Z. Putnam, 95, former probate judge of Wabasha county and the oldest resident of the village of Minneiska, died at his home there after a week's illness. He had lived in Minnesota more than 50 years.

St. Paul—The Northern States Power company filed amendments to its articles of incorporations increasing the capital stock from $50,000,000 to $75,000,000. The increase gives the corporation the largest capitalization of any company in Minnesota.

Canby—The Canby Community club is ararnging to stage a corn show here on Dec 14 and 15. A premium list is now being prepared which will provide for the payment of liberal cash prizes.

Albert Lea—A majority of the 2,695 breeders of Freeborn county petitioned the county commissioners that the county area plan of cow testing be adopted in Freeborn county. This means that 40 veterinarians will come to Albert Lea and in two weeks time will test al herds of the county.

Hallock—The business of the Citizens State bank of Hallock has been consolidated with the Kittson County State bank of this city, and will be carried on under the name of the latter. The two banks were the oldest banks in Kittson county.

Owatonna—The annual banquet of the Steele county agricultural society was given here. All officers were reelected, as follows:—John Lynard, president; L. S. Taylor, vicepresident; James Adair, treasurer, and M. J. Porcher, secretary. All reside here.

New Ulm—Major G. A. Dahl, Captain F. M. Otto and Captain Edward S. Gary of Mankato, came to New Ulm and swore in 32 musicians as members of the band of the Fifth regiment. Every recruit is a war veteran. The New Ulm musiicans will have their headquarters in Mankato.

Red Lake—While driving his car through Itasca State park en route to Bemidji, E. J. Bryant of Minneapolis struck a deer that had suddenly appeared from the wooded side of the road. The force of the collision knocked off a rear fender, dented the car in seevral places and nearly caused the car to go into the ditch

Owatonna—The Steele county commissioners have designated a road running along the Steele-Mower county line and into the village of Blooming Prairie as a state aid road and plan to improve the stretch at once Similar designation of a road connecting portions of Somerset and Aurora townships and the village of Bixby with trunk highway No. 40 are also being considered.

Winona—A motion of defense for an order to set aside the verdict and sentence in the case of Mrs. Anna Schultz, convicted of second degree manslaughter in connection with the death of Herman Koch in an automobile collision last summer was denied by Judge C. E. Callaghan in district court here. Mrs. Schultz was sentenced to serve not more than five years in the state reformatory for women.

Winona, Minn.—Mrs. Raymond Stevens, who was selected last spring by Rodolph Valentino, motion picture actor, as the prettiest girl in St. Paul, was barred from participation in a national beauty contest conducted in New York city because of her marriage which occured in September.

Faribault—Faribault's newest and finest pipe organ, in the First Methodist Episcopal church, was played for the first time when Charles Carlton Kirk, organist of the Park Avenue M. E. church of Minneapolis, gave a recital.

Mankato—Major Ezra Clemens of Owatonna, national chaplain of the American Legion, addressed the older boys' conference of Minnesota, assembled here. A parade of all delegates to the conference was held, led by the band of the Minneapolis. Herbert Leonard of Rochester, Minn., was elected president of the conference

Confidential to the Ladies

Don't overdo that "for him" gift

Stores are full of "gift-things for him" of which "he" lives in mortal dread.

For to receive a gift involves an unwritten obligation to wear it, or carry it, or to otherwise use, display, or consume it, as the lawyers would say.

It is usually surprising, and often disappointing, to a woman to find out how few things the average matter-of-fact man really wants. But for some of those things he has a good deal of affection, and moreover, he can use a lot of them.

In casting about for an example, somehow pipes and pipe tobacco come first to our mind. If we were a woman and we wanted to get right next to a man's heart, we would smuggle a good pipe and some good pipe tobacco to him around December 25th.

Or, if he already has a pipe that he thinks was divinely intended for him, the tobacco alone makes a full-size gift. Other advantages of good pipe tobacco as a Christmas present include the following:

You don't have to engage in any detective work to find out his size, favorite color, or other specifications. And it doesn't make any difference whether he "already has plenty" or not; nor need you be concerned lest your gift be duplicated.

A man can smoke up a lot of tobacco between this Christmas and next; while the humidor jar, in which we put up a pound of Edgeworth, keeps the tobacco in prime condition indefinitely. Edgeworth is a tobacco that practically every pipe-smoker likes; it's a safe choice.

The 16-ounce jar sells for $1.65 at any tobacco store.

If your regular dealer hasn't enough glass jars to supply the Christmas trade, let us play Santa Claus for you. Send us $1.65 for a jar, "his" name and address, and your personal greeting card. We'll do the rest.

We'll pack the glass jar in an appropriate Christmas box, enclose your card and send it in plenty of time to reach him before Christmas.

Address Larus & Brother Company, 73 South 21st Street, Richmond, Va.

To Retail Tobacco Merchants: If your jobber cannot supply you with Edgeworth, Larus & Brother Company will gladly send you prepaid by parcel post a one- or two-dozen carton of any size of Edgeworth Plug Slice or Ready-Rubbed for the same price you would pay the jobber.

Is it Funny?

It is funny about some "realistic" novelists that they never write about any likable people, yet there are lots of them.

Try to like people; they never fail to appreciate it.

Every man is dissatisfied with his own fortune.

Your doctor advises internal cleanliness

HE will tell you that the first results of constipation—headache, sleepless nights, biliousness, backache, etc.—warn that the body is flooded with intestinal poisons. In time, these poisons may cause the breakdown of health and lead to serious disease. In constipation, say intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness including the gravest diseases of life.

Hence, doctors urge internal cleanliness—regular and thorough removal of food waste from the body.

Laxatives Aggravate Constipation

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

"Keep Clean Inside" Say Physicians.

Why Physicians Favor Lubrication

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water it is harmless.

Get rid of constipation and avoid disease by adopting the habit of internal cleanliness. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

Dreaming of Good Old Santa

Happy With Her Christmas Gifts

By ELEANOR KING

Young Singer's Yuletide Songs Assured Her of Training for Opera

"HELLO, Esther, beat me home tonight."

"Yes, by ten minutes. My, but some folks are slow," she said laughingly. "Where have you been, Mary?"

"It's a rather long story," replied Mary, as she removed her wraps, hanging them in the one and only little clothes closet the boarding house room afforded. This was already filled to the bursting point, needless to add.

"Do you remember my speaking of a Miss Young?"

Esther nodded in assent.

"I met her when I was a stenographer at the settlement house, you know. She tells me she is still in that work. I think it so queer that I should meet her like this after our conversation last night. Now, Miss Esther, I am coming to the point. You recollect saying that you were so blue because it was almost Christmas and you had no home to go to, no money to give to make some one happy, and you couldn't go to see George because you hadn't the railroad fare! Well"—and Mary paused for breath—"now, here is your chance to show how much you meant all this. Mrs. Young was telling me her troubles."

"Oh, Mary, how awful!" and Esther burst out laughing as she threw her arms about Mary and gave her a hug. "You old dear!"

"She said," proceeded Mary as though nothing had happened, "she was giving a big entertainment for her settlement folks Christmas eve. She was having a hard time getting artists. It seems that there are so many of these things going on that there aren't artists enough to supply the demand. Now you know."

"Yes, she wants me to sing, I suppose, but I am horribly out of practice. I—"

"Oh, hush! I never knew it to fail. That is what they all start out with. I took the liberty to tell her you would be glad to do it, so—"

"I surely will do my best. I will begin to practice this very night. I will see Mrs. Young tomorrow about the songs she wants me to sing. Do you suppose George would come down to hear me sing, and then maybe stay over for Christmas?"

It was the night of the entertainment and the girls were putting the finishing touches to their dressing when Esther suddenly broke the silence.

"I think it is so queer that I didn't receive any answer from George. He might at least have told me he couldn't come."

Everything was excitement and noise in the large hall of the settlement house, where people of all nationalities were crowding in. The program began at the hour stated. Before long Esther heard her name announced and stepped onto the platform with her pianist.

Gazing at the audience while she awaited the pianist, her wandering glance fell upon a familiar face. It could not be, but yet in recognition he smiled. It was George!

"The old dear," and then in the same breath, she murmured, "Oh, God, I thank thee for the power of breath, the desire to live with which you have invested me, and, dear Lord, for George!"

She threw back her head with an exalted air. George was going to hear her sing. She must do more than her best.

Never did she sing with such spirit and vigor. She seemed truly inspired. Her cup of joy was full. The burst of applause which met her ears showed the thorough appreciation of her audience for her efforts.

She couldn't get to George fast enough after the entertainment. Meeting, they both seemed perfectly oblivious of the crowds about them as he gathered her in his arms.

"Esther, you were simply divine. Your voice was wonderful. I never heard you sing like that before." Some one tapped him on the arm. It was Mary.

"But, George," said Esther, wriggling out of his grasp, realizing that they were creating quite a scene, "Why didn't you tell me you were coming?"

"Didn't you get my telegram with all the good news in it? Well, listen, then," George said, excitedly. "I brought my boss along. He has heard so much about your voice—Mr. Williamson, meet Miss Esther Hislop and her friend, Miss Mary Roner, Mr. Williamson. He is very interested in your voice—in fact, he has a proposition to put before you."

Esther slipped her arm about Mary and put her other arm through George's. She needed support.

"My idea was this," began Mr. Williamson, "for me to send you to New York for training for a year or so; being near my place of business, you could report often as to your progress."

"And I will be near George, too," thought Esther. But, aloud, she said, "I will have to take Mary. She is my inspiration always. I couldn't do without her."

"Then," proceeded Mr. Williamson, "I want to send you abroad and finish you off as an opera singer."

"All out!" shouted the janitor, rather peevishly.

"Come up to the house," Esther put in. "This is so wonderful, I want to talk it over some more. George, isn't it wonderful? We will be in New York together. Oh, what a glorious Christmas!"

THE KINDLY STAR

THE little boy was afraid of the dark, but as he looked out through the low window upon the panes of which Mr. Frost was making his pictures, he saw a bright star that was winking at him with a most friendly and assuring light. It shone through his tears and seemed to say that it would watch over his sleep. So he shut his eyes, and, stilling his sobs, the better to hear the carol singers across the street, was safely away to slumber and a dream. The dream lady looked like his mother, all dressed in a robe that glistened and sparkled like snow, and she was bringing him the hope of his heart the sled that was to take him so delightfully down the hill. And when he woke so early on Christmas morning he found that his dream had come true!—Christopher G. Hazard.

Old Glory

There is a gleam of radiant blue
In yonder glorious sky that I see in our "Old Glory"
when the flag is passing by

I can see the trace of beauty
In the lily—oh, so white!
That is woven in our emblem
With its beam of sacred light

There's a dash of glowing color
In the roses at my feet
That brightens all the stars and bars
And make the flag complete.

Every color now is gleaming
In our own red, white and blue
For it waves for Prohibition
And for law enforcement too.

GREAT NORTHERN
Favors reducing Your Taxes

The cost of government has been increasing for years with great rapidity, and this increases the cost of what you produce and what you consume.

This cost of government must be met by taxation. Even when governments borrow the money they spend, they must impose taxes to pay the debt with interest.

The increase in railroad taxes is a measure of increased government costs.

Great Northern taxes for its entire system were:
In 1912 - - - - $3,804,924
In 1922 - - - - $8,097,725

Great Northern taxes for 1922 were two and one-seventh times greater than for 1912.

Great Northern taxes for MINNESOTA in 1922 were $1,970,936.

These heavy increases in taxes show that your government costs need careful scrutiny. These costs should be kept as low as is consistent with good government. You pay them—all of them.

Unnecessary governmental expenditure is a burden on production and consumption. It is to your interest to do everything in your power to encourage honesty, economy and efficiency in all forms of your government—federal, state and local—so as to reduce the taxes you pay. It is just as important to you to reduce the taxes your railroads pay, since they become part of the charge for transportation, and so of your cost of living.

All money expended by the state must be collected ultimately from the producers of wealth within the state. The public must invariably foot all tax bills, including railroad taxes. It is to your interest even more than to that of any railroad to make and keep them low.

I want to take this opportunity to thank the patrons of the Farmers Co. Op. Cry. for their patronage and loyalty to their creamery. It does us lots of good to know the patrons are back of their local creamery, and as a warning to you for your own good, is this, that your patronage and loyality this coming year will be tested out to the limit.

A centraliser is now in our state that is offering a price that is all the way from 5 cents to 10 cents above anyone else which means just this: If the patrons fall for these big prices it won't take long before the Co-operative Creameries are a thing of the past, and then you will have to take the price they are willing to give you.

Again thanking you all for the splendid support you have given your creamery, and hoping that you will continue to do so. I'm sure you will not be sorry.

Wishing you all a Merry Xmas, and a Happy New year, I remain

THE RED LOCK

A Tale of the Flatwoods

"SOME LOOKER"

SYNOPSIS.—On the banks of the Wabash stand Texie Colin and Jack Warhope, young and very much in love. Texie is the only daughter of old Pap Simon, rich man and money-lender. Jack is the orphan bound boy of Pap Simon who had foreclosed a mortgage on the Warhope estate. At first Texie and Jack talk sadly of Ken Colin, the girl's missing brother. Then Jack says that in ten days his servitude will be over, that he will ride out into the big world to seek his fortune. Both know what that will mean to them. Texie and Jack talk of the red lock of "Red Colin," inherited by Ken. And Jack says he's coming back as soon as he finds gold in California. Then arrives the new preacher, Rev. Caleb Hopkins. Pap Simon introduces the villagers to the new preacher, who was a college mate of Ken. At supper at the Colin home the preacher tells how the boy killed a gambler and disappeared. His father attributes Ken's fall from grace to his red lock of hair. Then Pap Simon has a sort of stroke, brought on by reading a letter from Ken, "somewhere in New York," who curses his father on his death bed. A postscript by another hand says he is dead.

CHAPTER IV

The Room Was Deadly Still.

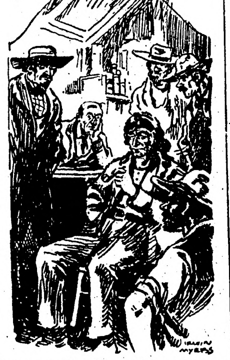
Buckeye was the capital of the Flatwoods. Snugged away in a pocket of the bluffs where Eagle run breaks into the valley of the Wabash, it never woke up but once—when a rumor trickled in from somewhere that a railroad was headed that way. But the rumor subsided, Buckeye went back to sleep, and the big world forgot that it was there.

Zeke Polick's general store was the largest in the place. Zeke sold everything, from onion sets to grindstones, including whisky—barrels of it, from "squirrel" to mellow old Bourbon—right from the spigot. A flatwoodsman could buy it as he wanted it, from a drink to a jugful, but "furriners" had to be identified to get it in quantities less than a quart—an identification quite as exacting, though of a different sort, as that required to borrow money from Simon Colin—which is another way of saying that a man's face went as far in the Flatwoods as his note.

In the mellow evening of the day following the old banker's collapse over the remarkable letter—no syllable of which had been allowed to get beyond the red-roofed cottage—Uncle Nick Wiffles, a tall, iron-gray old man with twinkling eyes, sat smoking a quitely meditative pipe in the one chair of the store.

It was a variegated company that grouped around him in the dim half-light of the feeble coal-oil lamp, with its charred wick and smoke-stained chimney.

There was Zeke Polick, the postmaster and proprietor of the store, a little old rag of a man; Al Counterman, a one-eyed fisherman, with a complexion like a smoke-dried bacon rind; the blacksmith, with his hard arms, and hands so horny they could hold a piece of iron hot enough to sizzle water. Village loafers were there—aimless, doless drifters who had nowhere else to go.



Village Loafers Were There—Aimless, Doless Drifters Who Had Nowhere Else to Go.

Besides these, Loge Belden, said to be a Kentucky mountain man, tall, lanky and just comfortably in his prime, with a reddish-sandy mustache and goatee, leaned on the end of the counter nearest the door. Little was known of him except that he and his sister had lately moved into an old cabin on one of Simon Colin's farms up at the head of Eagle hollow, and that he had taken the job of clearing the timber from an upland field and making it ready for the plow. Some said he had been a pearl fisher, others that he was "wanted" down at Vincennes. The Flatwoods held him at arm's length—and waited."

"Ricollect Jim Rummidge, don't y'u, Zeke?" Uncle Nick remarked.

"Jim Rummidge, reckon I do that," piped Zeke's thin voice, as he leaned forward across the counter. "Ain't go'n' t' f'rgit 'im, nuther, not right soon I ain't. Went off t' M'souri owin' me a dollar and thirty-four cents, and I never did git it."

"Aw, well, Zeke, don't worry none," Uncle Nick rejoined, "y'u've wormed it outen some other pore devil b' this time, more'n likely."

The blacksmith slapped his heavy hand down on his thigh, the others laughed, the fisherman's frisky eye twinkled and he swore merrily.

Zeke said never a word, but the expression in his little rat eyes might have meant any number of things.

"Blamedest feller—that Jim Rummidge," Uncle Nick went on. "Ther' werdn't nothin' but what him an' that brother Si o' his'n wus up to when they wus youngsters. Ricollect one Sund'y Jim tuck it into 'is head t' yoke up a couple o' calves ol' man Rummidge was calc'latin' t' save f'r oxen, an' 'e coaxed Si t' play off sick with 'im so's they wouldn't haf t' go t' church. Well, the ol' folks werdn't more'n out o' sight when up jumps Jim, an' Si right after 'im, an' they breaks f'r the barn-lot t' yoke up them yearlin's.

"Sh-h-h—!" warned Zeke, "hyur comes the parson."

Almost with the words, the dapper, nervously alert young preacher entered the door. In spite of his studious air of riper years, he couldn't have been more than six or seven and twenty. The trade-mark of his calling was hung all over him. His shiny boots, elaborate frock coat, neck stock, high hat and enormous spectacles fairly shrieked schoolmaster.

And yet one could not help wondering why fate had set such a man as the Rev. Caleb Hopkins to the business of keeping school. Dissociated from all suggestion of theology and chalk, his figure was about all that could be desired in a man—height a trifle above medium; well set up; lithe and graceful—and his face—nothing short of handsome, only for a certain air of peering severity.

To look at him as he entered the door—six feet of lithe young manhood smothering under its ascetic, not to say somber, investure—one would never have guessed that there was anything wrong with his health, and yet that was precisely what had brought him to the Flatwoods.

And now as he walked past Loge Belden slouched against the counter, he stopped and stood staring curiously at him.

Belden seemed on the point of resenting the look, when the Reverend Caleb quickly turned away, and with a nod passed the group around Uncle Nick and went on to the post office window at the rear of the room.

"What d' y'u say we ask 'im t' g' 'long," whispered Al Counterman to Uncle Nick as the young minister stood waiting for Zeke Polick to adjust his dirty spectacles on his thin nose, turn up the smoky lamp and laboriously sort over the meager bunch of letters and postcards.

"Y'u da'sn't," Uncle Nick answered guardedly.

"Watch me, an' y'u'll see whuther I da'st. I ain't a-feared of no parson.

"Mr. Hopkins," he called a moment later, stepping in front of the young preacher as he passed toward the door, "a passel of us fellers is goin' a-seinin' up around Alpine island in the mornin'. I reckon y'u wouldn't like t' go long, n'r nothin', would y'u?"

"Who are going, did you say?"

"Oh, me an' Uncle Nick, thar, an' Big Jack Warhope."

"I have promised to be at the social tomorrow evening at the schoolhouse, which, I am informed, is always held in celebration of the last day of school. Do you expect to return in time for that?"

"Aw, we'll be back by noon, easy."

"Let me see," pondered the preacher, not willing to compromise his dignity by appearing overanxious. "This is Wednesday; tomorrow is Thursday—I believe I may safely allow myself this recreation. I shall be most happy to avail myself of your kind invitation."

The fisherman stood fingering his hat and staring at the door long after the minister had passed out, the twinkle gone from his puckered one eye, a puzzled look on his smoked bacon rind of a face.

"Well, I'll be derned! Wouldn't that singe y'ur whiskers! I dunno yit whuther he said 'e'd come 'r not."

Uncle Nick threw his head back and fairly roared, while the postmaster rumpled up his dry countenance into a half begrudged grin.

"Course he said 'e'd come. Whar wus you brung up at, anyhow? Didn't y'u hyur 'im say he'd 'vail himse'f of y'ur kind invytation? Course he's calc'lating t' come. Zeke, we'll haf t' git Al a new spellin' book an' start 'im t' school next fall."

"Well," muttered the fisherman, as his face cleared and the twinkle came back to his waggish one eye, "all I got t' say is: he can use up more dictionary a'sayin' yes than any man I ever hear'd. But ain't 'e some looker—barrin' that killin' rig he's hobbled up in?"

"Most too good-lookin'," piped Zeke.

"Aw, dunno, Zeke," Uncle Nick observed, "'tain't go'n' t' hurt 'im none. Only drawback I can see is: it's a pity t' waste all them good looks on a preacher."

"Anyhow," put in Al, his rakish eye dancing at Uncle Nick's remark, "if he wus ugly enough t' tree the devil up a thorn bush, I don't 'low it'd he'p 'is preachin' none. An' I reckon he shore must be some preacher, 'r he wouldn't be where 'e is—teachin' in a college that makes preachers. I be y'u he can cipher plum' through any 'rethmetic you can hand 'im, an' they say he's posted on purt nigh ever'thing that's goin' on, 'r ever went on."

"That ain't neither hyur n'r there," argued Zeke. "That ain't no more'n his duty, an' what the taxpayers back whar 'e come from 'r' payin' 'im f'r."

"Duty 'r no duty," rejoined the fisherman, "it's a dern good sign."

"All the same," snapped the postmaster, "if I had a gal—which I ain't got, n'a never had—I wouldn't want 'er throwed with 'im like Sime Colin's gal is, an' she shouldn't be, nuther."

"Aw, well, Zeke," drawled Uncle Nick, "if she tuck after 'er daddy in looks, I reckon they wouldn't be no great danger."

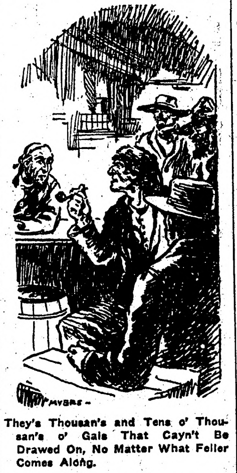
The raucous laugh that followed from the crowd jarred the postmaster.

"I don't care what y'u say," he shrilled in his high, thin voice, "Texie Colin's got good looks enough, if that's what y'u want. I dunno what Sime Colin's a-thinkin' about. It ain't like 'im, t' take in a teetotal furriner that-a-way, preacher 'r no preacher—don't keer if 'e was a classmate o' Ken's. That ain't no recommend, nohow—bein' a classmate o' Ken's—f'r he wus as orn'ry as the devil makes 'em. They're boun' to be throwed t'gether more'n they ough' t' be."

"Ain't much more'n a kid, nuther," the blacksmith remarked, apparently thoughtfully impressed, as he searched his pockets for a match.

"Som'er's around seventeen 'r eighteen—"

The postmaster glanced across at Uncle Nick, as if for confirmation of his statement. The old man took the pipe from between his lips and sat tapping the stem against his thumb nail.



They's Thousan's and Tens o' Thousan's o' Gals That Cayn't Be Drawed On, No Matter What Feller Comes Along.

"I 'low y'ur not fur off," he answered meditatively to the postmaster's look. "Big Jack's twenty past, an' I've hear'n say Texie wus three years younger to a day. That would bring 'er right around seventeen 'r eighteen."

"An' s'poson' she is—every lick of it," the postmaster went on. "A gal ain't got none too much sense at eighteen—an' ther' ain't no gal but what can be drawed on, if the right feller comes along."

"Hol' on thar, Zeke, hol' on!" Uncle Nick had been leaning back against a cracker barrel. His chair came down with a bang, and his voice rang like struck metal. "You're goin' a leetle too fur. They's thousan's an' tens o' thousan's o' gals that cayn't be drawed on, no matter what feller comes along.

"Ther's a heap more nice gals than men. Ther' never wus a bad gal but what ther' wus a bad man first. An' after it's over—she's done. All endurin' the years t' come her heart has t' be drug in the dust, while the man—no, I won't call 'im man, an' I cayn't call 'im beast, f'r the beasts 'r' clean compared—carries 'is head as high as b'fore. I tell y'u, people hain't never looked at them things right. The man d'serves t' be judged accordin' t' the same way the gal is—only more so."

A hush fell over the group. The blacksmith sat patting his foot softly on the floor. Presently his calloused hand came down upon his knee with a sounding slap, while his eyes, dull at most times from long looking into the forge fire, lighted with the fervor of his feelings.

"Good f'r you, Uncle Nick! I agree with y'u complete. That's my kind o' preachin'—right t' the p'int."

"My sentiments to a hair," chimed in the fisherman. "I alw'ys takes the girl's part an' be d—d t' the man. That's how I lost this eye. It wus when—but no matter, I hain't never b'grudged it—"

The fisherman's lone eye settled into a vacant stare at a crack in the floor; the hard lines of his face deepened. Could the others have glimpsed back of that seamed and weather-beaten mask, they might have read there the deep graven memory of a day that was dead—a dream and an awakening, a romance and a tragedy—that had driven him, as the storm drives the driftwood, with what the world calls a crime slated against him, to bury his life here with his dog and fishing gear, alone in his bachelor cabin on the river shore.

> "I 'low y'u must 'a' been mistook about that—arm."

Owatonna—The charter commission recently appointed by Judge F. W. Senn has completed the drafting of a proposed amendment to the city charter providing for the naming of a public utilities board.

Northfield—The new viaduct carrying trunk highway No. 1 over the railway yards in the north end of the city has been opened for traffic. It is a concrete and steel structure 500 feet long, construction of which has been going on for more than a year.

Robbinsdale—Thomas H. Girling, veteran member of the state legislature, victim of an automobile accident, was improving and will recover, physicians said, but three other mishap victims, two men with fractured skulls and a woman with a broken back, were given only fighting chances.

St. Pahl—Four hundred farm bureau leaders from all parts of Minnesota will be in St. Paul Jan. 8, 9 and 10, for a three-day conference on farm problems of the state. They are coming to attend the fifth annual convention of the Minnesota Farm Bureau federation.

Albert Lea—From seed that cost him $18 a bushel, O. M. Towne, a Twin Lake corn grower, has secured 75 bushels of what is pronounced as fine corn as has ever been seen here. Some of the ears have 22 rows, with 1,036 perfect kernels, set deep in the cob. Some corn growers have paid Mr. Towne as much as $2 for one ear.

Fairmont—Sheriff William S. Carver, of Martin county, announces that posses of vigilantes have now been organized in all towns and villages, ready for instant call. About 100 business men and bankers, in consultation with the sheriff, agreed on a code of alarms and signals to be used in going after malefactors as soon as their presence becomes known.

Rochester—Stewart Ashford, son of an Olmsted county farmer, has found that raising popcorn is a paying proposition and the success of his venture with 120 acres of the crop bids fair to be the beginning of a new branch of diversified farming in this county. Ashford, a 20 year old boy, planted 120 acres of popcorn last spring and this fall he harvested 160,000 pounds and disposed of it at $55 per ton, making a gross of $4,400.

Duluth—Two buffalos, either from the Minneapolis or St. Paul zoos, will be procured for Duluth's new zoological gardens, according to Bert E. Onsgard, chairman in charge of arrangements. Mr. Onsgard is secretary of the West Duluth Zoo association, which sponsored the opening of the new zoo and which is largely responsible for the procuring of the animals now in possession of the zoo.

St. Paul—Judge Olin B. Lewis in Ramsey county district court ruled in St. Paul that the court had no jurisdiction in a personal injury damage suit for $100,000 brought against the Louisville & Nashville railroad by James G. Thompson of Florida.

Duluth—Henry Ford has purchased two lake freighters. The boats, 600 footers, added two vessels which the Ford company is having built will give the Detroit automobile manufacturer an ore carrying capacity of 1,000,000 tons a season.

Slayton—A new co-operative creamery was opened for business at the village of Dooray. The occasion was celebrated with appropriate ceremonies. The plan of the structure is of the most approved design and the equipment is up-to-date in every respect. The building is of brick and cost $20,000.

Hastings—Five hundred birds are entered in the ninth annual Dakota county poultry show which opened here.

Orr—A loss of $20,000 was estimated by the Pelican Lumber company when their yards here were swept by fire.

Duluth—Superior harbor, in the 1923 shipping season, established a new record with the total of the season reaching 12,688,321 tons.

Canby—The board of commissioners of Yellow Medicine county has decided to issue bonds to the amount of $75,000 for construction of trunk highways in this county.

Northfield—Carleton college again will be host to a large number of Minnesota ministers when the annual convocation of ministers of all denominations will be conducted here Jan. 1-4.

Dodge Center—A meeting of Dodge county farmers organized the Dodge County Crop Improvement association. Ralph Grim, university farm school crop specialist, was the leading speaker at the organization session.

Faribault—With approximately 1,200 members already signed, Rice county's youngest farmers' co-operative organization, the Rice County Co-operative Egg and Poultry association, is already an assured success.

Mankato—Almost $820,000 worth of new building has been done in Mankato this year to date. The new Teachers' college, costing $343,000, represents the largest element of the total

Minneapolis—F. A. Duxbury, member of the State Industrial commission, was chief speaker at the opening session of the fifth annual two-day convention of the Minnesota State Hotel and Restaurant association, at the Hotel Radisson.

Duluth—Probably six lake boats will spend the winter in the Duluth-Superior harbor, according to local harbor authorities. This is the smallest number in many years. The official 1923 navigation season for Lake Superior came to a close the 12th.

Waseca—The Waseca County Holstein Breeders association will be reorganized as the result of a decision made at a meeting of Secretary Robert Geiger of the Minnesota Holstein Friesian association with a number of breeders here.

Mankato—Of 16 divorce decrees granted in district court here, so far this year, but one was granted to a man. In most of the cases where women were plaintiffs the charge was desertion, only two being for cruel treatment.

Duluth—Open competition for the position of postmaster for this city will be held Jan. 8, 1924. The present term of Postmaster Thomas E. Considine will expire on March 2, 1924. The examination will be for term of four years at a salary of $6,000 a year.

Austin—The annual report of James Prevatil, scout executive, shows that the Austin Boy scout enrollment has grown to ten troops and 298 registered scouts. During the year 1,276 jobs have been secured for boys through the scout employment bureau.

Marshall—Some idea of the bountiful corn crop that was raised in this section of the state this year may be gleamed from the report of E. Nuese, a farmer east of this place. He reported that he gathered more than 10,000 bushels of corn from a 166 acre tract.

Waseca—D. M. "Marty" Coughlin, former Notre Dame football star, was honored by his fellow members of Waseca post, American Legion, at the annual meeting of the post. Coughlin who is now business manager of the newspaper here was elected post commander.

Hastings—A widow and six children won a verdict of $13,500 from a jury in Dakota county district court here from the Chicago, Milwaukee & St Paul railroad. Mrs. Edith Coogan, widow of Edward Coogan, aged 30, brakeman on the road, who was killed by a freight train, was the plaintiff.

Virginia—A co-operative plan of keeping the range paved highway open all winter for traffic is offered. Pelican has approached different village councils, offering to place in operation a fleet of trucks and rotary plows working both day and night, to keep the roads free, each council to pay a certain amount for the service.

St. Cloud—Members of the St. Cloud Chamber of Commerce have started a movement for co-operation with the St. Cloud unit of the Minnesota National Guard that, it is believed, will spread to other cities. It is a auxiliary to the guard, with membership limited to the same number as there are enlisted men in the headquarters company of the Third battalion, 205th infantry.

Austin—L. H. Marville, contractor for Mower county's highway construction work this year, declares he knows of no other county in the United States that has improved so extensive a stretch of highways this year. Mr. Marvelle, whose opinion is shared by the county engineer, A. C. White, says he has kept in touch with construction work of counties in 26 states and he has not heard of any county where 76 miles of highway was improved this year, out of 98 miles of road in the county system.

Owatonna—A permanent organization of the Owatonna Retail Merchants association has been perfected with the following officers: J. F. Fitzgerald, president; John Schoen, vice-president; Vincent Leary, secretary.

Minneapolis — Automobile tourists spent nearly $40,000,000 in Minnesota last summer. Approximately 700,000 persons visited the state. These figures are the estimates of H. C. Hotaling, executive secretary; Ten Thousand Lakes of Minnesota association, who made his report to the association at its annual convention in the Radisson hotel

VAST PETITION GOES TO ROADS

Opponents to Raise in Lignite Freight Rates Expect to Have 25,000 Signers

PRESENTS MUCH DATA

Petitions Plead That Increased Rates Will Destroy Lignite Industry—Northwest Is Dependent Upon Local Lignite Fields.

Bismarck, N. D.—Petitions bearing more than 7,500 signatures of coal consumers in Minnesota, South Dakota, and North Dakota, asking the railroads to withdraw the new proposed tariff on lignite coal, have been forwarded to W. P. Kenney, vice president of the Great Northern railway, St. Paul; J. G. Woodworth, vice president of the Northern Pacific railway, St. Paul; and F. R. Newman, general traffic manager of the Soo Line, Minneapolis, it was announced.

The petitions have been circulated by coal dealers, civic clubs, and individuals in the three states who are interested in retaining present lignite freight rates. Additional petitions are in circulation, and it is expected that protests will be made to the railroads by some 25,000 coal consumers through this method. The plea of the petitioners follows:

We, the undersigned, residing in territory served by your road and depending for economic fuel upon the lignite industry of North Dakota, do hereby protest to your railroad against the proposed increase in freight rates on lignite, on the following grounds:

1. Because the present rates on lignite do not discriminate against other competitive coals.
2. Because the increased rates would destroy the lignite industry of North Dakota.
3. Because the northwest is at all times partially dependent upon lignite for its fuel supply.
4. Because in times of coal strikes or railway strikes, the northwest is entirely dependent upon this local coal field.
5. Because if the lignite industry is destroyed, the people of the northwest will be at the mercy of eastern coal interests who will encounter no element of competition here.
6. Because the living to farmers and those who depend upon these farming districts for patronage and trade, is already far higher than can readily be sustained.
7. Because the increase in freight rates would greatly increase the fuel expenses of every domestic consumer and would also reflect in the expense of electricity and manifold other purchases.
8. Because North Dakota is not now prepared to sustain the financial loss of her largest industry, one that is encouraging other industrial development and overcoming entire independency on agriculture.
9. Because the proposed tariff is obviously discriminatory against our best interests, being a measure to aid eastern coal mines and eastern railroads.

We, the undersigned, respectfully urge you to reconsider your action and withdraw this proposed tariff.

Exhaustive testimony will be presented to the examiner for the interstate commerce commission and the North Dakota state railroad commission in resisting the railroads' plea for an increase in lignite coal freight rates, Stanley Houck of Minneapolis, commerce attorney, said following a conference here last week. The first appearance will be made at Aberdeen, S. D., on January 7.

YOUNG SAYS HE WILL REMAIN

Will Accept Judicial Post in March if Presidential Delay Is Granted.

Washington.—Congressman Geo M. Young, North Dakota, is receiving many letters of congratulation upon his prospective judicial appointment. Mr. Young pointed to a pile of these letters and said that he had not replied to any of them because he was in doubt what to say.

"One of the things which has caused me to hesitate," said Young, "is that, right or wrong, many people of North Dakota believe on account of my long congressional experience I can render a service of value at this critical period in the history of our state. I dislike to withdraw from congress if those at home are anxious for me to stick to the job. This is not the only factor which I am considering, but I will not accept the appointment if it involves my retirement from congress before the end of the present session."

It is understood the vacancy will not occur until March and it may be the president could be persuaded to hold off the appointment for a few months.

Situation Reported Unchanged.

Washington.—Advices received from Mexico City relative to the revolutionary movement were declared by the Mexican embassy here to indicate that "the situation throughout the republic remains unchanged. The western states of Sonora and Sinaloa remain within full government control. Governor General Angel Flores of Sinaloa has once more offered his firm adherence to the legal authorities. Tampico is also under the full control of the legal authorities, as well as the rest of the Good Jolts at Christmas Time

By ETHEL COOK ELIOT

Family Decided to Send Aid to Needy Instead of to Wealthy Relatives

He WAS a high school teacher on a salary of eighteen hundred. There were five growing-up children and a wife who was not strong enough to do her own laundering. Still, at Christmas time, his relatives would say, "Mary and John always do send the cheapest things! I'm surprised, since they spend so little on their gifts, they bother about sending anything at all."

John heard of this, and was grieved. An innocent little nephew had given his elders away. But Mary was not grieved. She held her head high and only laughed, for she knew that she and John were not stingy, and that they were as fond of the family as any other members of it. But she did more than laugh. She made a plan.

And the next year John's relatives got jolts instead of presents for Christmas from Mary and John.

Sister Isabel, whose husband was a successful coal man, received a note. "We sent the thirty-nine cents that we could have afforded for your present this year to the Serbian Relief. It will give some starving babies a little soup. We knew you would rather have us do this."

And brother Thomas, the shoe dealer, got a note too. "We gave the quarter we usually spend on you, to our postman whose wife is in the hospital. It will pay a carfare or so for one of the children to visit her."

And so on. All the relatives, over twenty, got the same sort of notes, telling where the few cents that had usually been spent on them by the school-teaching brother at Christmas time, had gone this year. And into each note was tucked a hearty "Merry Christmas."

John's family were puzzled at first. But after they had shaken their heads together over it for a bit, light suddenly dawned. They realized then that the few cents John and Mary had spent on each of them at Christmas time had been more of a gift, in the real sense of a gift, than their expensive, and often useless, presents in return had been. And they saw, too, what real good that little scattered money was doing this Christmas.

They ended by praising John and Mary, and thinking their Christmas notes the best thing they had got.

And indeed a jolt can be a very useful thing, even for a Christmas present!

"Comet" and "Cupid" and Santa's Sleigh

By MARTHA B. THOMAS

Where Would Old Kriss Be Without the Aid of His Trusty Reindeer?

COMET and Cupid were growing restless in their stalls. As the two leaders of Santa's reindeer, they felt a great responsibility on Christmas Eve.

"None of the others," remarked Comet anxiously, "know the short-cuts as we do. Last year we got stuck in an oak tree, and once we had to wade through the Milky Way. Do you remember that little boy in Poland who cried because he didn't see us? We must make a great racket tonight so he will wake up. And there was a child in Canada who set out some hay for us; dear little thing!"

The stable door flew open, letting in a great gust of icy wind.

"Ah, my fine fellows!" exclaimed a big, jolly voice, "the packs are ready, and we must be off. Comet, I expect you to keep a sharp eye out for accidents. Cupid, don't forget the corners, and the care with which we must land on the roofs!"

In no time at all the reindeer were harnessed, the packs tumbled in, and off they flew, Santa holding the reins in both hands.

Comet and Cupid outdid themselves. They went like the wind. The little boy in Poland heard their impatient feet on the roof and caught one tiny glimpse of the sleigh. The child in Canada found the hay she had left for the reindeer all gone in the morning. No present was lost, no house forgotten.

Back in their stalls once more, Comet and Cupid gave long sighs of satisfaction. "Of course Santa is the one people think about most, but after all, where would he be without us?"

His Dinner for Christmas Day

By F. H. SWEET

Girl Discovered Acrobatic Tramp Purloining Poultry for a Yuletide Feast.

Intruder Impaled on Window Nails, but Was Saved by New Friend

THE chicken squawked. I slid a swift hand to its neck and stifled it. This made the fifth and and went into the bag with a spiteful lunge. I was angry at the clumsy work. A squawk was a dead give-away of new fingers, and mine were old. Of course it was a dog barking in the house path and my turning at the instant of clutching. But that was no excuse for a regular. I was getting so cocksure of myself as to be careless.

My hand shot out again and another chicken went into the bag. That made six, the number I boasted I would bring, and a fine feast for even ten hungry hoboes in a woods camp—our Christmas dinner.

But I always liked to do a little more than I promised. I would take an extra one for good measure—a nice fat one. My eyes peered along the dimly outlined forms on the roosts, and—

"Hello," said a voice at the door.

I gasped audibly. Sharp ears were another thing I prided myself on, and this person had appeared at the door as noiselessly as I could have myself. The two breaks rattled me.

High up at one end was a little square window, the sash out to admit air. My eyes were as quick and accurate as my fingers, and my body had once belonged to an acrobat boy in a circus. Almost with the word from the doorway my knees bent and straightened into a swift spring, my arms in front and my palms together like a person diving.

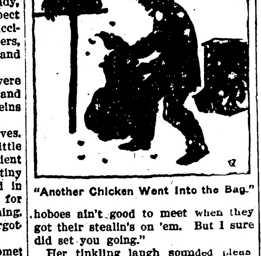
Then the humor of it struck me, and I chuckled. "Winder hole wan't quick enough in grabbin', so missed my neck, leavin' me to squawk—same's I did number five chicken. Guess 'twas all comin' to me. Say," raising my voice, "you man who spoke, come an' get me. I've caught an' am holdin' myself. Don't s'pose there's any reward comin' to me. Christmas, you know."

It was still fairly light outside and my head suspended five or six feet from the ground.

A cautious step came 'round the corner.

"Ain't scared of me trussed up like this, are you?" I jeered, "an' still, if 't wan't for that nail grindin' into me when I so much as wink, an' my bein' turned wrong side 'round, I could use my fists like anything. I'm good with fists. Better get your gun an' shoot while shootin's good. An'—great snakes!" as the figure came within range of my screwed 'round face—"a girl—an' pretty as a picture! 'T wan't you that spoke?"

"Yes, it was, but I spoke deep's I could to sound like a man. Thievin' hoboes ain't good to meet when they got their stealin's on 'em. But I sure did set you going."



"Another Chicken Went Into the Bag."

Her tinkling laugh sounded pleasant even in my unappreciative position.

"Of course I came 'round the corner slow, not being sure you meant to stay. And say, I never did have a real adventure before, with me as heroine. It's just like a book. An' you do look so funny. I'm enjoyin' myself."

"So'm I. An' I feel funny—just as funny's can be. An' of course I wouldn't be polite. You bluffed me to thinkin' you a man. That's why I started my high dive. Ou-u-ch!"

"Winder pinches, does it?" laughed the girl. "Carpenter who made it didn't know his business."

"Knowed—it—too—well," I groaned, between breaths, "'specially when he driv them nails. I—was twisting 'round to see you better, an'—ouch! W-h-ew! Them nails are cuttin' me right in two. Fust we—know I'll be droppin' half inside an' half out."

The girl uttered a low cry of commiseration.

"I—I didn't know," she apologized contritely. "I wouldn't have laughed. I thought 'twas just bein' squeezed too tight. Could I pull—"

"Not on your life," I cried hastily. "It would only help the nails, not me. Maybe if one side of the frame could be pried off, makin' the winder bigger. I felt it wiggle like 'twas loose when I stuck in."

"But you're an awful hobo tramp who steals an' all," hesitated the girl. "Maybe I'd better wait till the master comes back from breakin' up your pestiferous camp. But he'd slap you right in jail with the others."

"Hey!" I choked in a startled voice—"the camp? What about the camp?"

"Yes, you've been watched. A man was hid all day in the top of a pine near the edge of the swamp, watchin' your comin's an' goin's. Folks got tired o' hens stole an' watchdogs pizened, an' such like. The master an' 'bout a dozen men, with the constable, are cleanin' 'em up right now. He told me to stay 'round the poultry house an' watch—though 't wan't likely anybody would come so early."

"An', was you there all the time?" I asked, in a depressed voice.

"Right in the corner, in the shadow. I was sort o' scared when you slipped in; an' besides, I wa'n't sure. So I waited. But it'll be an hour or so 'fore the master gets back, an' you'll keep on hurtin'."

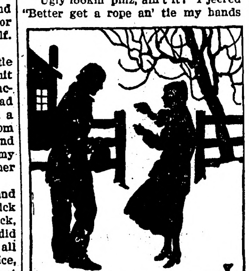
"That don't matter none now," I said hopelessly. "Nothin' matters. It's the pen for me. When they're caught, all them hoboes are goin' to split on me, to try to save themselves. They've been playin' simp with me. I see it now. I bragged I was smart, so they shoved me to the front an' kept pattin' an' tellin' me what a kingbird I was. Huh! I done most of the stealin'. I killed the two watchdogs. Just leave me hangin' here to get sort of used to what's comin'."

The girl hesitated, moving closer.

"Don't talk as if you was all bad," she considered. "An' I like your voice. Let me see your face plainer."

But my face was toward the wall, my body limp and dejected. She placed a hand on my head and turned my face toward her.

"Ugly lookin' phiz, ain't it?" I jeered "Better get a rope an' tie my hands I'm great with my fists—boxin', you know. An' you're close enough for me to maul you right now."



"But You an' Me Know Better."

But she paid no attention. She studied my face a few moments, then patted my cheek softly.

"Why, you're nothin' but a boy," she said pityingly, "nothin' but just—a boy."

"I'm past twenty-one," indignantly. "Plenty old enough to know what I'm doin', an' to take my medicine."

"Just a boy," she repeated. "Now you wait a minute. I won't be gone long."

She hurried away, soon returning with a tall step-ladder, which she placed against the wall. Mounting to the second step she put her arms under my shoulders.

"We'll lay your head an' shoulders on this step-ladder so you'll be level an' easy," she said cheerfully; "then I'll pry off a side piece, like you said. I've noticed it's loose."

In ten minutes she had me free, standing on the ground beside her. But I felt no animation.

"'Twa'n't worth the trouble," I grinned, "though I'm just as much obliged. But I've got old tramp clothes on, an' with the country 'roused they'd spot me ten miles off an' run me in. Then the gang will throw all the stuff on me, an' make it good an' strong. No, I'll just stay here till the men come back. I see now I wa'n't cut out for a hobo, anyhow, an' I've been suspicionin' it for some time. I'm too grass green for one thing, an'—an' they're too cheap for another My real work is diggin' in dirt like I started out. An' if it hadn't been for an uncle who put two men's work on me an' pesterin' my life out, while his own boys were goin' to school, I'd be at it now. Fact is, I ain't much."

"Nor me," returned the girl sympathetically. "I'm only second girl in the kitchen an' they keep dribblin' into me I'm no 'count. But you an' me know better. We're a whole lot. It's only other folks' envy."

My face cleared and I laughed.

"Guess you're right," I agreed. "Anyhow, you're some girl. An' say, I want you to remember me as Reynolds. That's my real, not 'Rat' like the hoboes call me. Now you run into the house an' tell the men, when they come, that I'll be sittin' out here."

"Don't be silly, Reynolds. I've been studyin' it out. Would anybody know you 'round here?"

"None but the gang. I've worked in the dark—unless by the clothes."

"Then it's all right. Now there's a little room in back the hen roost where we keep chicken feed. I have the whole care of it an' keep the key. I'll lock you in there an' bring out some supper an' some peroxide to clean the hurt places with. An' in the mornin' when I slip your breakfast I'll bring some clothes a visitor left here once. They're pretty good, an' 'bout your size. You put 'em on an' come straight to the kitchen door."

"All right," I promised. "But what's the idea—give myself up?"

"Silly again. You're goin' to work. The master has been tellin' us to be on the lookout for a man to do his gardenin'. Good help's scarce, an' he'll snatch you up. An'—an' them dead chickens in the bag I'll fix up for dinner. I'd have to get some anyway for company is comin'. Christmas dinner, you know."

OUR GREETING AND WISH

As THE three wise men rode on that first Christmas to find the manger-cradled Babe of Bethlehem, they bore gifts on their saddle bows; gifts of gold, frankincense and myrrh. And so the spirit of Christmas giving crept into the world's heart.

The injunction was to go into the highways and byways and seek out the poor and distressed, the humble and afflicted, the ragged children and the outcasts and the aged, and in the name of Him who was born on Christmas day, carry some sunshine into their lives. Give unto the poor and afflicted and your hearts shall glow with that peace which passeth understanding.

The two dominant characteristics of the Christmas season are kindness, expressed by good will toward men, and the inward joy wrought by kind acts, and suggested by peace on earth. "The earth has grown old with its burden of care, but at Christmas it always is young," and with each recurring Yuletide we like to think of the spiritual blessings brought to the children of men on that first Christmas.

Our greeting to you is one of kindness in return for the good will you have displayed toward us. Our wish is that you may be filled with the fresh, clean joys of the season and receive a liberal endowment of that spirit which at this time rises like a mighty flood over the world.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage containing a Power of Sale, by reason of which default said Power of Sale has become operative and the Assignee of the Mortgagee hereinafter named is authorized to declare the whole sum due, and he hereby does declare said sum due, which mortgage was executed by Albert T. Johnson and Severine Johnson, his wife, Mortgagors, to D. B. Bakke, Mortgagee, dated May 18, A. D. 1915 and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota on the 19th day of May, A. D. 1915 at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 74 of Mortgages, on page 607.

Which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said D. B. Bakke, Mortgagee, to Deposit Bank of Winona, Winona, Minnesota by written assignment dated May 21, A.D. 1915 and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota on May 28, 1915 at 10 o'clock A. M., in Book 75 of Mortgages, on page 150, and which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Deposit Bank of Winona, Winona, Minnesota to E. F. Krumdick by written assignment dated July 10, 1920 and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota on the 21st day of November, 1923 at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 110 of Mortgages, on page 184.

And whereas the said E. F. Krumdick, the assignee and holder of said mortgage, on November 30, 1923 paid delinquent taxes upon the mortgaged property hereinafter described in the sum of Four Hundred and 34-100 ($400.34) Dollars: and whereas, the said E. F. Krumdick, the assignee and holder of said mortgage, has duly elected and does hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, under the terms and conditions of said mortgage and the Power of Sale therein contained: and whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of Seven Hundred ($700.00) Dollars, with interest thereon from the 18th day of May, 1921, at the rate of six per cent per annum and also the sum of $400.34 for taxes paid as aforesaid, with interest thereon from the 30th day of November 1923, at the rate of six per cent per annum; and whereas, the said Power of Sale has become operative, and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

NOW, THEREFORE, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the Power of Sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and covered by said mortgage, viz:

The North Half of the Southeast Quarter (N½SE¼) and the North Half of the Southwest Quarter (N½SW¼) of Section One (1), in Township One Hundred Fifty-five (155) North, of Range Forty-one (41) West, of the Fifth Principal Meridian in Minnesota, containing 160 acres more or less according to the United States government survey thereof, in Marshall County and State of Minnesota;

Which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Marshall County, at the Front door of the County Court House in the City of Warren, in said County and State on the 2nd day of February, 1924, at 10 o'clock A. M. of that day at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash, to pay the amount then due on said mortgage and interest, and the sum of $400.34 for taxes paid on said described premises, with interest thereon from date of payment, together with the costs and disbursements of such sale and Fifty Dollars attorneys fees included in the amount stipulated as attorneys fees in said mortgage in case of foreclosure.

Dated December 13 1923.

GREAT NORTHERN Extends Season's greeting

While in volume of traffic the year 1923 has been the largest in the history of the Great Northern Railway, the net results of the year have been less profitable to the owners than in some former years, owing to the fact that increases in the cost of things which comprise transportation, its sole product, have been greater than those in freight and passenger rates.

The Great Northern thanks the people who so liberally patronized it in 1923 and at the same time extends its thanks to those faithful, loyal and efficient employees who made it possible to handle this large volume of business. The Great Northern has great faith in the men and women who serve it, in the fairness of those whom it serves, and in the ultimate prosperity of the territory it traverses. It has endeavored to render good service to its patrons and hopes to continually improve that service and to merit further patronage.

To all--patron and employee alike--in the spirit of the season, the Great Northern Railway wishes a joyous Christmas and a happy and successful New Year.

News Briefs from All the State

Condensed Stories of Happenings of the Week in Minnesota

Duluth—Postmaster Thomas E. Considine will seek the reappointment at the local station on his record of the past four years. His term expires March 2.

Ely—Because of the fine weather that has been enjoyed here this winter, work on the new $800,000 high school will be completed before the required time called for in the contract.

Willmar—C. M. Babcock, state commissioner of highways, was given official recognition by the village council at Raymond, when a new street that has been laid out in the village was named for him.

Red Wing—Fire which broke out in the three story building of C. A. Betcher, caused damage estimated at $10,000. Jake Krueger, fireman, was painfully bruised when an explosion in the tannery threw a door against him.

Benson—Lloyd and Ernest Sather were drowned when the automobile in which they attempted to cross Scandinavian lake, 18 miles north of here, broke through the ice. Lloyd was 17, Ernest 19.

Granite Falls — The question of whether or not the city of Granite Falls shall be bonded for $35,000 for the construction of a pure water system and extension of water mains to all parts of the city will be brought up at a public mass meeting.

Duluth—Fifteen thousand safety pamphlets are being distributed to the school children of this city, urging parents to teach safety. The pamphlets are being distributed through the boys' work committee of the Duluth Rotary club.

Rochester — Word has been received by B. V. Snodgrass of the high school faculty from officials of the Central Interscholastic Press association, that the Rochester high school 1922-23 contest conducted by that association at Madison, Wis.

Watson—Carl W. Strom has been chosen Rhodes scholar from Iowa and plans to leave in October, 1924, to study at Oxford, England. Strom, a graduate of Luther college, Decorah, Iowa, is the third Luther college alumnus to receive a Rhodes scholarship. At present he is studying at Iowa City at the state university.

Mankato—Of 16 divorce decrees granted in district court here, so far this year, but one was granted to a man. In most of the cases where women were plaintiffs the charge was desertion, only two being for cruel treatment.

Little Falls—A. H. Vernon, former state commander of the American Legion in Minnesota and practising attorney here, will, with Mrs. Vernon, leave the latter part of the week for Los Angeles, where they will spend the winter and possibly make their future home.

Duluth—"People will be driving over it by this time next year," is the way Mayor S. F. Snively expressed himself after an inspection with representatives of civic bodies over the proposed boulevard extension. A scenic highway from the eastern part of Duluth to Jay Cooke park and Fond Du Lac is the program that Mayor Snively expects to put through and complete next year.

Montevideo—Because a travelling medicine show proprietor was arrested and found not guilty of having "peddled" without a license, this city, it was said, will soon have to stand two suits for damages. The show manager will sue for $5,000 for malicious prosecution and his company will also ask for damages through loss of business.

Redwood Falls—A rousing meeting of farmers, bankers, breeders and business men of Redwood county inaugurated the purebred sire campaign of the Minnesota Holstein Breeders' association here. A dinner in the armory building brought town and country together in passing the movement for better livestock of both beef and dairy types.

St. Paul—Organization of citizens vigilance committees in every city, village and hamlet in the state to aid in better prohibition law enforcement in Minnesota was advocated by S. B. Qvale, Minnesota prohibition director, in opening the state dry law enforcement conference of peace officials and prosecutors in the house chamber at the capitol building.

Austin — Declaring agricultural conditions now are better than a year ago and that the only way for farmers to get out of their difficulties is by co-operative marketing, J. F. Reed, president of the Minnesota Farm Bureau association and recently elected vice president of the American Farm Bureau federation at Chicago, addressed the annual meeting of the Mower County Farm Bureau federation here.

Hibbing—Boy Scouts of Hibbing will act as guardians of the new game preserve order by the state game and fish commissioner. The new preserve is located in the vicinity of the Boy Scout camp at Island Lake. The camp is inside the territory ordered for the preservation of game life.

Duluth—A resolution condemning Secretary Mellon's proposed tax cut has been adopted by the eighth district board of the American Legion and copies will be sent to Senators Shipstead and Johnson at Washington, according to announcement made by Gerald V. Barron of Cloquet, Minn.

Winona — Louis Speltz of Altura was re-elected president of the Winona County Farm bureau at the annual meeting here.

Duluth—Northern Minnesota reports the largest Christmas tree industry on record.

Windom — Owing to the extremely mild weather conditions prevailing here many farmers are plowing and seeding. The roads are in excellent condition all over the country.

Duluth—The installation of officers of the Duluth Builders Exchange will take place Jan. 23 at the Spalding hotel. A banquet will precede the installation.

Northfield—Carleton college again will be host to a large number of Minnesota ministers when the annual convocation of ministers of all denominations will be conducted here Jan. 1-4.

Crookston — The United States land office officials here report that in one month they have had 436 letters inquiring as to the prospect of obtaining land in this district.

Red Wing—In district court here all claims filed against the Goodhue County Co-operative company, now in the hands of receivers, which were not represented by counsel were ordered wiped from the records.

Benson — Representative farmers from every township in Swift county met with the Kiwanis club and heard an address by W. A. Peck, livestock commissioner, on the procedure necessary to get a country wide test for tuberculosis in cattle.

Mankato—Almost $820,000 worth of new building has been done in Mankato this year to date. The new Teachers' college, costing $343,000, represents the largest element of the total

Fergus Falls—The Fergus Falls high school debating team defeated Pelican Rapids high in the first debate of a state series here. The subject was: "Resolved, that Immigration Should be Prohibited for a Period of Five Years." Pelican Rapids took the affirmative.

Ellendale — Mrs. E. Q. Ertel, who was the leader in the organization of the local Business Women's club, has been picked as head of the temporary organization. The club will name permanent officers and adopt a constitution and by-laws in the near future.

Walnut Grove — School authorities have put a ban on joyriding of school pupils to basketball contests in other towns. Each car, according to the ruling of the school authorities, must be chaperoned by a teacher, who shall insist on proper driving.

Owatonna — Albert L. Sperry, president of the Owatonna Commercial club, has announced January 6 to 11, inclusive, as the dates for the proposed Owatonna Civic Week. Meetings and other events that are to feature the week are being arranged.

Slayton — Mrs. Ernest Johnson of Scandia township, in the northern part of this county, has presented the Current Lake Swedish Lutheran church with a pipe organ, costing $3,500, as a memorial to her husband, Ernest Johnson, who died about a year ago.

Austin — By cutting the graveled surface from 24 to 20 feet this season, Mower county officials were able to gravel 80 miles of highway and still keep within the appropriation. A. C. White, county engineer, says that had the 24 foot surface been graveled the county could have finished only 40 miles.

Owatonna — Eleven Steele county communities are taking part in dairy extension work, through which the county farm bureau hopes to better feeding methods and milk and butter fat production during the coming year. Dairy experts from the state university are instructing unit heads who are in turn instructing the farm clubs which they represent.

Rochester — Resolutions requesting the United States to grant $20,000,000 to Germany for the purpose of food for famine sufferers and that the United States government loan Germany an additional $150,000,000 to be expended in this country for food supplies were passed at a mass meeting of several hundred citizens here.

Gilbert — Mark Nolan of Gilbert, a senior lawyer, won the Breen medal for oratory in the annual competition at the University of Notre Dame. Mr. Nolan spoke on "The Guardian of the Constitution," and during his discourse defended the United States supreme court from the attacks being made against it.

Hibbing — One of the biggest real estate deals made here in recent months was concluded when Mayor Victor Power bought the Peterson Mortenson farm, located near this village. The consideration was not announced, but, as Mr. Mortenson asked $55,000 for the place a short time ago, it is supposed the price paid is somewhere in that neighborhood.

Hadley — Two bandits entered the State bank at Hadley, forced the assistant cashier, E. F. Oberg, into the vault at the point of a gun and escaped with approximately $800. The bandits, who were unmasked, appeared very nervous, overlooking $10,000 in bonds and several hundred dollars in currency, in their haste to depart. Authorities believe the men to be novices.

Madelia—Dr. F. L. Bregel of St. James was elected president of the Watonwan County Medical association at its quarterly meeting here.

Thief River Falls—The new Great Northern railroad station, built to replace the pioneer structure erected 30 years ago, was opened to the public with elaborate ceremonies.

Windom—The Cottonwood County Farm Bureau had their annual meeting at Jeffers in this county with more than 200 delegates present. The following officers were elected: U. D. Fisk, president; W. L. Frost, vicepresident; L. H. Smith, secretary.

IN THE New Year that is dawning
May you find each passing day
A little time for work and rest,
A little time for play;
A little time for friendship,
For gladness and good cheer—
But not a single moment
For worry or for fear.

New Year's Eve Party

By Mary Graham Bonner

Copyright, 1923, Western Newspaper Union.

IT WAS New Year's eve. In the big house on the hill a party was being given.

There was dancing and talking and laughing and merriment of all kinds.

The mistletoe was still hanging over the door as it had hung throughout the Christmas season, urging shy youths to snatch kisses from shy but eager maidens and encouraging those youths who needed no encouragement.

The music played on, the dancers never wearied. And then suddenly it stopped. All was very still following a trumpet call.

The lights were turned out. A door leading into the big dancing room from the out-of-doors was opened.

And then could be seen an old, old man, with long white beard and long white hair, hobbling along upon a stick, a lantern in his hand.

He threw a light as he walked along and going out of the opened door waved an arm as though in farewell and was just about to shut the door—when, lo and behold, a little lad rushed in, clad in very few garments, all young and excited and bounding with spirits. The door closed. He was within. The lights were turned on.

Dancing began, but only he danced. Around and around, in and out of the people he danced, while the music played, faster, faster, faster.

And then he made a low bow and dashed out of the dancing room.

There was applause. All the guests clapped their hands. They called for the little, young dancer.

But as they called, in rushed a group of small boys. Under their arms they carried imitation newspapers and as they rushed about they cried.

"Extra! Extra! See about the great new arrival!

"Extra! Extra! The New Year has many packages of joy to scatter over the earth this year.

"He will be with us for twelve months! His stay is to be exactly that long.

"He danced for you now. And he will come in response to the encore you gave him and dance again.

"And after that he will give his encores day by day if you call for him and ask for the happiness, which he has to give, to dance in your hearts!

"Extra! Extra! The New Year is here!"

And around they went with their newspapers to every guest.

Then the little New Year came in and danced once more and then left with kisses and New Year greetings to all.

Once more the dancing began for everyone and way into the New Year they danced.

It was splendid to begin the New Year with dancing!

The New Calendar

By Marie V. Caruthers, in New York Times

DAYS three hundred sixty-four,
Like fair, uncut pages are
In the volume, yet unread,
Of my New Year's calendar—
One continued chapter they,
Starting in afresh today!

Though this selfsame calendar
Serves us all throughout the years,
Hours which make your joy, for me
May be fraught with grief and tears;
Those my happiness which bring,
Will find others sorrowing.

Days that stretch on far ahead,
I must live them one by one,
Bearing what may be in store
Till the year's long tale is spun.
What is written there? I turn
One page at a time—and learn!

Falls my lot in pleasant ways?
Will death interrupt my task?
All is hid from mortal eye.
But, Life, just one boon I ask:
Let me meet courageously
Whatsoever fate may be!

The New Year Pledge

THIS is the time to take stock, being the last of the year, the time of reckoning to consider that new leaf that is to be turned. Is it to be turned, or not? Is any effort to be made to start the year with a resolution of better conduct?

There is something more than mere tradition in the regarding of New Year day as a time for efforts at personal betterment. Of course, any other day in the year is just as good, but that invites endeavors for betterment. Even if the good intention lasts only a short time it is worth recording.

There is nobody who cannot find some specific way of self-improvement, some habit to be broken, some trait to be checked or corrected. Nobody is perfect, and good resolutions will not make the perfect man. But even the best of folks can improve themselves. They can be more considerate of others, more thoughtful, more unselfish, more tolerant and patient. Strict righteousness is often extremely disagreeable if it is not mixed with human kindness and compassion.

An eminent French psychologist recently came to this country to teach the American people, so far as he could reach them, how to help themselves to better health. His prescription was simple, consisting largely of a formula or a "litany" in which the subject gave daily assurance of being better. Let this method apply to other than physical ills and the New Year start with a resolution to "be better" in every way every day of 1924.

MOSHER IS FOR COULTER PLAN

Is Only Sound and Practical Solution to Problems Yet Offered, He Says

Fargo, N. D.—The Coulter plan for farmer relief is not a cure-all but is the only sound and practical plan so far advanced for bringing about better farm conditions in the Northwest, according to Curtis Mosher, of the Ninth District Federal Reserve bank of Minneapolis, who visited in Fargo en route home after a tour of the district.

Mr. Mosher covered the greater part of North Dakota and Montana, going as far west as Missoula. He declares that conditions are gradually improving all over the district. Rapid progress was not expected by anyone, he said, and consequently financiers and businessmen are more than pleased with the change that has been made during recent weeks.

"They say the farmer is slow to change and to advance himself," he said, "but that is not true. Once he is shown the practical and sound way of improving his condition and of getting his farm on a real business basis, he moves rapidly. This is proved by our 1923 experience with flax. The acreage increase in the State of North Dakota alone amounted to 110½ per cent. More than doubling your acreage in a single year is proof of the rapidity with which the farmer moves once he sees that he is on the threshold of something sound. Flax alone increased the money brought into the four states (Minnesota, Montana, and North and South Dakota) this year by $15,000,000 or $16,000,000. That means a lot to the farmers of the district."

Mr. Mosher said that many people misunderstood the word "diversification." Many believe that it means entering the dairying industry, he said. It simply means, he said, a plan to get all the farms of the Northwest on a sound business basis, or, rather, spreading out the sources of income. It means raising cattle, hogs, sheep, bees, or doing anything else that will give the farmer a steady and regular income instead of the yearly one-crop income. The change should be made to conform with the capacity of the individual farmer. One who never has had any experience in dairying should not be asked to enter that industry, he said, but should be encouraged to adopt some branch of agriculture in which he is particularly interested or for which he is fitted.

CHANGE OF VENUE GRANTED

Cooley Announces He Will Transfer Trials to Grand Forks County.

Fargo, N. D.—The seven men indicted by the recent Cass county grand jury on charges growing out of the failure of the Scandinavian-American bank will be tried in Grand Forks county, it was unofficially announced recently. Judge C. M. Cooley, who presided at the December term of district court when the men were arraigned on the indictments, said that he would send the cases to that county, but that the official order had not been signed.

All of the legal questions, it was intimated by attorneys for the state and the defendants, will be disposed of in Cass county prior to the trials. These questions include motions for setting aside the indictments and, failing in that, the filing of demurrers to the indictments. Steps to dispose of these questions will be taken just as soon as Judge Cooley has appointed a judge to hear the cases.

The indicted men are: F. W. Cathro of Bottineau, H. J. Hagen of Spokane, P. R. Sherman of Los Angeles, Frank C. Heaton of Portland, J. J. Hastings of Minneapolis, and N. G. Eggen and L. P. McAneney of Fargo.

BUY ARMS IN NEW ORLEANS

Many Arrests Expected in Plot to Furnish Firearms to Rbels.

New Orleans, La.—The pot here in which is brewing a plot to purchase arms and ammunition and ship them to the Mexican revolutionists at Vera Cruz, is boiling briskly and, from various sources it was indicated is likely to overflow at any moment. Department of justice men were known to be prepared to take charge of everything they can lay their hands on at the proper time.

When United States District Attorney Louis Burns announced that about 200 Mexicans were under surveillance, that 15 were slated for early arrest, and that operatives were watching every Mexican who arrived in the city, a wave of apprehension swept the Mexican colony. It was learned on good authority that 15 or 20 hurriedly left the city, and that more may follow.

Ships 2½ Millions of Products.

Grand Forks, N. D.—Mill products to the value of $2,564,151.79 were shipped out by the state mill here during the four months from August 1 to November 30 last, according to a report by C. E. Austin, general manager of the mill and elevator. Mr. Austin's report showed that during the four months in question the mill ran practically at full capacity and that the products turned out included 369,597 barrels of flour to which must be added the feed and other by-products obtained.

N. D. MAKES BIG LOAN PAYMENTS

Liquidation of Advances Made By War Finance Board Is Marked

New York.—Almost half of the $19,700,000 loaned in North Dakota by the United States war finance corporation has been repaid, it is announced in a dispatch from New York quoting G. O. Holberg, secretary of the corporation.

Of the $19,700,000 loaned in North Dakota, $9,200,000 has been repaid, leaving $10,500,000 still outstanding.

Of the $47,000,000 loaned in the three spring wheat states, North and South Dakota and Minnesota, more than half has been repaid. Nearly $1,000,000 was paid in November, Mr. Holberg announced, and more than $500,000 has already been repaid this month, leaving outstanding loans of $22,000,000.

About two-thirds of the repayments are estimated from data collected in a survey of all banks which took loans from the agency, to have come from "new money," in the area, and the remained is judged to have come from a rearrangement of credit, particularly from an arrangement of mortgaged land with state bodies.

About $12,600,000 was loaned in Minnesota, and $14,700,000 in South Dakota. Loans outstanding in Minnesota amount to about $4,500,000; South Dakota, $7,000,000.

TO INVESTIGATE REVOLT PLAN

Ruthenberg Brands Hughes' Statement as Forgery.

Washington.—With a sweeping study of the Russian question by the senate foreign relations committee in prospect after the holidays, further disclosures are expected to be made shortly in support of the state department's charges of revolutionary soviet propaganda in the United States.

The contention in some quarters favoring recognition of the Russian government by the United States that the propaganda for a proletarian revolution in America emanates from the Communist Internationale and not from the soviet government is regarded as merely a quibble by the state department, which holds that it is impossible to draw a line of distinction between the two.

Denial is made by the Workers Party of America through C. E. Ruthenberg, Chicago, executive secretary, that it never received a letter purported by Secretary of State Hughes to have been sent by the Communist Internationale, outlining a plot to overthrow the United States government.

FARMERS TO CUT ACREAGE

Organization Formed to Cut Wheat and Potato Acreage 20 Per Cent.

Fargo, N. D.—With the unanimous approval and endorsement of about 60 Fargo businessmen and prominent farmers of this community, the Treadwell Twichell-Mark Andrews plan for a new farmer organization, definitely pledged to reduce their wheat and potato acreage 20 per cent under their 10 year average production, was formally launched here.

A committee consisting of Mark Andrews, chairman; Morton Page, R. S. Lewis, A. D. Scott, Treadwell Twichell, John Andrews, C. O. Follett, and M. A. Baldwin, was named to select a committee of 15 representative Cass county farmers who will form the first temporary county council, which is to form the permanent organization.

RUSSO-BRITISH PACT PENDS

Re-opening of Trade Relations Is Predicted in Near Future.

London.—While the United States rebuff to the soviet government is attracting attention here the Westminster Gazette announces that British recognition of Russia and the re-opening of full trade relations with that country are likely to take place soon after the Baldwin ministry quits office.

Negotiations, the newspaper says, have made it clear that the Moscow government will admit liability for the prewar Russian debt to Great Britain, totaling about £655,000,000, the interest on which has not been paid since 1918.

Giant Liner Runs Aground.

New York.—The giant liner Leviathan, largest passenger ship in the world, reported by wireless Friday she is argound in upper New York bay off Robbins Reef. The Leviathan was sailing from Southhampton with a heavy passenger list. Observers at the ferry terminal at St. George, Staten Island, said the ship has a slight list to the starboard but it was not pronounced. The Levithan is approximately three-quarters of a mile off St. George between Robbins Reef and Bell Buoy.

Minot Democrats Endorse McAdoo.

Minot, N. D.—Unanimous endorsement of William G. McAdoo as a candidate for the presidential nomination was given at a meeting of the Northwest Democratic club in Minot which was attended by 75 Democrats from this section. The club adopted a resolution urging and requesting H. H. Perry of Ellendale, N. D., Democratic national committeeman, from North Dakota, to be a candidate for re-election to this position and assuring him of the hearty support of the local organization.

The Red Lock

A Tale of the Flatwoods

"MISTOOK"

SYNOPSIS.—On the banks of the Wabash stand Texie Colin and Jack Warhope, young and very much in love. Texie is the only daughter of old Pap Simon, rich man and money-lender. Jack is the orphan bound boy of Pap Simon who had foreclosed a mortgage on the Warhope estate. At first Texie and Jack talk sadly of Ken Colin, the girl's missing brother. Then Jack says that in ten days his servitude will be over, that he will ride out into the big world to seek his fortune. Both know what that will mean to them. Texie and Jack talk of the red lock of "Red Colin," inherited by Ken. And Jack says he's coming back as soon as he finds gold in California. Then arrives the new preacher, Rev. Caleb Hopkins. Pap Simon introduces the villagers to the new preacher, who was a college mate of Ken. At supper at the Colin home the preacher tells how the boy killed a gambler and disappeared. His father attributes Ken's fall from grace to his red lock of hair. Then Pap Simon has a sort of stroke, brought on by reading a letter from Ken, "somewhere in New York," who curses his father on his death bed. A postscript by another hand says he is dead. At the village store and post office Loge Belden, a newcomer says he saw the new parson with his arm around Texie. Jack licks him, shoots a pistol from his hand and makes him say he was mistaken.

—6—

"Yes, them's mighty fine sentiments," cut the thin edged voice of the postmaster across the silence—and the dream dissolved in the fisherman's eye—"an' I mostly agrees with 'em an' says amen to 'em, an' the new parson may be all 'e's cracked up to be, but still I ain't takin' back nothin'."

Zeke's thin voice ceased, lost somewhere in the cavernous labyrinth of his sharp, inquisitive nose.

Uncle Nick prodded down the contents of his pipe with his finger and smoked a while in silence. Taking the stem from between his lips after a time, he blew the smoke away, slowly, as if to get the full taste of it, and waved the pipe across toward the postmaster—a well understood preliminary to a renewal of the argument.

At the moment Loge Belden took a gulp from his bottle of "squirrel," put the cork in, slapped it tight and slouched up along the counter.

"Say, I'd just like t' put one t' that. This evenin' as I come up the River road past this hyur Warhope homestead an' Sime Colin's house, I stopped a little bit on the bridge acrost Eagle run an' happened t' look over in the orch'id b'twixt ol' Sime's an' the parsonage. Y'u know ther's a spring along the crick thar under the edge o' the hill, an' ther's a bench t' set on under the maple tree by the spring.

"Well, as I come a-past, thar set this hyur new parson an' that Texie gal on that bench, an' as near as I could make out, bein' purty well along tow'rds dark, he had 'is arm around 'er. You fellers 'r' wastin' a lot o' breath on that gal. I 'low the parson—"

The room suddenly was deadly still, with every eye turned toward the door. Belden felt the stillness; hesitated; turned—

In the open door, framed in sharp outline against the dark background of the nightfall, stood the tall form of Jack Warhope.

Belden grinned oddly; muttered a word or two; leaned against the counter and looked down at the floor.

With the reach and spring that only the woods and hills can give, Warhope walked into the room.

"I 'low y'u must 'a' been mistook about that—arm."

"Not a d—n bit."

Like lightning came the sharp smack of an open hand that fanned Belden's head back. He leaped away from the counter and struck—a good smashing swing, clean from the hip; but it didn't land.

It was apparent that Belden had a high opinion of his ability as a rough and tumble fighter, for he stepped right in and mixed it fast and furious—the whirlwind give and take of the mountains. The man he faced ducked or sidestepped or dashed aside everything Belden had, and came back with an occasional jab that was maddening.

Belden lost his temper—the mistake of many a better man—and lunged viciously. He ran into an uppercut to the chin that doubled him back over a barrel of salt. He whirled up, and his right hand clawed the butt of a pistol out of his pocket.

The pistol came out, but that was all. A heavy six-gun leaped from the woodsman's side, a bullet crashed into the pistol butt, gashed Belden's hand slightly and tore on into the salt barrel.

The woodsman stuck the six-gun back into the holster at his hip, hidden by his hunting blouse, snatched Belden by the collar and jerked him out into the middle of the floor.

"I 'low y'u must 'a' be'n mistook about that arm."

Belden's small beady eyes burned like hot copper as he wrung his hand. He cursed the pain; swallowed hard; finally muttered.

"The light werdn't none too dern' good. I 'low I must 'a'."

The woodsman dropped the other's collar, talked a moment or so with Uncle Nick and Counterman about the seining trip next day—the matter that had brought him into the store—and passed out at the door. The crowd gathered around Belden.

Uncle Nick picked up the broken pistol and stuck it back, muttering as he examined the gashed hand.

"Y'u ort 'a' had more sense than t' pull on him. He ain't no ways spry on talk, but he can pick hick'ry nuts with a six-gun."

CHAPTER V

Arrows of the River Gods.

The Rev. Caleb Hopkins was at the boat landing in good time next morning.

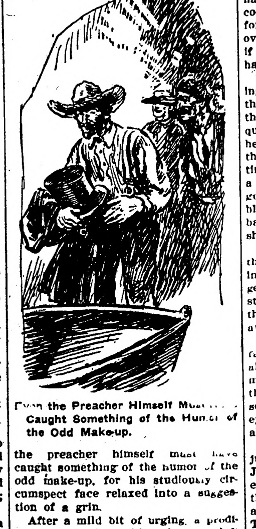
The others were already there, sitting in the long skiff, Uncle Nick in the stern, Jack Warhope and Al Counterman at the oars, the latter still holding the boat to the wharf.

In his nervous and mincing way the preacher scrambled in; Counterman shoved off; the oars dropped into the water; and, with the seine coiled up on the stern locker under the experienced care of Uncle Nick, the live box towing behind, the skiff slipped away up the river toward Alpine island.

Alpine island divides the Wabash into two nearly equal channels. The skiff was guided into the north channel, and had glanced along nearly to the head of the island when Counterman rested his oars with the remark that just there would be a good place to make the first haul.

The skiff was accordingly turned in to the island, and the prow drawn up on the sandy margin. Each man, Uncle Nick excepted, hurriedly undressed, stacked his clothes in the boat and drew on his rough fishing garments.

In strict justice to the truth it must be stated that only Counterman and the woodsman hurriedly undressed. The preacher was far slower and quite noticeably embarrassed over the unusual experience. The ragged boots too large, the shabby trousers too tight, the faded straw hat ridiculously unbecoming, it was the queerest wading rig ever seen along the Wabash. The others eyed it askance and winked around at one another. Even the preacher himself must have caught something of the humor of the odd make-up, for his studiously circumspect face relaxed into a suggestion of a grin.



Even the Preacher Himself Must Have Caught Something of the Humor of the Odd Make-up.

After a mild bit of urging, a prodigious deal of coaching, he was left near shore to hold the brail stick while Jack and Counterman rowed out around as great an expanse of water as the length of the seine permitted.

On nearing the shore at the completion of the circuit, the two rowers leaped into the water the moment it was shallow enough, leaving the boat to Uncle Nick, and raced for the bank at top speed, holding the brail stick to the bottom as they ran.

With the frantic river tribes thus forced to shore, the water began to be wildly agitated. Long ripples shot from side to side of the rapidly diminishing space inclosed by the net, as some panic-stricken swimmer plowed his reckless way near the surface.

Even the preacher's tired and studious eyes waked with the excitement, and he tugged eagerly at the brail as the bass and pickerel began to leap, glittering in the morning sun like silver arrows shot up by the river gods.

"Thar, boys, haul 'er easy," directed Counterman. "We got 'em. They cayn't git away now. Man! hain't ther' a wad uv 'em! I know'd this was a good hole."

The good fish were dropped into the live box, the others thrown back into the river—precisely as war claims the best men and leaves the defective—and the fisherman seined on.

Several hauls had been made, none of them quite so profitable as the first, and the sun was fast mounting toward mid-sky when, as a wind-up, they prepared to drag the famous Alpine hole that lay along the south edge of the narrow sandbar jutting far downstream from the lower end of the island.

"This hyur's a hard hole t' fish," observed Counterman, handing the near brail to the preacher and taking his place at the oars with Jack, "but they're thar, if we can git 'em."

"Bank's purty steep," called Uncle Nick from his place in the stern. "Better not try t' wade out none."

The preacher nodded and the other stooped to his task at the seine.

But when the usual circuit was completed and they began to haul in on the seine, it was noticed that it did not bow out in the wide curve a spread seine should. Instead, as the men pulled, the sides drew in toward each other until the floating corks stretched out into the river in nearly parallel lines.

"Hung up, by thunder," growled Counterman, scraping the sweat from his grimy forehead with a grimier forefinger. "Snag 'r somethin' about forty yards out thar—right whar the bottom's out, too, as the feller says."

Jack walked up the bank a short distance to where the boat was beached.

Stripped to the skin, a figure that might have been a model for those master sculptors who conferred immortality upon the gods of classic Greece, he was just slipping into the water when Uncle Nick came up the bar.

"You'll find the lead line fast on somethin'—a snag more'n likely," he directed. "Jist h'ist it off. 'Tain't no trick—but we've lost our fish."

Warhope glanced back over his shoulder and nodded. The next moment he was plowing through the stream with strokes so powerful it seemed his great shoulders fairly scorned the water and spurned it out of the way. But the task ahead proved harder than the light remark of his old friend had indicated. It was only after he had three times dived to the bottom of Alpine hole that he was able to locate the snag and release the seine.

When he swam ashore, following the seine as Uncle Nick and Counterman hauled it in, the preacher, who had come up the bar, was seated on the forward gunwale of the boat, feeling over his clothes stacked in the bow, as if eager to assure himself that they had not come to harm.

The woodsman was putting his wading clothes on again when a slight thud, as of some heavy object striking the bottom of the boat, caught his quick ear. Without turning his head—he happened to be just then squeezing the water out of his hair before putting his shirt on—he was able to catch a glimpse of the ivory butt of a six-gun protruding from a pocket of the black frock coat as it was being tucked back in the pile with the tall hat and shiny boots.

Nor was that all—with a deftness that would hardly have been expected in one of his profession, the slim fingers were feeling over the other two stacks of clothes as if making sure that the six-gun he had just tucked away was the only one in the crowd.

Still, probably such an intention was farthest from his thought. Six-gun and all, it was likely merely another of the many eccentricities of a man who had the double drawback of being a professor as well as a tenderfoot—in the eyes of the woodsman, a combination about as bad as could be made.

Uncle Nick and Counterman had just finished hauling in the seine when Jack Warhope, followed by the preacher, came down the bar and rejoined them. But the old man's prediction about losing the fish proved correct. The haul produced not a thing except a very surprised, highly indignant snapping turtle. Counterman kicked the turtle back into the water and stared ruefully at the empty seine.

"Them fish has t' be made up"—he glanced up the river—"an' thar's jist one shore place t' do it—"

"Mud haul," Uncle Nick finished.

"Egzac'ly. Hit's sich a nasty place t' fish that it ain't hardly ever fished, but they're thar."

The preacher had turned a quick look up the river; an expression of polite displeasure clouded his face—an expression which the others, busy with the seine, failed to notice. As a matter of fact, his part in the morning's sport had been next to negligible. After the mild and momentary excitement over the first haul, his interest had obviously waned.

The houseboat and the foot print on its dusty deck.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage containing a Power of Sale, by reason of which default said Power of Sale has become operative and the Assignee of the Mortgagee hereinafter named is authorized to declare the whole sum due, and he hereby does declare said sum due, which mortgage was executed by Albert T. Johnson and Severine Johnson, his wife, Mortgagors, to D. B. Bakke, Mortgagee, dated May 18, A. D. 1915 and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota, on the 19th day of May, A. D. 1915 at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 74 of Mortgages, on page 607.

Which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said D. B. Bakke, Mortgagee, to Deposit Bank of Winona, Winona, Minnesota by written assignment dated May 21, A.D. 1915 and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota on May 25, 1915 at 10 o'clock A. M. in Book 75 of Mortgages, on page 156, and which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Deposit Bank of Winona, Winona, Minnesota to E. F. Krumdick by written assignment dated July 10, 1920, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota on the 21st day of November, 1923 at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 110 of Mortgages, on page 184.

And whereas the said E. F. Krumdick, the assignee and holder of said mortgage, on November 30, 1923 paid delinquent taxes upon the mortgaged property hereinafter described in the sum of Four Hundred and 34-100 ($400.34) Dollars; and whereas, the said E. F. Krumdick, the assignee and holder of said mortgage, has duly elected and does hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, under the terms and conditions of said mortgage and the Power of Sale therein contained; and whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of Seven Hundred ($700.00) Dollars, with interest thereon from the 18th day of May, 1921, at the rate of six per cent per annum and also the sum of $400.34 for taxes paid as aforesaid, with interest thereon from the 30th day of November 1923, at the rate of six per cent per annum; and whereas, the said Power of Sale has become operative, and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

NOW, THEREFORE, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the Power of Sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and covered by said mortgage, viz:

The North Half of the Southeast Quarter (N½SE¼) and the North Half of the Southwest Quarter (N½SW¼) of Section One (1), in Township One Hundred Fifty-five (155) North, of Range Forty-one (41) West, of the Fifth Principal Meridian in Minnesota containing 160 acres more or less according to the United States government survey thereof, in Marshall County and State of Minnesota.

Which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Marshall County, at the Front door of the County Court House in the City of Warren, in said County and State on the 2nd day of February, 1924, at 10 o'clock A. M. of that day at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash, to pay the amount then due on said mortgage and interest and the sum of $400.34 for taxes paid on said described premises, with interest thereon from date of payment, together with the costs and disbursements of such sale and Fifty Dollars attorneys fees included in the amount stipulated as attorneys fees in said mortgage in case of foreclosure.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of One Thousand Seventy-five Dollars ($1,075.00), which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain Mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Andrew H. Husebo and Esther Husebo, his wife, Mortgagors, to D. B. Bakke, Mortgagee, bearing date the 12th day of September, 1917, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Marshall and State of Minnesota, on the 25th day of September, 1917, at 10:00 o'clock A. M., in Book 80 of Mortgages, on page 511; which said Mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said D. B. Bakke, Mortgagee, to Deposit Bank of Winona, Winona, Minnesota, by written assignment dated the 26th day of September, 1917, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds, on the 13th day of October, 1917, at 10:00 A. M., in Book 86 of Mortgages on page 101; and thereafter and on or about August 1st, 1923, the articles of incorporation of said Deposit Bank of Winona having been duly amended and that thereby, among other things, the name of said Deposit Bank of Winona was changed from Deposit Bank of Winona to Deposit Bank and Trust Company and that said Deposit Bank and Trust Company is now the Assignee and Holder of said Mortgage and the debt secured thereby; and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said Mortgage or any part thereof:

Now, Therefore, Notice Is Hereby Given, That by virtue of the power of sale contained in said Mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said Mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said Mortgage, viz:

The Southeast Quarter (SE1-4) of Section Thirty four (34) in Township One Hundred fifty six (156) North of Range Forty two (42) West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, in Marshall County and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Marshall County at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Warren in said County and State, on the 20th day of February, 1924, at two o'clock P. M., of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of One Thousand Seventy-five Dollars ($1,075.00), and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and Fifty Dollars ($50.00) Attorney's fees, as stipulated in and by said Mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

SYNOPSIS.—On the banks of the Wabash stand Texie Colin and Jack Warhope, young and very much in love. Texie is the only daughter of old Pap Simon, rich man and money-lender. Jack is the orphan bound boy of Pap Simon who had foreclosed a mortgage on the Warhope estate. At first Texie and Jack talk sadly of Ken Colin, the girl's missing brother. Then Jack says that in ten days his servitude will be over, that he will ride out into the big world to seek his fortune. Both know what that will mean to them. Texie and Jack talk of the red lock of "Red Colin," inherited by Ken. And Jack says he's coming back as soon as he finds gold in California. Then arrives the new preacher, Rev. Caleb Hopkins. Pap Simon introduces the villagers to the new preacher, who was a college mate of Ken. At supper at the Colin home the preacher tells how the boy killed a gambler and disappeared. His father attributes Ken's fall from grace to his red lock of hair. Then Pap Simon has a sort of stroke, brought on by reading a letter from Ken, "somewhere in New York," who curses his father on his death bed. A postscript by another hand says he is dead. At the village store and post office Loge Belden, a newcomer, says he saw the new parson with his arm around Texie. Jack licks him, shoots a pistol from his hand and makes him say he was mistaken. The preacher and the villagers go fishing. Jack discovers the preacher carries a six-gun.

—7—

"Mud haul—" he muttered; "is it far?"

"Mile 'r so," grunted Uncle Nick, as he stooped over the seine, helping spread the meshes straight.

"I really should not remain away from the study so long," the preacher pursued. "I must have time to collect my thoughts somewhat, as I understand I shall be expected to make a few remarks at the—festival tonight."

Uncle Nick leered around at him.

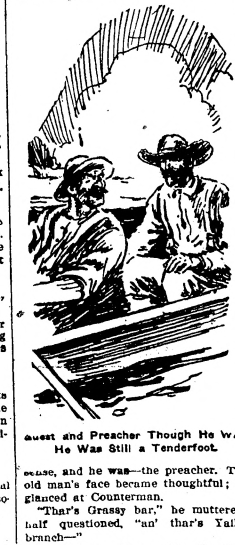
"An' them remarks will be few, parson. I 'low y'u nee'n' t' worry y'ur head about them remarks none. Ther'll be another scent in the air t'night."

The old man winked at Counterman, trudged off down the sandbar to the live box, dragged it up along the edge of the stream and hitched it to the stern of the skiff. He had hardly finished when Jack and Counterman came with the seine.

The preacher came last, his eyes still drawn irresistibly up the river.

"Is there not some—other place?" he asked, reluctantly taking his seat in the bow, "some—nearer place?"

Uncle Nick studied him out of his deep-set eyes. He was a guest, in a sense, and he was—the preacher. The old man's face became thoughtful; he glanced at Counterman.



Guest and Preacher Though He Was, He Was Still a Tenderfoot.

"Thar's Grassy bar," he muttered; half questioned, "an' thar's Yaller branch—"

Counterman spit out into the river—a preliminary that usually had to be attended to before he spoke.

"Grassy bar," he repeated thoughtfully, peering over his shoulder at the preacher in the bow, as if he too had caught something of Uncle Nick's considerations. "Hit's better f'r spearin'. An' Yaller branch"—he glanced up at the sun; swept sky and river with his puckered one eye—"t'day's too glary. Hit ain't deep enough. No, I'm f'r Mud haul. They'll be scrooched in thar thick as bees around a haw tree."

The decision seemed final. The preacher glanced again up the river, and pulled the faded straw hat farther down over his head as if afraid of sunburn.

"Is it dreadfully—muddy?" he mumbled.

Guest and preacher though he was, he was still a tenderfoot. Counterman's raucous laugh exposed the huge wad of tobacco between his jaws. Nick took the unlighted pipe from between his lips, and his roar wheeled a wisp of sand snipe that happened at the moment to be glancing up the bar.

"Not as muddy as it—sounds," he chuckled, grabbing a match out of his trousers pocket.

That settled it. The preacher, apparently resigned to whatever further hardships fate might have in store for him, sat watching the shore line, with its witchery of lapping water, its bordering fringe of pebbles and white shells, draw slowly by.

The fishermen landed. The live box was hitched to a stake as before, the half-reluctant preacher left to hold the brail stick, while the others rowed out and around the fifty yards or more of murky water that lay between the point and the shore.

Hardly had the circuit been completed when it began to be apparent that Counterman's judgment would be amply justified.

The final haul proved to be much the best of the day. The good fish were dropped into the live box, the others tossed back into the river, and the fishermen set about preparing to return to the village. The brail sticks were united, the seine rolled up, and the woodsman walked up the bar for the boat.

He stooped over the craft, possibly recalling the circumstance of the six-gun concealed in the frock coat; laid his hand to the bow to push it off; straightened after a moment, walked some distance farther up the bar and stood gazing intently toward the narrow upper end of the arm of water where it disappeared under the overlapping branches of trees and tangled vines. Snugged away under the tangle, in a manner that must have made it practically invisible, except from that one point, lay a small houseboat.

A trifling circumstance enough—houseboats were common on the Wabash—but why there? The place was dark and dank, the bank boggy, and there was no spring short of Alpine island. The woodsman turned and motioned to his companions.

They had been watching him and at his sign came trooping up the bar—the preacher fagged and lagging behind—and gathered around him. Following the direction of his finger, they peered in under the overlapping trees.

Counterman grinned around at the others after a moment and jerked his thumb back toward the skiff.

"S'posin' we row up an' pay 'im a visit? I'd like t' see a man with sich an eye f'r a campin' place."

Uncle Nick tossed up his chin, grunted, and led the way down the bar to where he had beached the boat.

The preacher appeared to be considerably vexed at the further prolongation of a trip that was growing more and more irksome to him. It might almost have been imagined that a frown ruffled the studious primness of his brow. But as the skiff glided up the narrowing arm of dead water, he appeared to get himself in hand again. The frown disappeared and his air became that of a man only mildly interested in what went on about him.

There is little formality among men of the river and the woods—a fine enough delicacy, though, when big moments come. They brought the bow of the skiff up under the stern of the secluded little craft and climbed aboard.

There was both a fore and an aft door to the tiny cabin that occupied the whole mid-section of the deck, but no windows on either side. Both doors were heavily padlocked—a further proof of the owner's exclusiveness. On the dusty boards there were a number of footprints, some of them—curiously enough—made by a boot that must have been stylish, even dainty.

Uncle Nick leaned upon the railing of the forward deck and prodded his pipe, while the one-eyed fisherman gnawed himself a fresh chew from a sweaty plug that he clawed up out of his overalls pocket, the two of them generalizing on the circumstance of stylish boot tracks, no windows and padlocked doors.

The preacher had joined in the discussion and was just telling them, in his half-bored drawl, that it might be some naturalist taking unusual pains to preserve his specimens, when Jack Warhope, still standing in the skiff and holding it to the stern of the houseboat, picked up one of the shiny boots from the preacher's stack of clothes in the bow, and, hidden from the others by the cabin, pressed the heel of it down hard beside one of the heel-prints on the dusty after-deck.

The two prints coincided perfectly.

CAPTER VI

Mettle of the Minister.

The Buckeye schoolhouse stood on the extreme west side of the village. A plain one-room building of the general type of the period—paint gone; weather-beaten; no belfry; no ornamentation; three windows on each side; a chimney at the back; a battered door in front.

The "festival" in celebration of the close of school was a distinct event at Buckeye.

The pupils' desks had been removed and placed around the walls. A long table extended across the rear. The rest of the room was clear, except for the great box stove that stood in the center of the floor, rusty red, and huge enough and deep enough to swallow a stick of cord-wood whole.

Everything was free, each family that sent children to school bringing a well-filled basket. And such a feast as the housewives of the neighborhood furnished forth could have been found nowhere else in the land except there in the great Flatwoods that lay, warped and wild, along the north bank of the upper Wabash.

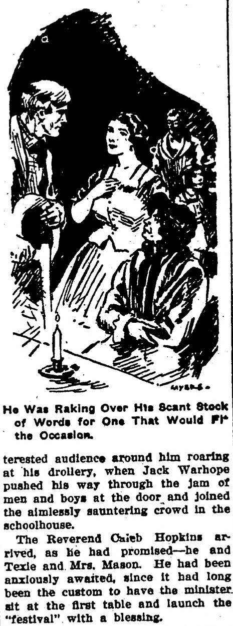
Uncle Nick was there—which meant that things were not likely to drag, for he was the wisest, wittiest, and, as he himself said, "the no-accountest" man in the Flatwoods—a free-and-easy, happy-go-lucky, catch-as-catch-can sort of man.

He had been a great hunter and border ranger in his time, having come to the Wabash country when it was still the frontier and the Indians made it dangerous. Nearly forty years before, a man in his pride and prime, he had been one of Harrison's most trusted scouts, and had borne an honorable part in the grim and deadly struggle that took place in the early dawn upon that swamp-bound point of woodland on the Tippecanoe.

Aunt Liza, the "other half" of Uncle Nick, was there too. But if he had an oversupply of jollity in his disposition, she had a far greater oversupply of grimness. Aunt Liza was the one person in the world on whom Uncle Nick's wit fell flat.

In all matters pertaining to their few acres of bottom land, and in their cabin home a little way up Eagle Hollow road, her word was law.

Uncle Nick was perched upon one of the desks, his back to the wall, his eyes twinkling merrily, already an interested audience around him roaring at his drollery, when Jack Warhope pushed his way through the jam of men and boys at the door and joined the aimlessly sauntering crowd in the schoolhouse.



He Was Raking Over His Scant Stock of Words for One That Would Fit the Occasion.

The Reverend Caleb Hopkins arrived, as he had promised—he and Texie and Mrs. Mason. He had been anxiously awaited, since it had long been the custom to have the minister sit at the first table and launch the "festival" with a blessing.

Zeke Polick—likewise by ancient custom, a sort of self-appointed master of ceremonies—his sharp hatchet face scrubbed shiny with home-made soap perfumed with sassafras, pounced on the preacher and hurried him to the head of the table, with Widow Mason on his right, Miss Martin, the teacher, on his left, and as many pupils as possible lined up along the sides of the bounteous board.

The preacher's remarks were short—simple; concise; every sentence packed with thought; every gesture alive with grace. No speaker could have asked a better audience. He had been well heralded and expectation was at keenest pitch. And no speaker ever better improved his opportunity. The speech ended while the audience was still hungry to hear more—a trick that many a less brilliant speaker might well copy. He turned back to the table and raised his hand. The two long rows of youngsters stood in awkwardly decorous expectancy. The low tones of the solemn grace fell softly impressive; the minister resumed his seat; a deep breath swept down the two rows of hungry urchins; and—the "festival" was on.

A good length of the candles in the windows had burned away when Jack, sauntering aimlessly in the crowd, found himself, for the first time that evening, face to face with Texie, where she leaned over Mrs. Mason's chair.

The girl looked up and smiled. He was raking over his scant stock of words for one that would fit the occasion—words being about the hardest things he had to reckon with—when the young preacher, suave and affable, by odds the most popular man in the house, joined the group.

Through the mind of Jack Warhope flashed a comparison between the preacher and himself. The comparison showed dead against him. For the first time in his life he was half ashamed of his ungainly clothes, of the great limbs, the massive chest and shoulders—the "six-foot-three" of bone and brawn upon which the Flatwoods had exhausted its utmost imagination, its ultimate romance, when it bestowed the title: Big Jack.

> "The preacher slowly raised an arm and pointed toward the open door.

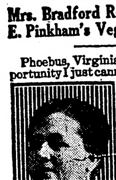
Mrs. Bradford Recommends Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound



Phoebus, Virginia.—"Having this opportunity I just cannot refrain from saying a word of praise for the Lydia E. Pinkham medicines. I have used them as occasion required for twenty years, and my three sisters have also used them, and always with the most gratifying results. During the Change of Life I had the usual distressing symptoms—hot flashes, insomnia, etc.,—and I am pleased to testify to the wonderful results I obtained from the Vegetable Compound. I heartily recommend it to any woman and I will be pleased to answer any inquiries that might be sent to me through the publication of my testimonial."—Mrs. H. L. BRADFORD, 109 Armstead Street, Phoebus, Virginia.

Consider carefully Mrs. Bradford's letter. Her experience ought to help you. She mentions the trials of middle age and the wonderful results she obtained from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you are suffering from nervous troubles, irritability, or if other annoying symptoms appear and you are blue at times, you should give the Vegetable Compound a fair trial. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Old Doc Hadley Jones, slightly absent-minded at times, was an enthusiastic gardener. One sultry summer evening, when warnings of a shower rumbled in the west, Mrs. Jones called to him and, getting no response, found him struggling with a hose.

"Hadley," she demanded, "when are you coming in to supper?"

The gardener wiped the perspiration from his forehead and pointed to the horizon.

"Goodness, dear," he replied, "I must get the garden watered before that storm breaks."—American Legion Weekly.

Condensed Stories of Happenings of the Week in Minnesota

Rochester—A skunk farm, financed by local capital, is Rochester's latest industrial project.

Austin—More than 1,500 Austin children received gifts from the Austin Elks' lodge at the lodge's annual Christmas party.

Rochester—A new $125,000 passenger station is to be built here by the Chicago & Northwestern railway, according to word received from headquarters of the railroad at Chicago.

Detroit—Burglars broke into the Elliott-Taylor-Wollenden company department store Sunday, blew open the safe and got away with $15,000.

Warren—Bankers of this city are getting behind the movement to boost for alfalfa. The new slogan in Marshall county is "get acquainted with alfalfa."

Duluth—The population of Duluth at the opening of 1924 is 111,282, an increase of 12,365 or 12.5 per cent over the census of 1920, according to a population survey just completed.

Austin—Plans for the proposed new bridge near the center of the city, which is to carry two state highways over the Cedar river, have been placed before the city council.

Henderson—The Henderson flour mill was totally destroyed by fire of undetermined origin. The loss is estimated at $12,000. Other property was threatened and the LeSueur fire department was called.

Albert Lea—A new exclusive residential district is being added to Albert Lea with the rapid purchasing of lots in a newly opened addition, Shoreland Heights. The new plat is situated on the north shore of Fountain Lake.

Montgomery—W. L. Sery, 43, for 16 years a publisher of the Montgomery Messenger, died as the result of an accident which took place two months ago, when a firearm carried by a small boy was discharged and the bullet struck him in the shoulder.

Dodge Center—Definite arrangements have been made by the Dodge county farm bureau to get a university extension division specialist to carry on clothing project work among Dodge county farm women in the coming year.

Park Rapids—Asher Hinds was rescued from drowning in Fish Hook lake, near here, by skaters when the automobile he was driving ran into an air-hole. The car sank in about 40 feet of water and Hinds was pulled out of the water by skaters.

Blue Earth—More than 150 passengers escaped injury when Northwestern westbound train No. 25 left the rails. The baggage car plowed up the rails and stopped only when part of it was over the river embankment. Had it gone over other coaches probably would have been dragged with it.

Owatonna—Eleven Steele county communities are taking part in dairy extension work, through which the county farm bureau hopes to better feeding methods and milk and butter-fat production during the coming year. Dairy experts from the state university are instructing unit heads who are in turn instructing the farm clubs which they represent.

St. Cloud—Oscar Omundson, St. Cloud, was killed and Albert Walleck seriously injured when their auto ran into Great Northern train No. 1, westbound, between St. Cloud and Waite Park. According to trainmen, the engine already had passed the crossing and the car ran into the tender, being ground to pieces beneath the wheels.

St. Paul—Trapped in a closed automobile, a man plunged through a rail on the Sixth street bridge, St. Paul, fell 125 feet, the car turned over in air and nosedived into the mud flats, and the driver was found later, still in his seat, clinging to a piece of the steering wheel. He was Otto T. Hagna.

Duluth—Another achievemnt, the last of the illustrious life of Captain Alexander McDougall, internationally famous ship builder, inventor and financier who died here last spring, has just been brought to light with the issuance of a patent for a peat recovering and drying unit by which the swamp deposits would be turned at one process into high grade fuel in either briquet or powdered form.

Wells—One man is dead, another is believed to be mortally injured, while a third is in a serious condition as the result of an automobile accident between here and Easton. The three young men, all from Wells were en route to Blue Earth. Will Stevens, who was pinned under the machine after it went over a high embankment, just outside the city limits, was killed. August Wetzel, is in a hospital, expected to die. Jacob Schortz, driver of the car, received several broken ribs and injuries to his back. He will recover.

Fulda—While looking over some corn raised on her farm a few days ago, Mrs. B. K. Barr, residing a few miles from here on the Worthington road, found an ear that looked exceptionally good. She carried it into the house and soon afterward heard of the corn show at Sioux City, and decided to enter her prize ear of corn. Mrs. Barr received a letter from the corn show management, with which was inclosed a check for $200, the first prize for the best ear of corn exhibited at the show. Tests made at the exhibit showed Mrs. Barr's corn to be of almost 100 per cent germination.

Duluth—The installation of officers of the Duluth Builders Exchange will take place Jan. 23 at the Spalding hotel.

Winona — Louis Speltz of Altura was re-elected president of the Winona County Farm bureau at the annual meeting here.

Windom — Owing to the extremely mild weather conditions prevailing here many farmers are plowing and seeding. The roads are in excellent condition all over the country.

Duluth—Northern Minnesota reports the largest Christmas tree industry on record.

Willmar—At the annual meeting of the Kandiyohi County Red Cross chapter, Mrs. John Dale was named as president and Mrs. Lars Jorstad secretary.

Tracy—Judging of exhibits took place at the Tri-County Corn Show here. Displays were declared to be of a better quality than those shown at previous corn shows.

Windom—The corn stalk disease has appeared among the herds of cattle in Great Bend township. Some valuable cows have died. Warning has been sent out for farmers to watch closely the cattle which are fed on corn stalks in the field.

Marshall—At a meeting in Ghent a co-operative creamery company was formed with Jacob Stassen as president and Hector Hofman, secretary. It is the third co-opeartive creamery to be organized in Lyon county within a few months.

Fergus Falls—The Fergus Falls high school debating team defeated Pelican Rapids high in the first debate of a state series here. The subject was: "Resolved, that Immigration Should be Prohibited for a Period of Five Years." Pelican Rapids took the affirmative.

Pipestone—J. F. Reed, president of the Minnesota Farm Bureau Federation, was the honored guest of the Pipestone County Farm bureau association at its annual meeting here. He delivered the principal address at the meeting following a lunch at noon.

Owatonna—Steele county residents will pay $32,000 more in taxes the coming year than ever before, an abstract of the tax list completed by County Auditor George Griffin shows. The abstract shows a total county tax of $749,207.21. The tax to be paid by the city of Owatonna totals $283,861.52.

Alexandria—Fire destroyed three business establishments here, with a loss estimated at $10,000. The fire began in the Hawthorne Meat Market, and, faned by the first winter storm of the season, spread rapidly to the Strickler Paint and Wall Paper store, from where the blaze ate its way to an adjoining warehouse.

Owatonna—Owatonna residents are hopeful of being able to obtain the location of the Tri-County Tuberculosis sanitarium which is to be built to house patients from Steele, Freeborn and Faribault counties, when the commissioners named by the three counties and the state health authorities visit the city.

Albert Lea—In a championship contest for the ear of corn with most rows and most kernels, four men have held first place within 10 days. The first ear showed 1,006 kernels, the next 1,036, third, 1,129, and then came the "daddy of the corn fields" to date, with 1,170 kernels. The number of rows on an ear has jumped from 24 to 26.

Fairmont—Employees of the Southern Minnesota Oil company will take renewed interest in the firm as a result of a substantial Christmas gift handed them. This consisted of one share of prefered stock, valued at $100, for each employee who has been with the company eight months or more.

Virginia—George Hoffbauer of this city, who devotes his energies to hunting and trapping wolves, the enemy of the frontier farmers of St. Louis county, in the first two months of the present fall and winter, has bagged no less than 15 wolves. Several of them were among the biggest and most valuable (dead or alive) found in the county in a number of years.

Owatonna—Enrollment in the Owatonna music club, community choral society, has been temporarily closed with 116 names. The club is preparing to give its first public concert late in January or early in February. It will provide Owatonna with its first vehicle for massed vocal singing since the Owatonna Choral association was disbanded several years ago.

Clinton—The oldest residents of this section, who settled here in the early '70s, cannot remember a December that the weather was so uniformly mild and pleasant as December of this year. The ice on the sloughs and lakes, which froze over the early part of the month, has gradualy grown thinner, and many places on Big Stone lake are now open.

Havana—At a meeting of the Havana Creamery association here it was voted by the board of directors to dissolve the corporation in January and to reorganize the company. Plans were made to build a new creamery to replace the one destroyed by fire Dec. 3, at an estimated cost of between $15,000 and $20,000. Donations aggregating $10,000 were raised in one hour from 36 farmers and members of the board toward the proposed creamery.

Jackson—The Okabena Press has suspended publication after an existence of more than six years. A farmers' union organization has taken over the printing plant and will issue publications in the interest of the organization in the future.

Rochester—When Glenn Ball was burned to death, leaving a widow and 11 children on a small farm that was mortgaged, Tai Williams, county commissioner, started a campaign to lift the mortgage of $700 by Christmas. The fund was raised easily and reached a total of $849.

Winter Find You Tired and Achy?

Do You Suffer Constant Backache—Feel Old and Worn Out? Then Follow the Advice of These Good Folks!

DO YOU get up these winter mornings feeling tired, weak—achy all over? Are you so lame, stiff and miserable it seems you can never get back in trim? Does your back ache with a dull, constant throb? Sharp, rheumatic pains torture you at every step?

Then you should be giving some attention to your kidneys!

Winter, you know, is danger time for the kidneys. That's because exposure to colds and chills wears down body resistance and throws an unusally heavy strain on the hard-working kidneys. The kidneys are apt to fall behind in keeping the blood-stream pure, and poisons accumulate that well kidneys would have filtered off.

Racking backaches come with stabbing pains; muscles and joints ache constantly; there are headaches, too, with dizziness and distressing kidney irregularites. Nerves are "jumpy"; one feels old—all worn out.

Give your weakened kidneys the help they need. Use Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Doan's have helped thousands. They are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

"Use Doan's," Say These Good Folks:

JOHN FENNERN, Bottineau, N. D., says: "I had attacks something like lumbago which came from taking cold. I had been so lame in the muscles of my back and hips during these spells that I have hardly been able to bend and if I lifted anything, my back hurt as though it would break. My back ached so badly right over my hips, I could hardly get any rest at night. Doan's Pills, however, have always cured me of these attacks in a day or two."

MRS. JO. FIRLUS, Carrington, N. D., says: "My back ached and pained constantly and I could hardly get through my housework. I went about all doubled up and wasn't much good for anything. My head ached and my kidneys acted too freely. I read of Doan's Pills, and after taking them the trouble was ended. I can't recommend Doan's too highly."

Teach your child internal cleanliness

THE mother who permits constipation in her baby or older child is risking the health, even the life of her little one.

It must be remembered that an infant is helpless, unable to tell that constipation is making its life miserable. Consequently the mother must be able to recognize signs of constipation in her baby. Convulsions, night terrors, grinding the teeth in sleep, feverishness, fretfulness and such symptoms—any of these may indicate that poisons from baby's stagnant intestine are flooding the little body.

In older children biliousness, coated tongue, loss of appetite warn the mother that constipation is present. Constipation, unchecked in youth, may lead to serious consequences. In constipation, according to intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness, including the gravest diseases of life.

Washing Cleans Only The Skin

Laxatives Only Aggravate Constipation

The mother should not resort to laxatives. A noted [illegible] says that laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favor Lubrication

Medical science, through knowledge of the [illegible] gained by X-ray observation, has found in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

More Important Than Soap and Water

Not a Medicine

Nujol is used in children's and general hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water it is harmless.

Let your infant or child have Nujol regularly and see rosy cheeks, clear eyes and happiness return once more.

Get rid of constipation and avoid disease by adopting the habit of internal cleanliness. Take Nujol yourself as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

Starboard.

The word starboard is probably derived from steer board, and became identified with the side of the ship to the right of a person at the steer board and facing the bow. The word larboard was used to designate the side to the left. This term has been superseded by the word port, in order to avoid the confusion caused by the similarity of names.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE

MOTHER! GIVE SICK CHILD "CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP"

Harmless Laxative for a Bilious, Constipated Baby or Child.

Constipated, bilious, feverish, or sick, colic Babies and Children love to take genuine "California Fig Syrup." No other laxative regulates the tender little bowels so nicely. It sweetens the stomach and starts the liver and bowels acting without griping. Contains no narcotics or soothing drugs. Say "California" to your druggist and avoid counterfeits! Insist upon genuine "California Fig Syrup" which contains directions.—Advertisement.

"Augean Stables."

Augeas, king of Elis, kept a herd of three thousand oxen in his stables, which had not been cleaned for thirty years. Hercules performed the labor of cleaning them in one day by turning into them the rivers Alpheus and Peneus. This is the account given in various mythologies. The phrase is used to signifiy an accumulation of corruption almost beyond the power of man to remove.

THIS WOMAN RELIEVED FROM SUFFERING

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. A Remarkable Story

Dover, Del.—"I wish every woman would take your wonderful medicine as it has done so much good to me. I had cramps and faint spells and very bad pains. One day I was over to my neighbor's house and she told me I ought to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. So I went to the store on my way home and got a bottle, and took the first dose before supper. I have been taking it ever since, and you can hardly believe how different I feel. I had just wanted to lie in bed all the time, and when I started to brush up I would give out in about ten minutes. So you know how badly I felt. I used to go to bed at eight and get up at seven, still tired. Now I can work all day and stay up until eleven, and feel all right all the time. My housework is all I do in summer, but in winter I work in a factory. I have told a good many of my friends, and I have had three come to me and tell me they wouldn't do without the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. SAMUEL MURPHY, 219 Cecil St., Dover, Delaware.

Black and White in Ladies' Apparel

The disappearing waistline characterizes the collections of mid-season dresses that Paris dressmakers have prepared for their private trade. These have no waistline—no girdle, no belt and no ornamentation of any kind to mark the dividing line. At first sight, writes a fashion correspondent in the New York Tribune, these extremely straight dresses appeared to be trying, but tested on many types of figures they have been found generally becoming.

This form is particularly well adapted to the street dress or coat with heavy bands of fur on the edge of the skirt to weight it. It also adapts itself to the apron style of dress, where one robe seemingly slips on over another.

Handsomely embroidered and appliqued evening dresses frequently have no waistline. In fact, many of the newest models now recall the famous tube dress of pre-war days launched by Paul Poiret and the dominating factor in the fashions of 1911-'12.

The Parisienne evinces great interest in black and white at the present time. Many of the loveliest winter dresses have a touch of ermine as a relief from their sombre black. It is also quite the fashion to use the lingerie finish at the neck and sleeves, which may be of fine lace, a fold of white georgette crepe or of white organdie. Many black dresses that are bordered with fur, notably with caracul or broadtail, have an inside finish of white lingerie; that is to say, real lace, hand embroidery, hand-drawn organdie or handkerchief linen.

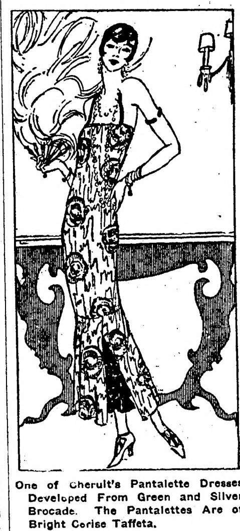
Touches of White on Black.

Floating panels of white are often half concealed under dresses which have overlapping fronts. Tiny pipings of white and inside facings are also much noted on black dresses.

White bids fair to be a big winter vogue at the Southern resorts. Many of the new tailored suits are in white velours de laine and white broadcloth trimmed with brown or black fur. Vionnet has a charming coat, prepared for Monte Carlo, in which the entire upper part is of sealskin and the skirt and lower half of the bell sleeves are of white broadcloth.

Madeleine et Madeleine show a lovely new white suit in their most recent collection. This suit is trimmed with lapin ombre, a beautiful new finish in rabbit fur which gives it an appearance of dark sable. Across the front of the jacket is a deep border of this dark brown fur. It forms a sort of triangle shape just where the front laps. This house has another white cloth and fur combination in the form of a full-length coat of broadcloth. The fur is introduced in the form of a band of lapin ombre on the long scarf of white broadcloth, which passes around the neck and falls the full length of the coat back and front.

White satin evening dresses are being shown with borders and bands of black fur. White crepe de chine and white crepe marocain dresses often show touches of black in the form of inside panels or linings to scarf-like cravats which twist about the neck.



One of Cheruit's Pantalette Dresses Developed From Green and Silver Brocade. The Pantalettes Are of Bright Cerise Taffeta.

White velvet evening dresses are embroidered in jet and brilliants, in imitation of onyx and diamonds.

The pure white shoe is rarely ever seen, but black and white combinations are much liked. White silver slippers show onyx buckles, giving the effect of black and white in evening shoes.

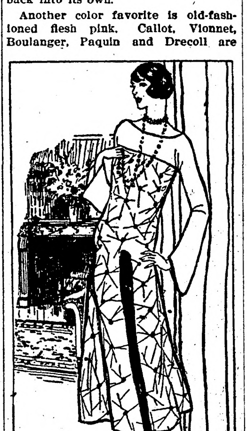
But black and white by no means monopolize the stage. Blue is again to be taken up strongly in Paris. After almost a surfeit of beige and brown, blue comes as an interesting relief. Callot and Chanel are responsible for the introduction of this color. Both of these important makers have used considerable blue in their recent collections. Women formerly fond of blue and who have been deprived of the pleasure of matching their eyes through fashion's decree in favor of black or brown have joyfully gone back to cerulean blue.

Blue Satin or Crepe de Chine.

Chanel is making afternoon dresses in a lovely shade of medium blue satin or crepe de chine, and at the same time is lining fur coats to match in the same celestial shade. Callot has a great many evening dresses in blue. Jean Patou also uses blue and Drecoll reports great success in this color.

Paris manufacturers of dress accessories, such as Judith Barbier and Natalie Bourseul, are selling blue fans and corsage ornaments and blue head dresses. Shoemakers are taking many orders for evening slippers in deep blue. Many blue kid slippers and low cut shoes are being worn on the street. The navy blue serge suit is coming back into its own.

Another color favorite is old-fashioned flesh pink. Callot, Vionnet, Boulanger, Paquin and Drecoll are showing lovely new evening dresses in flesh pink velvet and satin. Many of these are embroidered in brilliants in widely scattered all-over patterns.



Type of Embroidery Used by Patou. Entire Dress, Except for a Shallow Yoke and Sleeves, Is Covered With This Needlework.

Callot also embroiders flesh pink in gold. There are many lovely new dresses developed in flesh pink chiffon and sheer lace dyed to match. One has always associated the idea of pale pink with young girls, but matrons have taken it up now and it is the next favorite to pure white.

Metal cloths are again very popular and many of the most elaborate evening dresses are being developed in metal, usually in the hammered patterns in preference to the ordinary brocade. The plain or fulgurante, or brilliant surface metal cloths are also in high favor. The hammered metal cloths are often in patterns taken from the Renaissance, appearing almost like the work of goldsmiths, imitating as they do the effect of repousse and hammered metals. Gold and silver embroideries on laces and nets are again noted as well as the all-metal laces.

Cloche Hat Holds Popularity.

The cloche hat is perennial in Paris. Nothing yet has been found to displace it in popularity. Everybody prophesied that it could not last and yet it seems more in favor than ever. Women with shingled hair, of which there are a multitude in Paris, find that the cloche hat is the only form that can be becomingly worn. The straight brim hat or the upturned brim is hideous with the shingled head. One wonders if women will ever go back to long hair again.

It seems as if every woman were shingled nowadays, the grandmother, mother and daughter, ranging from five years to seventy-five. More conservative women, who dare not because of their husband's or some other male's prejudice to crop the hair, are buying shingled wigs. It is a perfect madness in Paris. The cloche hat must survive as long as the shingled head remains the fashion.

Practically every actress in Paris has her hair cut. Almost every role is played with the shingled head. The leading role in "Carmen," in "Louise" and in all the modern drama is interpreted by bobbed-hair actresses. In fact, the whole idea of feminine beauty seems to have changed. A woman glories now in the shingled head rather than in long hair.

Lanvin is showing, in addition to her many cloches, hats that are frankly Oriental turbans. Other turbans with curious brims which turn up look almost like Egyptian and Hindo-Chinese ornaments which adorn the sacred temples. Evidently Lanvin has taken her millinery inspiration from this source.

For School Wear.

Woolen velours frocks for girls of college and high school age are being made in an effective blending of plain color and plaid. The skirt, for example, will be dark green and the blouse a novelty plaid in green, red and orange.

COLONIAL STYLE BUNGALOW NICE

Five-Room Dwelling That Appeals on the Score of Utility and Attractiveness.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD

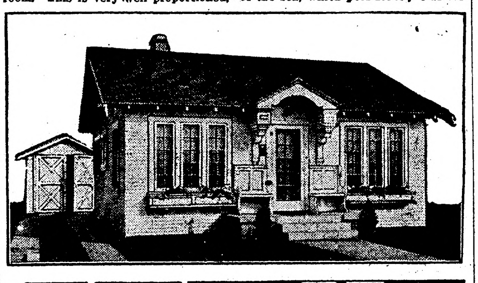
Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

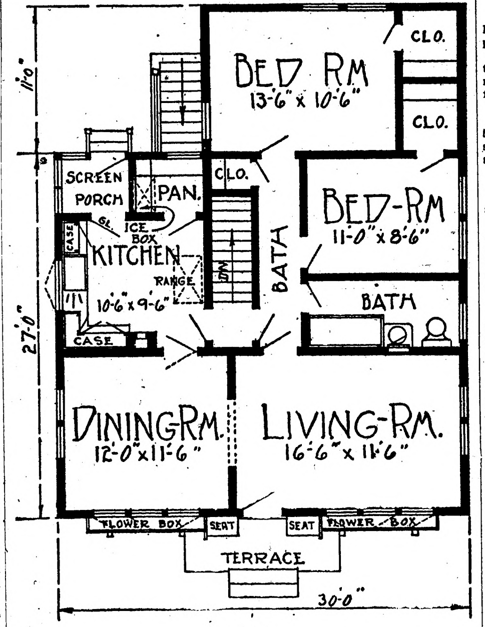
Here is a simply designed bungalow which creates a most favorable impression in the beholder, principally because intelligent use has been made of simple structural elements. It is simple as to floor plan, being practically square, with the extension of a bedroom at the rear which could be eliminated if the bungalow were to serve a smaller family. The portico is one such as was a favorite with early American colonial builders, and no one can deny that it "dresses up" the entire bungalow in a satisfying way. Then, too, the small terrace below it is equipped with quaint side seats, and there are the long-paned windows with flower boxes below, which add yet another decorative touch to the exterior. The whole structure is finished in white, adding greatly to its pleasing appearance.

Inside we are directly in the living room. This is very well proportioned, and connected by an open or french double doorway with the dining room. These two rooms occupy the entire front of the bungalow; the living room connecting with the two bedrooms and bathroom through a hall, and the dining room giving access to the kitchen. In the latter there is an unusually good arrangement of shelving, with cabinet shelving on either side of the sink at the side window, and the range, ice box and pantry so placed as to save the steps of the housewife. At the rear of the kitchen is a small porch. Glassed or screened in, it would make a most excellent place for those lighter tasks which could be carried on away from the kitchen.

The material of which this house is constructed is such as any building material dealer can readily supply, and the plan simple anough for any local carpenter to follow. In fact, a carpenter should feel stimulated by the well-balanced portico; it is so nicely balanced and proportioned that it would be a pleasure for him to do the simple joining and wood-working necessary to make it. Many of the better class of building material dealers are probably able to supply one so like it as to satisfy every requirement. The siding is laid a bit narrower than is common, to create the proper effect. The eaves are not enclosed or corniced, and in their present shape would serve well in warmer climates better than in the North. In colder places it might be well to have them boxed in. The roof could be laid with cedar or composition shingles, and a dark green or maroon color, or a variegated tone, would be very pleasing. Observe that the garage, if any, should match the general design of the bungalow to make the whole more pleasing.

The interior finishing of this house ought to carry out the simplicity and good taste of the exterior. We might reasonably expect a plain neutral wall finish in living room, dining room or kitchen, using the plain textured plastered effects now so much in vogue, tinting with paint and calcimine, or using wall paper. The woodwork could very well be finished in white or cream enamel, and the bedrooms could use some of those cheerful cretonne-looking wall paper patterns that go so well with a Colonial type of bedroom. Splay-backed chairs in the Windsor pattern and mahogany four-poster beds would go well here. As the house is small, over-stuffed furniture would not be suitable, except in one or two pieces, like a chair or davenport.





Floor Plan.

11 STATES IN NETHERLANDS

Where Rivers Are Above the Peoples' Heads and Cities Below Sea Level.

The United Netherlands, familiarly known as Holland, the name of two of its 11 states, says a bulletin of the National Geographic society, "is a country where the rivers run, so to speak, over the heads of the inhabitants."

Populous cities rest below the level of the sea, which persistently clamors for admission. Cultivated fields are buried under unproductive sand and marshes are drained to become fertile gardens. Islands have been attached to the continent by ropes of sand.

"Holland, without quarries, has constructed stately buildings and substantial cities and faced miles of seacoast with protecting pavement; almost without timber, she has built navies which have disputed the sea with the most powerful fleets."

Would Rather Have Two.

The house surgeon at a private asylum met one of his male patients in an irascible mood.

"What's the matter with you this morning, my man?" he asked.

"I want to get married, doctor," was the reply.

"Get married?" repeated the doctor. "How old are you?"

"Fifty-seven," replied the lunatic.

"Then I suppose you would like a wife of about fifty?"

"Well, sir, if it's the same to you," muttered the would-be bridegroom, "I'd rather have two at twenty-five."

A MAN OF INTEGRITY

A physician who reaches out to benefit humanity leaves a record behind him that is worth while. Such a man was Dr. R. V. Pierce, founder of the Invalids Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y. He was an eminent physician, a leading and honored citizen, known for his honesty and executive ability. His study along medical lines, and his knowledge of the remedial qualities of herbs and plants led to the discovery of his wonderful herbal remedy, Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription, the woman's tonic which has had the greatest number of supporters for the past fifty years. It is just the herbal tonic required if a woman is borne down by pain and sufferings at regular or irregular intervals, by nervousness or dizzy spells, headache or backache. Favorite Prescription can now be had in tablet form as well as liquid at most drug stores.

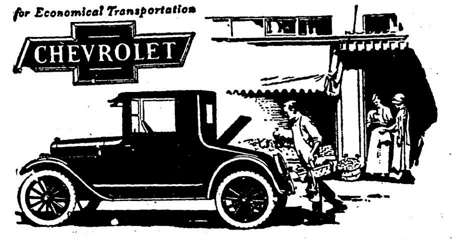
CHEVROLET



The Economical Quality Car

Chevrolet prices are not the lowest on the market, yet Chevrolet economical transportation averages lowest in cost. This average cost considers the purchase price, interest on investment, depreciation and all operating and maintenance costs.

A detailed comparison with any other car in the low priced field will convince you that Chevrolet is the best buy because of its superior quality and because the purchase price includes full equipment.

More than a million Chevrolets are now in use. Twelve huge plants are now building them at the rate of twenty-five hundred per working day. Nearly one-half million Chevrolets were bought in 1923—far exceeding in number the sales of any other quality car.

Thus, our statements have the strongest possible backing, namely, the faith and patronage of the American people who know automobiles and know practical values better than any other people on earth.

Let any one of our seven thousand dealers show you our seven types of cars and explain how easy it is to get one and enjoy its use.

Secret of Stradivari Discovered by Chemists

Modern science at last appears to have rediscovered the secret of making superviolins—a secret that was understood by Stradivari and other old masters of the Seventeenth century, and that was buried with them.

Analysis of the thin wood sections of the violins of the old masters has been made by a European chemist, who has discovered that the secret of their tune lay in imparting an artificial uniformity to the wood, an effect produced by an oil treatment, combined with months of sun-drying and a special varnish.

Violins constructed according to the methods which the laboratory revealed are said to match the old master instruments in tone.—Popular Science Monthly.

Turned Down.

He—I'm a man of the old school.

She—Well, I dismissed that class some time ago.

It isn't worth while to be so awfully individualistic as to openly differ with everybody.

Wasted Instructions.

A fussy diner called the waiter and said: "Now, waiter, I want a nice mutton chop. Give my compliments to the chef and ask him to do his best for me. Tell him to put a little piece of fat on the top when he grills it, so that it will melt and make it juicy. I don't want the chop underdone—nor do I want it burnt up—just nicely done, with plenty of gravy. Now, you'll tell the chef exactly what I require, won't you?" "Yes, sir, certainly," replied the waiter. Then he blew down the speaking-tube, and shouted: "One chop, Joe!"

Foolish Thought.

Mrs. Junebride—Somehow I can't help suspecting that you're leading a double life.

Her Husband—Nonsense! Only a single man can afford a double life.

All Stale.

"Why don't you write some problem novels?"

"I can't think of any novel problems."

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

COPYRIGHT BY WESTERN NEWSPAPER UNION

MR. YAK

"Yes, I've been asked to tell my story," said Mr. Yak, "and I am indeed glad to oblige.

"I like to think that people are interested in knowing about me, and I always like it when children come to the zoo and when they ask what I am.

"It is nice to have people interested in one.

"Of course it is nice to have people interested in two or three, but when I said that it was nice to have people interested in one I meant it the way I've heard creatures talk—I meant that it was nice to have people interested in me. I said 'one' because that sounds better and more superior.

"Well, we come from Tibet and Central Asia, and we are hitched to wagons in the home country and carry people about in these wagons or carts.

"We also carry bundles and we pull plows. We do a lot of work at home.

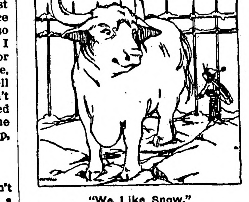
"Yaks give milk and from our hair splendid ropes can be made, and because they saw us hitting flies so successfully with our tails many of our tails have been made into fly swatters.

"If we meet an enemy we fall on him to show him that we think he ought to go down before us.

"But for the most part we're very good natured. Weather doesn't bother us. In fact we like the cold, cold weather which some of the animals don't like at all. And we're happy in the zoo.

"We believe that lace and all sorts of wonderful things have been made from our hair, and you will admit that it is handsome hair.

"It has been said somewhere that women had beautiful hair, but goodness me, Yaks have beautiful hair, too. Women shouldn't keep all the glory to themselves.



"We Like Snow."

"Now Methuselah, the Giant Tortoise, shows a good disposition. He enjoyed the last snowstorm we had immensely. He didn't complain and long for other weather.

"King Cobra is changing his skin for a new one, but he is so cross. Last year when he did this they had a horrible time with him.

"The old skin didn't come off across his eyes and the keepers tried to help him with it, but gracious, he'd try to attack them, and they had to keep on their guard.

"As it was they ran great risks in what they did. But they were brave and splendid about it.

"King Cobra didn't really deserve such attention, for they were trying to help him and he was ready to kill them!

"That wasn't very decent of him, was it?

"Well, they forgave him and put bushes with twigs and underbrush in his cage so that he could rub against these and help pull off his skin, but he wasn't grateful in the least.

"He is certainly a bad creature.

"But here I am, a good creature, and many of us have given rope, and food and lace and cloth and fly swatters and no end of gifts to people, as I've said.

"I am grateful for my happy home in the zoo."

"Well," said Billie Brownie, who had been listening to Mr. Yak's story as you may imagine, "I do like you, Mr. Yak. I like your name. I like everything about you. Is there anything else you can tell me?"

"I believe I forgot to tell you the most important thing of all," said Mr. Yak.

"I belong to the oxen family. And of course, perhaps I should not be boastful about not being a weather grumbler on the cold days when others are complaining, for when Yaks are free and wild they live near places where there is always snow."

"Well," said Billie Brownie, "I like the winter too, and now that we're speaking of it I will sing you my winter song which I made up on my way here this afternoon. I do hope you will like it, and if you do it will be a great honor if you will allow me to dedicate it to you.

"That means, Mr. Yak, that I would like to put on the top of the song that it is TO MY GOOD FRIEND MR. YAK."

"Oh, indeed such a compliment," said Mr. Yak.

"Wait until you see if you like the song," said Billie Brownie, and then he sang this song.

Mr. Yak, the Polar Bear and I
All feel so very, very spry
For we like the cold which [illegible]
[illegible]ing
And we're happy that the [illegible]
we're facing.

And Mr. Yak thought the song [illegible] fine!

Art thou poor, yet hast thou golden slumbers?
O, sweet content!
Art thou rich, yet is thy mind perplexed?
O, punishment.

USES FOR LEFT-OVER PASTRY

In the best of organized kitchens there will be an occasional bit of left-over pastry and one is often puzzled as to how to utilize it. Here are a few suggestions:

Tarts are delicious tidbits and may be prepared "on purpose" or with left-over pastry. Roll out very thin and cut with a biscuit cutter into rounds, in even numbers. Take half of the rounds and with a large thimble make small holes in the circles of pastry—three makes an attractive number. Bake the tarts, spread jelly on the circles and cover with the perforated ones.

If one has less time, roll and cut the pastry into triangles and squares, sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon and bake. These may be served with a hot sauce as dessert if liked.

Pastry shells may be made to use filled with preserves, jams or with sweetened fresh fruit. Roll the pastry and line muffin pans or cover the bottoms, then bake.

Roly Poly.—Roll out a small circle of pastry, making as large a one as the size of the family warrants. In the center place chopped apples and raisins, using three times as much apple as raisins. Roll up, place in a deep baking dish and cover with enough brown sugar to sweeten; add a tablespoonful or two of butter. Pour over boiling hot fruit juice, cider, or boiling water to cover, and bake in a moderate oven for at least an hour. Usually there will be sauce enough to serve; if not, serve with cream and sugar.

Cheese Straws.—Roll the pastry very thin, cover with grated cheese, season with a dash of cayenne; soft cheese may be used but will need much seasoning. Fold up in thirds, folding in the cheese, roll again into a long, narrow sheet, cut into narrow strips and bake in a hot oven until brown.

Small, fancy cakes may be made by baking the pastry cut into circles; put them together with a filling of cream, or jam or jelly. Cover with whipped cream and serve for a most dainty dessert.

One of the advantages of living long in the world is that one steadily acquires an increasingly interesting point of view. Even in middle life one begins to see for one's self the evolution of things. One gets a glimpse of the procession of events, the march of the generations.—Cornelia A. P. Comer.

SEASONABLE DISHES

These dishes are served and enjoyed any time of the year, but are especially favored during the winter months:

Chili Con Carne.—Take one-half pound of fresh lean and fat pork, one and one-half pounds of round steak, three good-sized onions, two cans of kidney beans, one chili pepper, two quarts of tomato, salt, pepper, and chili powder—two or three tablespoonfuls.

Chop or grind the meat—it is much nicer chopped—brown the meat with the chopped onions, then add all the other ingredients except the beans, which will be added just long enough to heat thoroughly. Cook slowly for three hours, stirring often. Remove the chili pepper after the dish is well seasoned with it, or it may be too hot.

Sweet Potatoes, Southern Style.—Boil or steam three medium-sized sweet potatoes. Pare, slice and place in rows of overlapping slices in a shallow baking dish. Add to one-half cupful of water one cupful of brown sugar and two tablespoonfuls of butter, mixed with one-half teaspoonful of cinnamon. Cook these for ten minutes until sirupy. Add one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt and pour over the sliced potatoes in the baking dish. Bake covered 15 minutes, then bake five minutes until lightly browned. Serve from the baking dish.

Braised Duck and Apples.—Truss a duck as for roasting and place in a roasting pan with slices of bacon under and over it. Place around it six small sour apples cored and pared and six medium-sized potatoes. Sprinkle over all a teaspoonful of dried herbs. Pour over one cupful of rich, highly-flavored stock, cover the pan and let cook in a moderate oven for two hours. Serve with very fine chopped celery mixed with one-fourth as much grated horseradish. Heat the relish for a minute in the braising pan, after the duck and apples have been removed.

Curried Vegetables.—Cook one cupful each of potato and carrot diced, in salted boiling water. Drain and add one cupful of peas and curry sauce. Prepare the sauce by cooking two tablespoonfuls of butter and a sliced small onion until yellow, add two tablespoonfuls of flour mixed with salt and pepper and one-half teaspoonful of curry powder; pour over one cupful of milk. Cook until smooth, strain over the vegetables, sprinkled with parsley.

The house in Portland, Me., where Longfellow was born, had become, a number of years ago, a tenement in the poorer part of the city, mostly inhabited by Irish. A teacher in Portland was giving a lesson on the life of the poet. At the end of the hour, she began to question her class. "Where was Longfellow born?" she asked. A small boy waved his hand vigorously. When the teacher called on him, his answer did not seem to astonish the rest of the class, but it was a cold shock to her. "In Patsy Magee's bedroom," he said.

Malic Acid.

Malic acid is present in generous quantities in apples, pears red and white currants, blackberries and raspberries, quinces, pineapple and cherries. Citric acid is found in lemons, limes, oranges, gooseberries, strawberries and raspberries, and tartaric acid predominates in grapes, though it exists in other fuits. Salicylic acid is sparingly present, probably in the form of menthyl ester, in plums, cherries, currants, grapes and strawberries, raspberries, etc. Boric acid is said to be present in oranges and lemons.

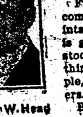
THE BASELESS FEAR OF FINANCE'S POWER

By WALTER W. HEAD

President American Bankers Association.

We speak of "coal"; immediately we visualize a pile of black lumps. We speak of "wheat"; in our mind we picture a golden field of grain or perhaps the farmer's load en route to market.



Walter W. Head

Finance is not a commodity. Being an intangible thing, it is greatly misunderstood. It means one thing to some people, another to others.

By reason of this mystery surrounding it, it is too frequently feared, and financiers assailed as enemies of the public good, using their power selfishly to advance their own purposes.

No nation or people ever achieved greatness without the assistance of finance,—accumulated capital, managed and directed by those skilled in the handling of wealth and money. Accumulated resources are represented at times by hoards of gold, but more frequently by ships, herds, and other productive agencies.

America measures her resources in terms of billions of dollars. She has thousands of prosperous homes, myriads of well developed villages and towns, thousands of miles of railroads and paved roads. This has been possible through the investment and use of capital or wealth created and accumulated by the citizens.

When the early pioneers first traveled over the prairies, which are now rich and productive fields, their resources consisted only of a productive soil, a healthful climate, and the sunshine and rain necessary to the growth of vegetation.

As the early settlers wrought and produced and prospered, they saved. These savings they invested in the tools of production — plows, harrows, binders, stores, railroads, banks and manufacturing enterprises. THESE SAVINGS "FINANCED" PROGRESS. The building of the railroads was the great outstanding contribution of finance to the development of the West. The West owes a debt of gratitude to the investors in eastern states who ventured to invest their money in virgin territory, making possible development by the use of their accumulated resources.

Bank deposits represent very largely the savings of the people. The loans they make possible are employed in productive enterprises. The development of the agricultural communities depends very largely upon the credits extended by investors in other communities. The development of municipalities is possible very largely through the sale of municipal bonds to investors in other places. All this is the work of finance.

WAGES HERE AND ABROAD

THE American factory worker is receiving wages the purchasing power of which is above the wages paid in any other country of the world. The British Ministry of Labor has made a computation of the amount of food which the wages of workers in different cities of the world will purchase. In the following table the purchasing power of wages in London is taken as 100, and the purchasing power of wages in other cities is shown as percentages of this figure. The table indicates that the worker in New York can buy more than twice as much food with his wages than can the worker in London, while the worker in Berlin or Vienna can buy only a little more than half as much with his daily wage as the worker in London, or only one-fourth as much as the worker in New York.

An important factor in the differences between the rewards of workers is that the productivity of the American worker has been greatly increased through the use of large investments of capital for machinery.—Journal of the American Bankers Association.

WHAT AGRICULTURE NEEDS

A recent summary of the agricultural situation grouped the needs as follows:

1. Increased and balanced production
2. Increased understanding of credit facilities
3. Increased market facilities
4. Better business methods

The Agricultural Colleges are working out production problems, the banks the credit problems and co-operative associations appear to be greatly improving marketing facilities and business methods.

Starboard.

The word starboard is probably derived from steer board, and became identified with the side of the ship to the right of a person at the steer board and facing the bow. The word larboard was used to designate the side to the left. This term has been superseded by the word port, in order to avoid the confusion caused by the similarity of names.

URGES BANK ADS IN NEWSPAPERS

Banker Tells National Association They Are Essential Aids to Business Building.

PRESENTS PRACTICAL PLAN

Savings Bank Division of the American Bankers Association Offers Prepared Newspaper Advertising Service to Cover a Year's Campaign.

More newspaper advertising by banks as a business builder was strongly urged at the recent convention of the American Bankers Association by W. R. Morehouse of the organization's Savings Bank Division. He backed up his plea with definite action to stimulate advertising by savings banks by calling the attention of the members to a prepared newspaper advertising service developed by his division comprising copy to meet their requirements for a year's advertising schedule.

"It is my firm conviction that banks can use newspaper advertising with great success," Mr. Morehouse said. "Newspapers go into the homes—by their use as a medium the people of a whole community may be reached in a single day. Because a bank cannot directly trace a large volume of new business to newspaper advertising does not prove that the medium is ineffective as a business-builder.

"The fact that there are certain kinds of newspaper advertising which do not produce good results ought not to brand the medium as ineffective, any more than the fact that because a certain booklet or certain business-building letter fails to pull would warrant you in branding all booklets and all letters as non-productive mediums.

How to Advertise

"Newspaper advertising must be attractive and easily read if it is to produce good results. If the subject presented is not to the point, is too deeply involved for the average mind to grasp readily, is too full of big and uncommon words, it is only natural that it will not be read. If bank advertising is to accomplish its purpose it must be very simple.

"Discuss only the subjects which will make it easy for the public to patronize your bank. Advertise your bank, its financial stability, its officers, directors and stockholders and you will build prestige and strengthen public confidence in your institution. Enumerate the various kinds of service your bank is prepared to render. It has been my experience that the public is on the lookout for information about banks, banking methods and the kinds of service rendered by banks. For quick results I am a firm believer in sticking to subjects which have a direct bearing on banks, banking methods and service, until the public has become better informed about banks and the wide variety of services rendered by them.

A New Plan

"If you have not been successful with newspaper advertising try this plan. Confine your advertising within the scope of banking and especially enumerate the various services which your bank is prepared to offer. Boil down every advertisement to one hundred words or less, preferably less. Use headings which arouse interest at a glance. For example, a head 'INTEREST FROM DATE' will inspire action on the part of persons with idle funds to deposit because interest starts from the time savings accounts are opened. A heading 'PROTECTION FOR YOUR VALUABLES' will inspire action on the part of persons in need of protection."

HOW TO CATCH FAKE STOCK SALESMEN

Some state bankers' associations are distributing an investor's questionnaire with the idea of protecting purchasers of securities from fake stock salesmen.

"Whenever you are solicited to purchase stock or other securities, use this questionnaire before investing any of your funds," says one of these. "The questionnaire was compiled to protect the small investor and to emphasize the necessity of investigating thoroughly every investment proposition before placing any money therein. When you have been furnished with the information called for in this questionnaire, take it to any one of the banking institutions in your community and get its opinion of the stock offered. If the stock salesman refuses to fill out this questionnaire, have nothing more to do with his proposition, as it is evident that he is fostering a fraudulent promotion."

The questionnaire pins the salesman down to answering the following questions:

Date ....
Name of company ....
Name of salesman ....
Kind of stock offered ....
Total issue of stock ....
Stock given for property ....
Stock given for good-will ....
Stock given for patents ....
Are you taking any Liberty Bonds? ....
If so, at what price? ....
Amount of cash needed ....
Par value of stock ....
Market price of stock ....
Has the stock a ready market? ....
If so, where is it listed? ....
Is the stock accepted by banks as collateral for loans? ....
If so, what banks have accepted it to your knowledge? ....
What are the present net earnings? ....
Bank references ....
Names of officers ....
Former occupation ....

Chicago — Damage estimated at $1,000,000 was done by fire at the Whiting plant of the Standard Oil company of Indiana.

Fort Smith, Ark. — First efforts to extinguish a gas well fire in the Alma, Ark., field, by flooding the surface opening of the well with live steam, had failed to conquer the flames.

Chicago — Six families missed their anticipated New Year dinners at home when fire swept through an apartment building on the south side. The damage was estimated at $50,000.

Atlanta — Search for the four convicts who made a daring escape from the federal penitentiary here had been extended over a wide area but officials admitted they were on a "cold trail."

New York — John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has published his first book and will receive royalties at the regular rates. The volume, entitled "The Personal Relation in Industry," has been issued by Boni and Liveright.

Louisville — Taps have sounded for Adrian T. Kendall of Shively, Ky., who was reputed to have fired the last shot of the war between the states. Mr. Kendall, for 33 years an active member of the Louisville bar, was buried in the cemetery at Shively.

Baltimore — The sidewheel steamer Emma Giles, with 35 passengers aboard, was rammed by the freight steamship Steel Tracer in a heavy fog off Sandy Point, Chesapeake bay. The passenger vessel was badly damaged, but no one was injured.

Chester, Va. — Three distinct earthquake shocks were felt here in the Boyce section of Clarke county, near here, according to reports. The report said the houses were shaken, dishes rattled and many residents were badly frightened. No property damage has been reported.

Mandeville, La.—The Laundry, shoe shop, bakery and printing office of the Chinchuba deaf institution at Chinchuba, near here, were destroyed by fire. Bucket brigades managed to prevent the flames from spreading to the dormitory. There was little excitement among the 61 deaf and dumb children in the dormitory when they were aroused an hour before daylight and all left the structure without injury.

Effingham, Ill. — Christina Meeker, aged 18, an employe of a glove factory at Sigel, had her entire scalp torn off when she was attempting to replace a belt which slipped from a shaft. Her hair caught in the machinery, removing the scalp from above her eyes to the back of her neck. She was rushed to a hospital where the scalp was replaced. It is thought she will recover.

Pawtucket, R. I.—The old Slater mill estate including the first cotton mill established in America, has been purchased for $45,000 by the old Slater Mill association, which will convert the mill into a textile museum. The estate includes, in addition to the cotton mill established on the banks of the Pawtucket river in 1790 by Samuel Slater, four stores, a three story brick mill more than 100 years old and a structure formerly used as a brass foundry.

Brookline, Mass. — George E. Henry of Winchester, philanthropist and one of the prisoners who revolutionized the lumber industry in New Hampshire, where his family owned the entire town of Lincoln, valued at $18,000,000, died of heart disease here.

New York — James Montgomery Flagg, artist, has announced his engagement to Miss Dorothy Virginia Wadman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Wadman of Mamaroneck, N. Y. Private announcement was made by Mrs. Wadman at a birthday party given her daughter by an aunt, Mrs. Arthur Davis of Norton, Mass.

Chicago—A direct cable service between Chicago and London will be opened, with a capacity of 100 messages an hour and five minutes' transmitting time, it was announced.

Buffalo—The pony trucks on the engine of a section of the Twentieth Century were derailed when the train struck an automobile stalled on a crossing at Forks, near here.

—Philadelphia—Brigadier General Smedley B. Butler of the Marine corps, who becomes director of public safety of this city next week, rejected a $5,000 motorcar appropriation by city council and asked instead that the money be used to purchase eight specially built bandit chasing machines. "They will be of more use to the city than a new car for me to ride around in," he said.

New York—Nine months old Ferdinand Gluck, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gluck of Albany, arrived from Hamburg on the steamer Minnekahda, the youngest passenger probably to cross the Atlantic alone. Ferdinand was ill when his mother was forced to return to the United States several months ago, and was left with his grandmother in Germany. Cared for by the Minnekahda's stewardess, he cut two teeth on the way over.

Sports

New York—In a statement in which he comes to the defense of boxing, the law under which it operates and the officials responsible for enforcing that law, Tex Rickard took occasion to deny that he had a monopoly on the boxing game. In the statement Rickard showed how he has turned over a sum close to $600,000 to charity during the past year. In addition to that he has paid $300,000 to the state of New York and nearly $1,000,000 to the federal government on tax from the bouts.

London—The Jockey club has issued the official entry lists for the spring handicap races and the Ascot gold cup event next June, giving evidence that these meetings will be of exceptional interest because of the appearance on English tracks of an unusually large number of celebrated foreign horses. Entries for the Ascot cup are hailed by the racing experts with special enthusiasm, for this race furnishes the prospect of seeing Zev, Papyrus, Epinard and Grey Lag, in addition to several other of the world's best known horses, in a mighty struggle. Sporting writers here are doubtful whether such a remarkable field has ever been provided for the running of the cup.

Foreign

Honolulu — More than 1,000 Filipinos of Honolulu participated in a parade and patriotic exercise in honor of Jose Rizal, Philippine hero, who was executed by the Spaniards in 1896. The occasion was the anniversary of Rizal's birth.

Genoa, Italy—The United States cruiser Pittsburgh has arrived here. The cruiser was visited by the civil and military authorities as well as by the personnel of the American consulate. The American colony has planned numerous social functions ashore for the officers and men.

Dublin—John Finnerty, the American lawyer who is representing the claimants of Irish republican funds in America, interviewed Eamonn de Valera and Austin Stack in jail here preliminary to taking evidence in the case before the American consul general here in accordance with the New York supreme court's order.

Paris—The text of Premier Poincare's reply to the German governments's memorandum is being sent to Brussels for perusal by M. Jasper, the Belgian foreign minister. The German memorandum outlined the administrative and economic questions respecting the occupied territories that the Berlin government wishes to discuss with the Allies.

Berlin—The first food sent by Major General Henry T. Allen's relief committee in America for the relief of German children arrived and was welcomed with the greatest good will by all. It is hoped that the organization will be able to feed 1,000,000 children who are in the greatest need. H. T. Brown, of the Quaker organization, has arrived in Berlin to prepare for the control and distribution of the relief.

The donor of the money is Edward Filene of Boston, who offers it for a competition among French, English and Italian writers for the best practical plan for the general maintenance of peace.

Rome — "Mussolini is one of the few statesmen who understand the tragic situation of Germany," said Gustav Stresemann, the former German chancellor, now at Lugano for recreation, when interviewed by Italian newspapermen. "The speech Premier Mussolini, delivered in the senate on the German question," added Dr Stresemann, "produced an excellent impression in Germany and the reich is very grateful to him. It is true, as he said, that so long as Germany is not put in a position to face her pledges it is lunacy to expect a solution of the reparation policy."

Tegucigalpa, Honduras — Rear Admiral J. H. Dayton, who arrived at Ama[illegible] the Pacific coast, aboard the U. S. S. Rochester, came to Tegucigalpa and had an interview with President Gutierrez.

London—A Lloyds dispatch from Flushing, Holland, says the American steamship West Erral, bound from Havre for Antwerp, reports it has gone ashore on the Raan bank. The message gave defective steering gear as the cause. Assistance has been sent. The West Erral, a vessel of 3,334 tons, arrived at Havre from New Orleans Dec. 19.

LABORER ADMITS DOUBLE MURDER

Victims Killed Near Jamestown While Sleeping---Crime Occurred Fonr Months Ago

Bismarck, N. D.—Joseph Berger, 25, formerly of Richardton, N. D., driven by a haunting conscience and pressed to unburden his story to Chief of Police Chris Martinson of Bismarck, confessed here Sunday that he killed two unidentified men in a strawstack in the northwest part of Jamestown more than four months ago.

He slew them, he said, because they had laughed at and "kidded" him, with perhaps robbery also a motive. After Berger had repeated his story and it was checked, he was taken to Jamestown late Sunday by authorities.

Berger, declared a moron by Chief of Police Martinson, had been racked by a vision of the two dead men whom he partially covered with straw after he had slain them with an iron pump handle. He wandered to many places since the murder was committed between August 18 and September 4, 1923, and finally arrived in Bismarck Friday night penniless and out of work. Relief which followed his telling of the story of the murder was succeeded by a realization of possible life imprisonment for first degree murder, a new worry for him.

There was no hesitancy on the part of the farm hand in telling his story to Chief of Police Martinson and State's Attorney Russell Chase of Stutsman county Sunday, after he had previously confessed to Martinson. In pantomime he convinced the officers. Given the iron pump handle picked up near the scene of the murder and brought here by Jamestown officers, he stood up in a little room in the police station and went through all the motions of the slaying.

The two unidentified dead were found September 4 by L. L. McCarty, who had gone to the strawstack to get some hay. He saw the shoes of one man sticking out and then uncovered the bodies. Both were found with their heads crushed by a blunt instrument, their pockets rifled and a blood-stained iron pump handle nearby. Both bodies were badly decomposed and were unrecognizable by the many persons who sought to identify them.

Identity of the two men whom Berger confessed he slew may be established through checks issued by Frank Fletcher, farmer, to harvest hands.

SUBSTITUTE FOR MELLON BILL

Democratic Tax Reduction Bill Increases Exemption of Family Heads.

Washington.—A Democratic substitute for the Mellon tax revision program is before the congress and the country. It presents a sharp departure from the Mellon plan in favor of the small taxpayer and to the disadvantage of the large taxpayer.

Sponsored by Democrats of the house ways and means committee, who made it public through Representative Garner of Texas, the ranking minority members, the substitute provides:

An increase in the exemption of heads of families from $2,500 to $3,000 and single men from $1,000 to $2,000.

A reduction of the normal tax rate to 2 per cent on incomes of $5,000 or less; to 4 per cent on incomes from $5,000 to $10,000 and to 6 per cent on incomes in excess of $10,000.

A maximum surtax rate of 44 per cent on net incomes in excess of $92,000, but with the surtax rate to start at $12,000 instead of $10,000 as proposed by Secretary Mellon.

An advance of 33 1-3 per cent on earned incomes with this provision extended to include farmers and small merchants who combine capital with personal services.

A more sweeping repeal of the so-called nuisance taxes than is proposed in the Mellon bill.

MUCH POULTRY IS ENTERED

Best Quality of Birds Ever Shown at State Exposition.

Fargo, N. D.—Proud kings of the barnyard kingdoms of North Dakota were strutting their most lordly airs and sending forth their clarion challenges at the Fargo auditorium Monday, the opening day of the North Dakota State Poultry association's annual show.

The show is entirely free, there being no admission charge whatever.

There is an unusually fine showing of turkeys at the show this year, both the Mammoth Bronze and the Holland Whites being represented. There are all kinds of chickens, almost every strain of the more popular barnyard breeds being well represented.

There are also a large number of ducks and geese of various varieties, guinea fowl, pheasants, and other odd and interesting varieties of the fowl kingdom.

Convicts Escape from Prison.

Bismarck, N. D.—Prison guards were searching the river bottom west of Bismarck Monday for Arthur Smith, 38, and William R. Burgman, 22, who escaped from the state penitentiary, east of Bismarck, Sunday night. John Longre, third member of the gang attempting escape and believed to be the ringleader, broke a leg dropping from the wall and was picked up by the guards. Burgman, who is believed to have executed Longres' plans, used a butcher's saw, which was obtained in the butchershop to saw off two bars.

TO INVESTIGATE TAX PROBLEMS

Legislature to Get Findings of Six Sectional Commissions, Nestos Announces

Bismarck, N. D.—Six commissions to serve various sections of this state will be named by Governor R. A. Nestos to consider means of reducing the tax burden, and after these bodies have completed their work, smaller commissions will be asked to present recommendations to the next legislature, Governor Nestos announced here.

When asked concerning his attitude on the request made by Minot business men for the appointment of a state-wide commission to study the tax problem, in addition to the school finance commission as authorized by the legislature, Governor Nestos said that he had reached his decision after conferring with numerous persons in Minot, Grand Forks, Fargo, and in the smaller towns and villages in the state.

Against State-wide Body.

"I am glad to find that there is so keen an interest in this subject everywhere and a disposition to study this problem in a practical manner," the governor said. "In the past there was too much of a disposition to cry 'high taxes' but to refuse to listen to a suggestion of the reduction in expenses either in the township, school district, village, city, or county; but last year a great majority of the people discovered that after all the taxes for state purposes take but a small part of each dollar of the taxes paid and that more than four-fifths of all taxes are used for paying expenses of local and county governments, and of schools in the community where each taxpayer resides. Because the tax problem is 'largely a local problem,' and because the state commission to study the problems would involve such an expenditure of time and money that but few men could afford to serve on such a commission, and because I have concluded the tax problem is 80 per cent a local problem anyway, I am going to encourage the creation of about six commissions in various parts of the state who can then devote time and study to this problem during the winter and spring without any great outlay for expenses, analyzing with care local expenses that influence limitation of levies and the possibilities of cutting down government expenses."

When the six commissions have reported, the smaller commissions will be selected, Governor Nestos said. A report will then be prepared during the fall months which shall sum up the best conclusions of the six reports. It will then be presented to the next legislative assembly, he added.

It is expected that the governor will announce the members of the commissions in the near future.

DR. VOSS WINS VOLE PRIZE

Hettinger Man Wins Vold Prize in Playwriting Contest.

Fargo, N. D.—Dr. Carl Voss, of Hettinger, is the winner of the Vold-Playmaker prize in dramatic composition, offered through the Dakota Playmakers of the University of North Dakota for the best full length play submitted by any resident of the state. The award is the $50.00 offered by Mr. W. H. Vold, of Grand Forks, together with a $25.00 royalty to be received from the Dakota Playmakers upon the first production of the play. The author will also receive one-half of all subsequent royalties although the play becomes the property of the Playmakers, who will publish it in their series of plays. The judges for the contest were: Gertrude E. Johnson of the University of Wisconsin, Prof. Frederick H. Koch, director of the Carolina Playmakers of the University of North Carolina, and Carleton Miles, dramatic critic of the Minneapolis Journal.

Dr. Voss's play definitely depicts lift in the present-day town of North Dakota. The action, for the most part, occurs in the interior of the "Butter-Scotch," a candy store of the village. A political race for the United States senatorship forms the nucleus of the plot. The play is not without its romance. In addition it contains a convincing villain, a satisfying hero, and Julia Johannesen, an exceptionally well drawn character who contributes a wealth of splendid dialect. "The Butter-Scotch," as the play is entitled, was written during the author's period of war service in New York City and Arizona. In the words of one of the judges, "The play as a whole is an entirely worthy effort." Dr. Voss himself says, "I simply wrote the play to amuse myself with a slice of North Dakota life."

To Vote on Peace Contest Award.

New York.—The plan for universal peace which won the approval of the jury of award in Edward W. Bok's $100,000 prize contest was made public Monday by the American peace award. Simultaneously with the publication a referendum was started through newspapers, magazines, and public and private organizations which will put the ballot within reach of all the people of the United States. The ballots provide space for a answer to a question whether the plan chosen wins the approval of the voter.

THE NAKED KNIFE

SYNOPSIS.—On the banks of the Wabash stand Texie Colin and Jack Warhope, young and very much in love. Texie is the only daughter of old Pap Simon, rich man and money-lender. Jack is the orphan bound boy of Pap Simon who had foreclosed a mortgage on the Warhope estate. At first Texie and Jack talk sadly of Ken Colin, the girl's missing brother. Then Jack says that in ten days his servitude will be over, that he will ride out into the big world to seek his fortune. Both know what that will mean to them. Texie and Jack talk of the red lock of "Red Colin," inherited by Ken. And Jack says he's coming back as soon as he finds gold in California. Then arrives the new preacher, Rev. Caleb Hopkins. Pap Simon introduces the villagers to the new preacher, who was a college mate of Ken. At supper at the Colin home the preacher tells how the boy killed a gambler and disappeared. His father attributes Ken's fall from grace to his red lock of hair. Then Pap Simon has a sort of stroke, brought on by reading a letter from Ken, "somewhere in New York," who curses his father on his death bed. A postscript by another hand says he is dead. At the village store and post office Loge Belden, a newcomer, says he saw the new parson with his arm around Texie. Jack licks him, shoots a pistol from his hand and makes him say he was mistaken. The preacher and the villagers go fishing. Jack discovers the preacher carries a six-gun. A footprint on a concealed houseboat fits the preacher's boot.

Of a truth, the comparison between the two men could not well have been more striking. The young preacher was a very handsome man. The beard and spectacles, the mass of hair falling about his ears, seemed to invest him with an air of exquisite mystery—an air that has such power to compel the attention of women.

The young woodsman, on the other hand, with his uncouth and ill-fitting clothes, though far from plain, owed whatever attractions he possessed to his magnificent physique, a bold regularity of features, and an honest, open frankness—a man's man.

With a jerky, elaborate bow to Jack, the young preacher turned to Texie.

"I was just hunting for you, Miss Texie. They want you at the punch bowl."

The girl must have known the woodsman was about to speak to her. His face was as easy to read as the signs of spring. She glanced at him; dropped her eyes; laughed—a trifle uneasily he thought, knowing her so well—and walked away beside the minister.

The woodsman stood looking after them, a queer sense of emptiness in his breast—a man nursed by nature, untaught to juggle with the heart's emotions.

The voice of the gray-haired gentlewoman in the rocking chair recalled his straying thoughts.

"Aren't they a fine-looking couple?" she was saying.

"Uh-huh."

"As I look back over the years since we came to Buckeye, I remember that you and she have always been playmates. My dear husband so often used to speak of the beautiful companionship between you. Long association with one so sweet and innocent must have had a most ennobling influence upon you."

"It didn't hurt me none."

"Dear me! but you are laconic this evening, my lad. Do you always speak with such Spartan brevity?"

She might as well have said it in Latin. Jack was frowning hard in an effort to make out her meaning when Zeke Polick, officiously omnipresent, stopped at the old lady's chair.

The woodsman was saved. He walked away in the crowd, while Aunt Liza, a few seats away, never backward about airing her views, leaned over toward the postmaster's wife and, in hoarse half-whispers, laid down her vastly positive opinion on the very subject he had just escaped discussing.

"Ain't it a burnin' shame the way Texie lets the new parson carry on with 'er, an' leavin' Big Jack out 'n the cold!—an' him wo'th any two o' the parson, the best breath 'e ever drawed. She'll rue it. Mark my words, Hanner Polick, she'll rue it."

"Aw, shucks, Aunt Liza, you're jist jealous f'r Big Jack, him bein' about y'u s' much, an' Uncle Nick a-teachin' 'im all about the woods an' boxin' an' sich."

"Nick! Nick!"—it would be utterly impossible to commit to paper the ultimate contempt in the stifled tones—"f'r the lan' sakes! What d' y'u s'pose I care who the ol' man teaches 'is fool truck an' boxin' tricks to? She'll rue the day she draps a fine lad like Big Jack—bound though 'e be—an' takes up with a teetotal furriner, jist b'cayse 'e happens t' be a mite slicker-lookin' mebbe—though, f'r my part I don't consait 'im one iotum better-lookin' than Big Jack is. She'll rue it, Hanner Polick, she'll rue it. That parson hain't got all that palaver an' meechin' ways f'r nuthin' now there's the business of it. I [illegible]!"

The postmaster's wife had her lips set ready for her reply when there came a sudden commotion at the door. A strange man, tall and powerfully built, a slouch hat pulled low over his head, a swart face covered by a heavy stubble of black beard, and apparently just drunk enough to be dangerous, was roughly elbowing the crowd aside as he stalked back toward the table.

"Gimme some cake," he growled.

Miss Martin, trembling on the verge of panic, passed a plate of cake to him. He snatched off a piece, held it up contemptuously for a moment and then slammed it back with a force that dashed the plate from the timid little teacher's hand and scattered its contents all about the table.

"Aw, h—ll, gimme some cake!"

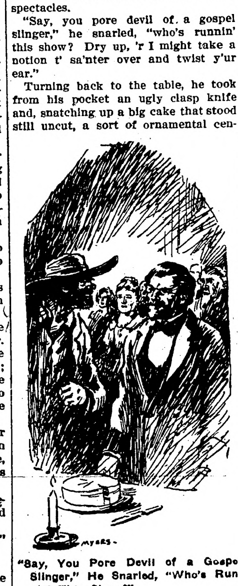
The preacher's shoulders lifted where he stood stooped among the women around the punch bowl. A spark of anger leaped into the eyes behind the spectacles, and his fingers curled toward his palms—a movement that the others were too intent upon the intruder to notice. But the flash passed with the instant; his shoulders drooped; to his eyes came back the look of peering benevolence.

"Friend," he called, still keeping his place among the women, "do you not realize that you are intimidating these ladies and spoiling this—ah—most enjoyable evening? Will you not please —"

The swart-faced man stared insolently at the preacher, a curiously bewildered look crossed his heavy face. He seemed to study the drooping shoulders, the studious eyes behind the spectacles.

"Say, you pore devil of a gospel slinger," he snarled, "who's runnin' this show? Dry up, 'r I might take a notion t' sa'nter over and twist y'ur ear."

Turning back to the table, he took from his pocket an ugly clasp knife and, snatching up a big cake that stood still uncut, a sort of ornamental centerpiece that had been selected for the honor because of its size and beauty, he hacked himself off an enormous slice.



"Say, You Pore Devil of a Gospel Slinger," He Snarled, "Who's Runnin' This Show?"

There is that about a naked knife—a certain cold, flinching thought of sharp steel drawn across warm flesh—that no other weapon inspires. Women gasped; children flew in terror to their parents; the desperado was left with the cleared center of the floor to himself.

He hacked himself off another huge section; gulped it down, laughed contemptuously, and slammed the rest of the beautiful confection at a window with a force that snuffed out a candle and shivered the glass to splinters; he glared around at the shrinking circle and smacked the knife against the palm of his hand.

"Say, ladies," he leered, his voice sounding harsh and strident in the dead silence of the room, "you and the youngsters nee'n' t' git panicky. I ain't go'n' t' huft you none. I jist sa'nter'd in t' git a look at a jay I've hear'n tell shoots up K'ntuckians."

The reference was too plain to be misunderstood. Not a man there but had heard of the shoot-up in the post office the evening before. Every eye turned toward Jack Warhope, standing a step or two in front of the shrinking circle—for the others had drawn back and he had not.

The eyes of the desperado followed the eyes of the crowd. Slouching across the floor till the two stood face to face, he stiffened and glared with dull savagery.

Texie, just back of the preacher at the punch bowl, leaned across the table and almost stopped breathing.

"I'm a K'ntuckian."

"I 'low they was right sorry when y'u left."

The reply stung the drunken man to madness. With unexpected viciousness he lunged and struck with the knife.

The woodsman sprang back, warded the blow with ready quickness, and whipped a vicious jab to the chin that pitched the intruder backward to the floor. But the blow, quick as it was, had come the flick of an instant too late, the knife had found his flesh, grazed the left side of his neck, ripped through collar and tie and gashed his shoulder half-way to the armpit.

Right there the Flatwoods showed its teeth. Fifty pistols leaped into view. Al Counterman, far back in the crowd, snatched a long-barreled six-gun from somewhere under his blouse and his lanky body stiffened to balance, a light in his one eye no man there ever seen before. Uncle Nick, with a vigor that set at defiance his weight of years, hurled younger men aside and sprang into the cleared circle.

But with so many women and children present pistols were out of the question. The desperado doubtless counted on this very fact. Stung to madness by the blow, he leaped up and lunged again with the knife.

This time he ran square into the preacher. With a readiness and courage hardly looked for in one of his cloth, he had stepped in front of Jack Warhope, his tall figure erect and superbly dominant.

Fifty flatwoodsmen, half crouched and straining forward, stood staring. The eyes of the dark-faced man stretched so wide that they appeared to bulge from their sockets. He lifted a dirty hand, brushed it across the wiry stubble of his face and, like a man half dazed, slowly shut the clasp knife and put it back in his pocket. Fifty flatwoodsmen relaxed, straightened; fifty pistols went back into hiding.

The preacher slowly raised an arm and pointed toward the open door. The desperado's eyes dropped; he rubbed his lips together as if to loosen them; turned and stalked from the room.

"Mebbe we ortn't t' let 'im git away," muttered a voice.

"Aw leave 'im go," grunted Uncle Nick, a curiously puzzled expression on his face as he gazed at the open door through which the renegade had gone. "He's licked—an' 'e ain't wo'th hangin'."

The old man turned away, still with the puzzled expression on his face, motioned Jack to a chair at the side of the room and began examining his hurt.

At that moment Texie slipped through the crowd, some white strips of torn tablecloth in her hand, and approached the woodsman. A smile twisted his lips, and the girl, dipping one of the strips in the cold water Aunt Liza brought, began to wash the blood from the gashed shoulder and make it ready to be bandaged.

The preacher looked on a moment, turned away and went back among the women who were gathering again about the punch bowl. The elaborate frock coat and stiff neck stock had again asserted themselves. The stoop had come back to his shoulders; the flare had left his eyes.

The girl, with fingers trembling, glanced through the open door into the square of darkness that had swallowed up the desperado; bent low over the bandages, and brought her face close to the woodsman's ear.

"Jack—he looked like—like—Ken would 'a' looked—!"

The woodsman started; looked into the square of darkness; and then into the girl's face.

"No, no!" he whispered. "Even if he was alive, he wouldn't 'a' come down that—low—!"

CHAPTER VII

Fancies and Fence Rails.

Jack Warhope made a one-handed job of his work among the feed-pens next forenoon, though it was a task for two. The young woodsman was immensely sensitive over the fact that he was a bound boy, though Simon Colin never obtruded it on him and seldom exercised any sort of authority over him.

He allowed him to live on in the cabin where his father and mother had dreamed their dream, to come and go as he pleased. The shrewd old money lender probably knew that the young man's high spirit would urge him further than any amount of exercised authority possibly could. And Simon Colin knew the race from which his bound boy had sprung.

From the first, Simon's treatment of his bound boy had caused his neighbors no small wonder—it was so unlike him. He had sent him to the village school till he outgrew it, and had allowed him to roam the woods without any sort of restraint. Far from discouraging his very aptitude for woodcraft, he had even loosened his heart-strings—and his purse-strings; an infinitely harder thing for him to do—to the extent of buying him the best double-barreled shotgun the market afforded, and a revolver of model and workmanship as fine as the art of revolver-making could produce at that time—two gifts on which the boy certainly cast no discredit.

"Why don't y'u try some day t' trap your fairy?"

Something to Think About

RUNNING TIDES

WHERE the oceans, seas and rivers are, where happiness dwells, where progress wends its way among the nations, the tides are running day and night in perfect harmony with the mysterious force which is prompting, swaying, driving and compelling every animate creature to action.

Slowly we learn that these unforeseen tides which seem so irresistible, so destructive to our fondest dreams and aspirations, can be made subservient to our wishes, and how by a stroke or two we may swim strongly with their currents and reach our goal.

To some of us the very thought of the constant motion of these tides suggests that they are opposing us, seeking to sweep us under, when in reality they are intended to develop our prowess to keep our heads above the waters and carry us safely on to our destination in spite of ourselves.

We balk at doing this or that because of opposition. We lack the courage to breast the flood. In a moment of despair we feel that it is preferable to destroy our ambitions and forget them than to make the fight.

It is pleasanter to sit by the fire and picture castles in the air than it is to erect them on a substantial foundation. And frequently, while we are thus idly dreaming, the tides pick us up and whirl us off to some destitute island. If in our temporary isolation we regain our senses and see ourselves as we really are, we summon our spiritual and physical strength and strike out boldly for the main land.

Whatever our sensations may have been in the grip of such emotions, if we have within us the right qualities, we are likely later in our careers to become more earnest, capable and patient.

The old egotism, narrow selfishness and churlish temper, which were pulling us down beneath the waters, have scurried away.

We have become more charitable, more neighborly, more inclined to pull with the tides than to oppose them when opposition is of no avail. We heed cheerfully the advice of our superiors instead of rejecting it with ugly words of protestation or rising up in rebellion against well-meant authority.

And this is as it should be. The secret of success is to know when to buffet the tides and when to float complacently with them.

'Tis Something to to Have Lived

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

'TIS something to have lived a minute,
However long the after-years,
An instant with an aeon in it,
Too glad for smiles, too sad for tears,
For in that instant heaven nears,
For in that moment God has found us—
Earth nevermore but earth appears,
Whatever shadows gather 'round us.

'Tis something to have lived a little,
One little hour, however small;
However brief, however brittle,
However soon our castles fall,
Oh, it is something to recall—
To sound the depths, to walk Parnassus,
In one short hour to live it all,
Though love may fail us, fortune pass us.

'Tis something to have lived completely,
If only for a moment's span,
Have lived a moment madly, sweetly,
Have lived the floodtide while we can.
Whatever skies we ever scan,
Whatever books we ever conned us,
It is the hour God whispers man
That there is something yet beyond us.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"ALLIGATOR"

WHEN the alligator, the ugly crocodile of the new world, was first seen by the Spanish discoverers, they had a true insight into its species and called it "el lagarto" or "the lizard"—the article being accented because of the size of the monster. In Sir Walter Raleigh's "Discovery of Guiana," the word still retains its Spanish form, for the discoverer writes: "Sailing up the Orinoco we saw in it divers sorts of strange fishes of marvelous bigness, but for lagartos it exceeded. There were thousands of these ugly serpents, and the people call it, from the abundance of them, the river of lagartos in their (the Spanish) language."

The English sailors who brought the word home with them had probably never seen it written and naturally considered that the article "el" was part of the noun "lagarto." In Ben Jonson, who writes it "alligarta," we find the word in the process of its transformation, "alligator" being merely the Anglicized version of the Spanish name, coupled with a more phonetic form of spelling.

COOKIES FOR THE FAMILY

THE cooky jar at this season of the year, to be at all popular, must be always full. Here are a few to help replenish it:

Imperial Cookies.

Take one-half cupful of butter, one cupful of sugar, two eggs, one tablespoonful of milk, two and one-half cupfuls of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Mix the butter and sugar, add the beaten eggs, milk and the dry ingredients sifted together. Roll very thin and bake in a hot oven.

This foundation may be used for filled cookies if desired, doubling the amount. For the filling, take one-half cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of raisins, two tablespoonfuls of flour, two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and the grated rind of the lemon, one fourth cupful of boiling water and two tablespoonfuls of butter. Rub the butter and flour together, add the boiling water and cook, then add the raisins, lemon juice and rind and cook until smooth. Cool before using. Roll out, cut, then place a spoonful of the mixture in the center, cover with another cooky and bake as usual. Dates, currants, figs or a combination of two or more may be used for this filling.

Hermits.

Take one-third of a cupful of butter, two thirds of a cupful of sugar, one egg, two tablespoonfuls of milk, one and three-fourths cupfuls of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one third of a cupful of raisins cut into small pieces, one-half teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-fourth teaspoonful of cloves, the same of mace and nutmeg. Cream the butter; add the sugar, raisins, egg well beaten, and the milk. Mix the dry ingredients and add to the first mixture. Roll the cookies a little thicker than for plain ones. Bake in a slower oven.

Cream Cookies.

Take one-third of a cupful of butter, one cupful of sugar, two eggs, one-half cupful of thin cream, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of ginger, and flour to roll. Mix and bake as imperial cookies.

Has Anyone Laughed At You Because—

By ETHEL R. PEYSER

You Never Break a Date?

"You are really awfully common-place," "You are socially unengaged," "You seem to have little work to do." All these things have been fired at you, teasingly because you keep your dates! You are right to keep your dates! Why should you break this contract any more than any other kind of unwritten contract? To be sure, you often get "left," but you know you are right and that's a help. Anyhow you don't have to keep "scarce" to keep rare.

SAVINGS MORE THAN DOUBLE IN DECADE

New York.—Reported savings deposits in banks and trust companies of the United States have more than doubled in amount during the past decade, and the number of accounts have increased by about 141 per cent, figures compiled by the Savings Bank Division, American Bankers Association, show.

"If distributed equally among our entire population, the savings deposits in 1912 would have given $39 to each adult and child in the country," the Division's report says, "but in 1922 the portion of each would have been no less than $158."

The officially reported savings deposits are as follows:

	Deposits	Accounts
1912	$8,425,275,000	12,584,316
1922	17,331,479,000	30,323,320
Increase ..	105.7%	140.9%

"This remarkable growth is attributable to improvement in the services of the banks for savers and to the more consistent canvass for accounts through advertising and soliciting," the report says.

,000 PEACE PLAN PRIZE AWARDED

Advocates Entering World Court and Cooperation With League Without Full Membership at Present—Suggests League Membership Be Opened to All Nations and Provides for Development of International Law.

The American Peace Award brought forth 22,165 plans and many thousands of letters. Since many of the plans were the composite work of organizations, universities, etc., a single plan often represented the views of hundreds or thousands of individuals. The content of these plans is therefore an index of the true feeling and judgment of hundreds of thousands of American citizens.

These plans come from every group in American life. Some are obviously from lifelong students of history and international law. Some are from persons who have studied little, but who have themselves seen and felt the horror of war—or who are even now living out its tragedy.

But among them all are these dominant currents: that, if war is honestly to be prevented, there must be a face-about on the part of the nations in their attitude toward it; that by some progressive agreement the manufacture and purchase of the munitions of war must be limited or stopped; that while no political mechanism alone will insure cooperation among the nations, there must be some machinery of cooperation if the will to cooperate is to be made effective; that mutual counsel among the nations is the real hope for bringing about the disavowal of war by the open avowal of its real causes and open discussion of them; and finally that there must be some means of defining, recording, interpreting and developing the law of nations.

Statement of Jury of Award

The Jury of Award realizes that there is no one approach to world peace, and that it is necessary to recognize not merely political but also psychological and economic factors. The only possible pathway to international agreement with reference to these complicated and difficult factors is through mutual counsel and cooperation which the plan selected contemplates. It is therefore the unanimous opinion of the Jury that of the 22,165 plans submitted, Plan Number 1469 is "the best practicable plan by which the United States may co-operate with other nations to achieve and preserve the peace of the world."

It is the unanimous hope of the Jury that the first fruit of the mutual counsel and cooperation among the nations which will result from the adoption of the plan selected will be a general prohibition of the manufacture and sale of all materials of war.

The Question to Be Voted Upon

The substantial provisions which constitute the plan selected by the Jury of Award, and upon which the vote of the American people is asked, are hereby submitted by the Policy Committee as follows:

I. ENTER THE PERMANENT COURT

That the United States adhere to the Permanent Court of International Justice for the reasons and under the conditions stated by Secretary Hughes and President Harding in February, 1923.

II. COOPERATE WITH THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS, WITHOUT FULL MEMBERSHIP AT PRESENT

That without becoming a member of the League of Nations as at present constituted, the United States Government should extend its present cooperation with the League and propose participation in the work of its Assembly and Council under the following conditions and reservations:

Safeguarding of Monroe Doctrine

1. The United States accepts the League of Nations as an instrument of mutual counsel, but it will assume no obligation to interfere with political questions of policy or internal administration of any foreign state.

   In uniting its efforts with those of other States for the preservation of peace and the promotion of the common welfare, the United States insists upon the safeguarding of the Monroe Doctrine and does not abandon its traditional attitude concerning American independence of the Old World and does not consent to submit its long established policy concerning questions regarded by it as purely American to the recommendation or decision of other Powers.

No Military or Economic Force

2. That the only kind of compulsion which nations can freely engage to apply to each other in the name of Peace is that which arises from conference, from moral judgment, from full publicity, and from the power of public opinion.

   The United States would assume no obligations under Article X in its present form, or under Article XVI in its present form in the Covenant, or in its amended form as now proposed, unless in any particular case Congress has authorized such action.

   The United States proposes that Articles X and XVI be either dropped altogether or so amended and changed as to eliminate any suggestion of a general agreement to use coercion for obtaining conformity to the pledges of the Covenant.

No Obligations Under Versailles Treaty

3. That the United States will accept no responsibilities under the Treaty of Versailles unless in any particular case Congress has authorized such action.

League Open to All Nations

4. The United States Government proposes that Article I of the Covenant be construed and applied, or, if necessary, redrafted, so that admission to the League shall be assured to any self-governing State that wishes to join and that receives the favorable vote of two-thirds of the Assembly.

Development of International Law

5. As a condition of its participation in the work and counsels of the League, the United States asks that the Assembly and Council consent—or obtain authority—to begin collaboration for the revision and development of international law, employing for this purpose the aid of a commission of jurists. This Commission would be directed to formulate anew existing rules of the law of nations, to reconcile divergent opinions, to consider points hitherto inadequately provided for but vital to the maintenance of international justice, and in general to define the social rights and duties of States. The recommendations of the Commission would be presented from time to time, in proper form for consideration, to the Assembly as to a recommending if not a law-making body.

Author's Name Not to Be Revealed Until After Referendum

In order that the vote may be taken solely upon the merits of the plan, the Policy Committee, with the acquiescence of Mr. Bok, has decided not to disclose the authorship of the plan until after the referendum. The identity is unknown to the members of the Jury of Award and the Policy Committee, except one delegated member.

Just as America will some day become as dry as the desert through prohibition, so may wars be wiped out by much the same method, is the declaration made last week by Dr. John Haynes Homes, pastor of the Community church of New York in an address before the Chicago City club. "The European method of treating social evil is through legislative regulation," declared Dr. Holmes. "America's way is prohibition. And prohibition will prevail in the end. America tried regulation of slavery. It tried regulation of the liquor traffic. But eventually it came in each case to prohibition. If war were prohibited, noncombatant nations would be neutral. Warring nations would be criminal nations, and all other nations would have the right to punish them as such.

Cannot Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Enough. Sick Women Read This Letter

Charleston, S. C.—"I was completely run-down and not able to do my housework. I just dragged myself around and did not have energy enough to get up when I sat down. I read advertisements of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in your books and learned about it. I got benefit from the very first bottle. I continued to take it for some time, and now I am doing all my own work, even washing and ironing, and never felt better in my life. I tell all my friends that the change in my health is due to but one thing and that is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I cannot praise it enough."—Mrs. ANNIE YOUNG, 16 Amherst St., Charleston, S.C.

The reason for such a letter from Mrs. Young is apparent. She got well and is grateful. Recently a nation-wide canvass of women purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was made, and 98 out of 100 reported that they received benefit from taking it.

Just because the Vegetable Compound has been helping other women is a good reason why it should help you. For sale by druggists everywhere.

THE FAIRY

SYNOPSIS.—On the banks of the Wabash stand Texie Colin and Jack Warhope, young and very much in love. Texie is the only daughter of old Pap Simon, rich man and money-lender. Jack is the orphan bound boy of Pap Simon, who had foreclosed a mortgage on the Warhope estate. At first Texie and Jack talk sadly of Ken Colin, the girl's missing brother. Then Jack says that in ten days his servitude will be over, that he will ride out into the big world to seek his fortune. Both know what that will mean to them. Texie and Jack talk of the red lock of "Red Colin," inherited by Ken. And Jack says he's coming back as soon as he finds gold in California. Then arrives the new preacher, Rev. Caleb Hopkins. Pap Simon introduces the villagers to the new preacher, who was a college mate of Ken. At supper at the Colin home the preacher tells how the boy killed a gambler and disappeared. His father attributes Ken's fall from grace to his red lock of hair. Then Pap Simon has a sort of stroke, brought on by reading a letter from Ken, "somewhere in New York," who curses his father on his death bed. A postscript by another hand says he is dead. At the village store and post office Loge Belden, a newcomer, says he saw the new parson with his arm around Texie. Jack licks him, shoots a pistol from his hand and makes him say he was mistaken. The preacher and the villagers go fishing. Jack discovers the preacher carries a six-gun. A footprint on a concealed houseboat fits the preacher's boot. A drunken ruffian disturbs a village festival and stabs Jack in the shoulder. The preacher makes him leave.

The morning was far gone when the woodsman finished his task at the feed-pens.

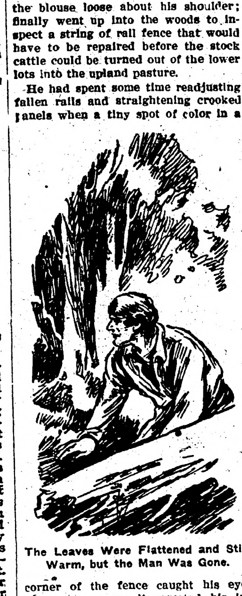
As he stood leaning against the fence, the events of the day before crossed his mind—the heelprints on the dusty deck of the concealed houseboat; the ivory-handled six-gun; the spark of flint that had transformed the peering eyes of the preacher when he faced the desperado's knife. From this, his mind reverted to the words of Belden about what he had seen in the little park.

A face rose before him—a face compelling in its easy suavity—that, in spite of its studious severity, seemed to have a strange fascination for Texie. He knew she had let him walk home with her from the festival—a privilege that meant more in the Flatwoods than anywhere else in the world. A deep breath came up out of his breast; his hand gripped the fence rail hard.

But many an insistent task lay waiting. The thought roused him. As he raised his arm to put on his hat, the sweat got at the cut in his shoulder and stung him.

He had intended to haul in some shock corn from the bottoms. He frowned toward the wagon; plucked the blouse loose about his shoulder; finally went up into the woods to inspect a string of rail fence that would have to be repaired before the stock cattle could be turned out of the lower lots into the upland pasture.

He had spent some time readjusting fallen rails and straightening crooked panels when a tiny spot of color in a corner of the fence caught his eye. For some reason it arrested his instant attention. In a moment he was down on his knees parting the weeds and tangled brambles where a yellow orchid had just unfolded the mysteries of its enchanted slipper to the sun.



The Leaves Were Flattened and Still Warm, but the Man Was Gone.

He rose to his feet after a time, but stood gazing down at the flower—a spot of gold in its mean setting.

Stopping a few minutes later to ease his shoulder a bit, he happened to glance over the fence into the woods. The act was purely involuntary, but a sight met his eyes that instantly drove every other consideration out of his mind—from behind a log a man was glowering at him.

He ducked out of sight in a flash, and the woodsman stooped to his task—carelessly; without so much as the flick of an eye to betray that he had seen anything at all—but he had caught a distinct view of a slouch hat, a rough flannel shirt, open at the collar, a glare of dark eyes that smoldered in a face dark and scowling and covered with a stubble of black beard—the desperado of the festival.

Texie's startled whisper, as she had fastened the bandages about his shoulder the evening before, flashed across his thought. The face behind the log and the face of his memory rose to his mind as distinct as a reflection in Whispering spring. Unbelievable though it was—against all reason in the light of that terrible letter—he saw the resemblance she had fancied—vague, half intangible, but none the less a resemblance.

With the tail of his eye on the log, the woodsman went on with his work, apparently absorbed in it, really with no other thought than to put as great a length of fence row as possible between himself and that scowling face, and in as short a time as was prudent.

The moment he thought himself out of sight, he took out a rail of the fence, crawled through the opening and, with every caution known to woodcraft, crept back through the underbrush toward the log. The broken outline of it at last came into view through a clump of hazel. He raised his head ever so little and lay listening. Not a false note disturbed the soft purr of nature; the pulse of the woods beat normal. He dropped his head; crawled up to the log. The leaves were flattened and still warm, but the man was gone.

He searched the moss and leaves until he found the trail—the scrape of a boot in a spot of moist ground at the foot of an oak. After that it was easy. There were two sets of tracks. To his surprise one set led back toward the cliffs above the homestead. He followed it. At a point along the bluffs that commanded the nearest view of the cabin under the crimson rambler the mussed leaves and broken weeds beneath a clump of bushes at the very brink of the rocks showed where the renegade had concealed himself. Three half-burned matches, with which he had probably lighted his pipe, indicated that he had remained some time.

Jack glanced down at the tiny cabin, the barn-lot, turned and followed the trail back under the trees.

Past the log it led, away to the north, down the face of the wooded bluff and into the narrow road that threaded Eagle hollow. He followed it within sight of the rude hovel at the head of the hollow into which Loge Belden and his sister had lately moved; stopped; studied the place critically for a moment; finally turned, climbed the bluff and, with an uncomfortable feeling of hidden eyes upon him, returned to his task at the fence.

The forenoon was gone by the time he finished it. As he trudged back, the corner where he had found the yellow orchid drew his eye irresistibly.

Raking away the dead leaves he dug it up, being careful to leave enough soil about the roots to prevent their withering, and carried it in his hands out through the trees and up among the tumbled ramparts of Black rock.

In the tiny flower bed at the foot of the sandstone pinnacle where the three names were carved, he hollowed out a place in the rich leaf-mold and set the orchid with the others—all of them doubtless having come there at different times in the same way; rose to his feet and stood deeply pondering, as his gaze rested on the three names carved in the rock. That baffling resemblance, in spite of him, would creep back into his thought.

The bold frankness of the man's face settled to a deeper thoughtfulness; he looked down at the new orchid among the old, fresh and piquant as when he dug it out of the fence corner; glanced toward the red-roofed cottage, and set his feet to the rough path that led down to the fallow yard.

CHAPTER VIII

The Fairy's Secret.

The furnishings of the cabin under the crimson rambler would have been a revelation to a stranger entering the door for the first time. A soft-toned rug from the Orient covered three-fourths of the rough floor, stopping just short of the cook stove, which, with its array of utensils, occupied the other fourth. The bed was high posted and canopied, dressed in the finest linen and hung with faded tapestry. The chairs were handsomely upholstered, while a center table of hand-carved rosewood stood in the mid-section of the floor.

Along the south wall an American flag of silk hung draped, and under its looped-up center two pictures—the beautiful face of a woman; and in the companion frame, the fine, upstanding figure of a soldier in the uniform of a colonel of Mounted Rangers—the man and the woman who had dreamed the dream that never came true.

The woodsman had finished his task at the barn and feedpens that evening and returned to the cabin, where, deeply thoughtful he was half mechanically building a fire in the cook stove when his quick ear caught the sound of a light step coming along the path from the orchard. He laid down the kindling and turned toward the door.

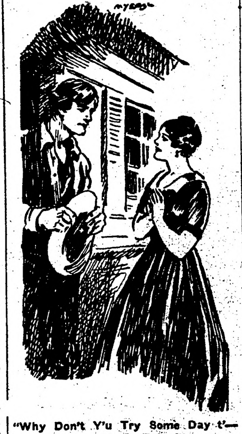
The light step had stopped, and Texie stood outlined in the doorway, her eyes dancing alive over the thought of having taken the alert woodsman by surprise, the round wonder of her throat and cheeks touched to a softer blush by the waning sunlight that slipped in under the crimson rambler.

The man dragged off his hat. The girl glanced over the cabin; lifted her eyes.

"Jack, you're the best housekeeper in the Flatwoods."

The floor creaked with the weight of him as he came to the door. He had to stoop to pass under the lintel, and his massive shoulders spread almost from jamb to jamb.

"It ain't me," he said in his slow way. "There's a wonderful fairy about these hills som'er's that slips in when I'm off in the fields, and no matter how upside down I've left things, she jist touches 'em with them small hands fairies has got, 'r mebbe says 'r sings some wonderful charm to 'em, and when I come back, there they are, all spick and span. Some folks says ther' ain't no fairies, but I know ther' is—one, anyhow."



"Why Don't Y'u Try Some Day t'—Trap Your—Fairy?"

The girl's expressive face was alive and eager.

"Why don't y'u try some day t'—trap your—fairy?"

The heart of the big woodsman rose to his eyes. For a transcendent moment the man in him, sprung from generations of soldiers and gentlemen, supremely dominated the bound boy. He drank in the wonder of her hair, the plump soft mystery of her throat and bosom, and his hands instinctively reached toward her.

"I'd give the world—!"

He stopped; the transcendent moment passed. He dropped his eyes and crushed his hat rim in his powerful fingers.

The girl bent her head and a deep thoughtfulness filmed the brown of her eyes.

"Jack—!"

He felt the slight tremor in her voice and half guessed what was coming.

"That face las' night—it ha'nts me."

Involuntarily he glanced up at the high brink of the cliff, where, under a clump of bushes, lay some mussed leaves and a pinch of pipe ashes.

"Don't let it," was his slow answer. "There's the pilot of the Obenchain, now, looks a pow'rful sight like Lark Sharp, and they ain't a mite of kin in the world."

She pondered the answer and seemed much impressed, even relieved, as he fancied.

"How's Pap Simon t'day?"

"Por father! He ain't hardly left the house sence that—night. He's wrote and wrote, and looked at papers in 'is safe I didn't know 'e had, and this afternoon he had Zeke Polick up with his notary public seal." A shadow flitted across her face. She laced her smooth fingers; gripped them. "That—terrible letter! He's read it and read it. Pore Ken—!"

The man reached his arm up over the door; absently felt a spray of rose vine, its buds swollen big with the mystery that was soon to be revealed. The girl glanced at the hand among the rosebuds and slowly turned to the frank and thoughtful face.

Duke Called Canada Dreary Part of Globe

Edward Augustus, duke of Kent, and father of Queen Victoria, was stationed in Canada from 1797 to 1799, a part of the time in Halifax. In letters concerning the army in Canada, and addressed to Lord Melville, it appears that the duke disliked Canada, which he described as "this dreary corner of the globe," and in nearly every letter asked to be ordered home.

In one letter, dated from Halifax in 1799, the duke wrote: "You will receive at the same time with this an official letter from me on the subject of the force allotted for North America. I certainly flatter myself that I shall not remain here long enough to see the reinforcements arrive, for the last accounts, by the October mail, speak with so much confidence of the completion of the union at the meeting of the Irish parliament that with my reliance on Mr. Pitt's promise and your friendly exertions in my behalf, my hopes are very sanguine of being recalled."

Invaluable Advice.

Though he held three degrees and had had business experience, it was Jackson's misfortune that he never could hold his gilt-edge positions long. However, he pursued a waiting policy and ultimately was rewarded. A friend, who was president of a large corporation, offered him a job at an excellent salary, with regular advancement. After being with the concern for several years it occurred to Jackson that though he had been regularly promoted he was only a figurehead. He sought a conference with his chief, and asked: "How is it that you never act on any of my policies?" His boss soothingly told him that he was invaluable and that the firm sincerely hoped he would continue his services. "You see," added the corporation president, "when we are in doubt as to what course to pursue we call you in and do the reverse of what you say."

Why Doctors Warn Against Coffee or Tea for Children

THE reason is simple. Coffee and tea contain drugs which tend to irritate the delicate nervous system of children, and so upset health.

The Federal Bureau of Education includes in its rules to promote health among growing school children, the warning that "children should not drink tea or coffee at all."

Why confine the warning to children?

You are careful to protect the health of your children; why, then, take chances with your own health, when a change from coffee or tea is made so easy by Postum.

Postum is a delicious, pure cereal beverage—ideal for children and satisfying to adults.

Postum for Health

"There's a Reason"

Your grocer sells Postum in two forms: Instant Postum [in tins] prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal [in packages] for those who prefer the flavor brought out by boiling fully 20 minutes. The cost of either form is about one-half cent a cup.

"Miss America" Declares Tanlac Wonderful Health Giving Tonic

Miss Campbell in "Miss America" crown which she has won on two occasions.

Miss Mary Katherine Campbell, twice proclaimed "Miss America," has taken TANLAC and endorses it in a statement recently given to the women of America. In this statement, Miss America declares that Good Health is the basis of all Beauty, and advises women who would be beautiful to "first find good health."

Her complete statement as given is as follows: "I consider it a great privilege to be able to tell the thousands of women everywhere what a great tonic TANLAC is. Health is the basis of all beauty. Without good health, one is apt to be run-down, nervous, underweight, high-strung, anemic. Indigestion drives the roses from a woman's cheeks and robs her of that radiant quality of womanhood that is real beauty.

"I have taken TANLAC and I do not hesitate to say that it is a wonderful health-giving tonic. It has brought relief and good health to many women, and with good health one may have a measure of beauty that will overcome shortcomings in face and figure.

"Rosy cheeks, sparkling eyes, a well-rounded figure, a lovable disposition, go hand in hand with good health. To those searching for beauty, I would say—'First of all, Find Good Health.' The TANLAC treatment has proven itself a boon to womankind, and I recommend it."

Miss Campbell has written a booklet on Health and Beauty which may be secured by filling out the coupon below.

Get rid of constipation by internal cleanliness

Many Diseases Start from Clogged Intestines

THERE is no reason why you should suffer from constipation. Headaches, biliousness, sleepless nights, heaviness, are nature's warning that intestinal poisons are flooding your system. If allowed to continue, you may become a victim of serious organic disease.

In constipation, say intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness including the gravest diseases of life.

Laxatives Aggravate Constipation

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favor Lubrication

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water it is harmless.

Get rid of constipation and avoid disease by adopting the habit of internal cleanliness. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

SAYS HE SLEW WIFE IN ITALY 14 YEARS AGO

Man Charged With Carrying Concealed Weapons Makes Confession

White Plains, N. Y.—County Judge William F. Bleakley and court attaches were astounded the other day, when Natale Zucco, forty-two years old, of Mount Kisco, who had been arraigned on the charge of carrying a pistol, admitted that on August 18, 1909, he killed his wife, Carmela, in the town of Radicena, Province of Reggio, Calabria, and that he had never been arrested for the crime. Zucco, questioned by Judge Bleakley, appeared to be proud that he had killed his wife, because, he alleged, she had been unfaithful to him.

Zucco, who has been arrested forty times, on charges ranging from assault to murder, told Judge Bleakley that while he was living in Chicago he received information from a friend in Radicena that his wife had been unfaithful to him. He said he went to Italy immediately and confronted her.

"How did you kill her?" Judge Bleakley asked.

"I shot her five times," the prisoner answered.

"Why did you do it?"

"Because she no friend of mine."

Eludes Italian Police.

Zucco said he eluded the Italian police and fled across France. He engaged passage from Marseilles and returned to America, taking up his residence in Mount Kisco. Although arrested thirty-two times in this country he always has managed to escape sentence.

Shot Her Five Times.

The story of the murder of his wife was brought out when Zucco pleaded guilty to the pistol-carrying charge. He was not sentenced, as efforts will be made by Deputy Sheriff Frank Cherico and Judge Bleakley to deport him.

According to a report submitted by the New York Police department to Judge Bleakley, Zucco in 1909 boarded the steamship Oceana at Hoboken and kidnapped from a berth Francesca Palladino who was being deported after conviction on several charges.

When the girl was arrested later she alleged Zucco was the chief of one of the most dangerous blackhand gangs operating in this country. One of Zucco's lieutenants, Rocco Cassone, she said, sailed on the same steamer with Lieutenant Petrosino and was the man who shot and killed the New York detective in Italy.

She charged Zucco shot her when she threatened to bare Zucco's blackhand schemes to the police.

Zucco boasted before Judge Bleakley that he had been arrested and imprisoned eight times in Italy for assault, conspiracy, resisting officers and numerous other charges. He denied, however, that he was implicated in a murder in Erie, Pa., for which he was arrested in 1913 and discharged on a technicality.

Pistol as Nut Cracker

Newcastle, Pa.—Looking about for something with which to crack the shell of a coconut William Kennedy, twenty years old, spied a revolver in a drawer in the kitchen. With the coconut firmly held between his knees, he battered away with the butt of the revolver to get at the meat and milk within. After several minutes he struck the nut an exceptionally heavy blow and the revolver was discharged, the bullet entering his abdomen, killing him.

ROAD BUILDING

Begin to Repair Highway When Opened for Traffic

A man who spent $25,000 for a house and contents and refused to spend a hundred dollars to stop the leak in the roof, which spoiled both, would be considered a fool. But there are many counties and many states which spend from ten to twenty-five thousand dollars a mile for a good road, and refuse the hundred dollars a year needed to keep it in perfect order.

The time to begin to repair a good road is the day it is opened for traffic. Homely philosophy says that a stitch in time saves nine, and road experience proves that a bucket of oil, a little sand, a few rocks and a man with a shovel now can save the expense of a whole road gang and expensive machinery later.

The modern road consists of a foundation course of stone, a smaller, lighter course on top, a wearing course of still smaller stones, a binder of oil and sand, and perhaps a top dressing of the same. As long as the structure is complete, the road will wear. But let time, or a too heavy load, or frost, or some other cause, dig a hole through the wearing course into the foundation, and the "bad spot" will begin to "ravel." Stones will break away and roll in the ditch, the surface will disintegrate and in a comparatively short time a large and rough hole appears.

A good road is no better than its worst mile. A mile of holes and ruts cuts down the usefulness of ten miles of good road. To repair a large hole costs much money. To inspect the road often and stop up the little hole when it starts is very inexpensive. The greatest city fire in history could have been put out by a child with a cup of water if found in time. So can the worst possible damage to roads be inexpensively prevented, if the maintenance is begun in time.—Good Roads.

World's Speed Record in Hard Road Construction

A mile of concrete highway was laid down every hour of a six-day week ending October 11 in Illinois to establish what the engineers of the state division of highways believe to be the world's speed record in hard road construction.

The last of the reports of the division engineers covering the progress of the work in all parts of the state the week ending October 11 revealed what Superintendent of Highways Frank T. Sheets described as a "phenomenal achievement previously deemed almost impossible." A total of 57.7 miles of standard 18-foot pavement was laid during the six-day period by 118 large mixers working on the state system. Nine thousand six hundred men and 2,200 teams were employed in the work.

Chief Highway Engineer Clifford Older declared that the record showed the road building organization at its best and was undoubtedly the greatest accomplishment in highway construction down to the present time. "The figures indicate," said Mr. Older, "that the combined outfits working on Illinois state roads laid one mile of completed pavement an hour, about 88 feet per minute.

"And this does not represent a spasmodic effort," Mr. Older continued. "We have been constantly hitting between forty-nine and fifty miles per week during the season. Governor Small personally inspected the figures and commended the highway division as the "greatest road building organization in the world."

Build Automobile Roads and Make Streets Better

Following similar action by municipalities in India, Australia, and Japan, cities in China are putting into practice the latest methods adopted by American highway engineers for the construction of automobile roads and modern paved streets. According to C. Harpur, commissioner of public works at Shanghai, Chinese highway bureaus are beginning to replace their waterbound macadam streets with asphaltic concrete. In Shanghai last year five and one-fourth miles of asphaltic concrete pavement were constructed. Nearly three miles of this are on roads approved for new lines of railless tramcars. The mileage of streets traversed by Shanghai's tramway system is about twenty-six.

Last year the tramcars of Shanghai carried 126,684,226 persons, or 19,500 persons per route mile per day, a passenger traffic unequaled, it is said, even by the surface lines of New York city, London, Chicago, Paris, or Berlin. Handcarts licensed in Shanghai last December numbered 2,164, while the wheelbarrows licensed totaled 13,941. There are now 334 motor trucks using Shanghai streets.

Travel Records Were Broken.

All travel records to Yellowstone National park were broken during the season which closed on September 20. There were 91,244 automobile tourists in 27,350 cars this year, as compared with 67,507 tourists in 18,235 cars last year. There were 117 makes of cars in the park, and six makes of motorcycles.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Five Hundred Eighty-five Dollars ($585.00), which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain Mortgage duly executed and delivered by Ole Olsen Listel and Severine Listel, his wife, Mortgagors, to Deposit Trust and Savings Bank, Mortgagee, bearing date the 2nd day of December, 1920, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Marshall and State of Minnesota, on the 13th day of December, 1920, at 9:00 o'clock A. M. in Book 104 of Mortgages, on page 79; which said Mortgage with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Deposit Trust and Savings Bank, Mortgagee, to Mrs. Mary Cisewski, by written assignment dated the 9th day of December, 1920, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds, on the 14th day of December, 1923 at 1:00 o'clock P. M., in Book 110 of Mortgages, on page 204;

And Whereas, The said Mrs. Mary Cisewski, the Assignee and Holder of said Mortgage, has duly elected and does hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said Mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, under the terms and conditions of said Mortgage and the power of sale therein contained; and whereas there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable at the date of this notice the sum of Three Thousand Eight Hundred Sixty-four and 68-100 Dollars ($3,864.68), which said amount includes the sum of Two Hundred Twenty-one and 58-100 Dollars ($221.58) paid by said Mrs. Mary Cisewski to the County Treasurer of Marshall County on the 14th day of December, 1923, for taxes for the years 1920, 1921, and 1922, including penalty and interest, against the mortgaged property, together with interest on said payment from the 14th day of December, 1923, to the date of this notice, which last mentioned interest amounts to the sum of Sixty-six Cents ($.66); and whereas the said power of sale has become operative, and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise to recover the debt secured by said Mortgage, or any part thereof;

Now, Therefore, Notice is Hereby Given, That by virtue of the power of sale contained in said Mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said Mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said Mortgage, viz:

Lots sixteen, seventeen, twenty-one, and twenty-two, Northeast quarter South-west quarter Section Six in Township One Hundred fifty-five, North of Range forty-two, west of the 5th P. M. in Minnesota, in Marshall County, and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Marshall County, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Warren in said County and State, on the 20th day of February, 1924, at two o'clock P. M., of that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of Three Thousand Eight Hundred Sixty-four and 68-100 Dollars ($3,864.68), and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and Seventy-five Dollars ($75.00) Attorney's fees, as stipulated in and by said Mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Date, January 2nd, 1924.

Starboard.

The word starboard is probably derived from steer board, and became identified with the side of the ship to the right of a person at the steer board and facing the bow. The word larboard was used to designate the side to the left. This term has been superseded by the word port, in order to avoid the confusion caused by the similarity of names.

Half of the automobiles in the state will pay only a twelve dollar tax this year.

The new auto tax law does not give any state official the right to extend the time of payment. Taxes are now due and must be paid on or before Feb. 15th. to avoid penalty. The new rates are slightly higher for new cars and are two and three fourths per cent of the factory list price on Nov. 1st last year, less 10 percent discount for each year the car has been taxed.

The price of this paper is $1.50 on time, or $1.25 if paid in advance. We are offering our readers a splendid magazine combination at only $1.55. Now is the time to pay up before it is forgotten.

The city publishers demand pay for their papers in advance, or they stop the papers. If a country publisher would do that, most of their subscribers would get mad as hornets and say we were afraid to trust them. We have tried to accomodate everybody, and extend credit when asked for. It is now pay up time and we need the money.

Big Happenings of the Week Condensed for the Benefit of Busy Readers.

Washington

Washington—The second big reception of the White House social season was conducted, with Mrs. Coolidge rereceiving about 2,000 guests in honor of the members of the supreme court.

Washington—Charles R. Forbes, former director of the Veterans' bureau, through his counsel, James S. Easby-Smith, obtained permission from the senate veterans' committee to file memoranda in reply to certain statements concerning Forbes made in the report of the committee by its general counsel, John T. O'Ryan of New York.

Washington — The United States might find it advisable to put into law a refusal to allow immigrants to enter its territory from any country in which young and able bodied men are refused permission to emigrate, Secretary of Labor J. J. Davis suggested in a letter to Representative J. L. Cable (rep., Ohio).

Washington—Additional reports received by the war department from officers in Europe show that "gratifying progress" is being made in construction work on American cemeteries. A report just made public said the Brookwood, England, cemetery "is completed with the partial exception of one small building" and "those who have seen the overseas burial ground have pronounced it dignified, beautiful and simple."

Domestic

St. Louis—A spectacular business district fire caused $1,500,000 damage.

Cambridge, Mass.—Faculty and undergraduates of Harvard cast 1,471 votes for modification of the Volstead act against 1,047 votes against modification.

Scranton, Pa.—A threatened strike of 25,000 miners of the Hudson Coal company was averted when matters in controversy were satisfactorily adjusted.

Santa Fe, N. M.—A jury acquitted Carl Magee, Albuquerque editor, charged with criminal libel of C. J. Roberts, former state supreme court justice.

Cleveland — Close to 125 persons, many of them women and children, were driven into snow covered streets when fire destroyed a home and damaged two apartment houses.

Ocean Park, Calif.—Fire, said to have originated in a small fish market on the ocean front walk here virtually wiped out the entire Ocean Park amusement zone and caused damage variously estimated at from $2,000.000 to $4,000,000.

Houston, Texas — Two men are in Houston hospsitals seriously injured as a result of a smashup in which three cars figured in the first race at the Gulf Coast speedway. The injured are P. P. Stubblefield of Kansas sCity and Rex Edmunds of Houston.

New York—Seifoullah Yousry Pasha, named under the Egyptian declaration of independence on Feb. 28, 1922, to be the first minister from that country to the United States, arrived on the Majestic. He was accompanied by his wife.

New York—Ellsworth Bassett resigned as business manager for Mrs. Nina Wilcox Putnam Sanderson, novelist, whose divorce decree recently was vacated in Providence, R. I., after charges of irregularities had been made.

Lakehurst, N. J.—Preparations for the flight of the giant navy dirigible Shenandoah to the polar regions are being actively made at the naval air station here. Commander Frank R. McCrary, commandant of the air station, and commander of the Shenandoah, will select its crew for the North Pole flight about May 1.

Columbus, Ohio — William H. McGannon, former chief justice of the Cleveland municipal court, was paroled from the Ohio penitentiary in order that he may return to his home in Cleveland to take the insulin treatment for diabetes. A sudden change for worse in his condition prompted hasty parole action by the board of clemency on recommendation of Warden P. E. Thomas.

New York—A radio call for help from the freight steamship Sorriso, about 260 miles east of Cape Hatteras, picked up and relayed by the steamship Eastside, was received by naval communications. Available shipping records show that the Italian freighter Sorriso left Philadelphia Dec. 22 for Lisbon and Marsesilles.s

Mandeville, La.—The Laundry, shoeshop, bakery and printing office of the Chinchuba deaf institution at Chinchuba, near here, were destroyed by fire. Bucket brigades managed to prevent the flames from spreading to the dormitory. There was little excitement among the 61 deaf and dumb children in the dormitory when they were aroused an hour before daylight and all left the structure without injury.

Austin, Texas—The date for electrocution of four men at Huntsville prison was postponed until Feb. 18, to give the new warden time to get acquainted with his position, Governor Neff announced. One of the men was scheduled to be executed on Jan. 16, and the other three Jan. 18.

New York—A seagoing brewery aboard the steamship Albert Ballin, of the Hamburg-American lines, is the latest device in adding to the interest of east bound Atlantic travel. The plant is in operation only on east bound voyages as German made beer is taken aboard for each western trip.

Sports

New York—Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, and Tommy Gibbons of St. Paul, will fight a return title match in New York, probably early in June, Promoter Tex Rickard announced after a conference with Eddie Kane, Gibbon's manager.

Minneapolis—It took Fred Fulton exactly 4 minutes and 35 seconds to eliminate "Tiny" Jim Herman from the ranks of contenders for the heavyweight championship in their fight at the Kenwood Armory, the plasterer knocking out his Omaha rival in the second round of a bout scheduled for 10 rounds. After flooring Herman twice in the first round and being dropped himself just as the bell ended the session, Fulton came back with a vengeance in the second round and stretched "Tiny" out helpless on the canvas with a ripping left hook that landed flush on the point of the chin.

Foreign

Paris—The Paris bourse may be closed to all foreigners, only French citizens being permitted to trade, because of the depreciation of the franc.

Manila—The Philippine government initiated extradition proceedings against Lucio Torralba, a Filipino, who is accused of embezzling $200,000 from the Yokohamo Specie bank here.

Paris—The frontier between the Palatinate and unoccupied Germany was closed except for railroad traffic and food supplies, by order of General De Metz, Rhineland commission delegate.

Tokio — The home office has issued official figures on the recent earthquake and fire as follows: Dead and missing, 192,000; injured, 102,000; houses destroyed, 580,;;; houses partially destroyed, 126,000.

Brussels—"It cannot be denied that we fought for America and that we saved her; consequently we are entitled to expect effective help from her," said the social senator Henri La Fontaine in the debate on Belgium's foreign policy.

Moscow—Speaking before a foreign trade conference, Leonid Krassin, foreign trade commissar, announced that in his recent stay in London he carried on negotiations for a loan to soviet Russia amounting from $30,000,000 to $50,000,000.

Venice — An intense cold wave throughout Venetia, for the first time in hundreds of years, has frozen the lagoons and canals in Venice, some to such a thickness as to permit people to walk across the "street." Gondola service is tied up.

Tokio — The police after suppressing the Japanese newspapers that published accounts of the unsuccessful bomb throwing at the imperial palace, have released the story with a formal statement that a Korean had hurled the bombs, which failed to explode.

Moscow — Contrary to reports in the foreign press that Premier Lenine is visiting a Czecho-Slovakian mud bath resort, the premier remains in the vicinity of Moscow. It is declared that his health shows improvement. The Petrograd Pravda says Lenine recently went hunting twice in one week.

Dublin—John Finnerty, the American lawyer who is representing the claimants of Irish republican funds in America, interviewed Eamonn de Valera and Austin Stack in jail here preliminary to taking evidence in the case before the American consul general here in accordance with the New York supreme court's order.

Anacona, Italy — Earth shocks continue here, and most of the houses are unsafe. The serious conditions are aggravated by heavy rains and the homeless are suffering severely. The militia and Red Cross are making all speed with their supplies of tents and huts, but these are not yet sufficient for the afflicted population.

Milan, Italy — The Italian aviator, Perin, over whose fate much anxiety was felt, has survived a thrilling experience. He left Sestacalende, near Milan, piloting a chaser hydroairplane, intending to proceed to headquarters at Pola after a stop at Venice. He was found in the upper Adriatic still piloting his machine, which safely had ridden the heavy seas for four days.

Manila — Discussing the resolution introduced by Representative J. A. Frear, which calls for a congressional inquiry into his asdsministration, Governor General Leonard Wood declared he would welcome such an investigation, and, he added, "I hope they'll hew to the line and let the chips fall where they may." General Wood denied that any of his staff had investments in the Philippines, with the exception of one constabulary officer, who owned a few shares in a sugar plantation.

Berlin—For the first time of American welfare in Central Europe, letters from President Coolidge and Secretary of State C. E. Hughes will be read to German children. The United States liner America brought food and clothes bundles for the German children at Bremerhaven, where the town authorities, with solemn, old fashioned ceremonies, will distribute the presents from America among 1,200 children. In the course of the ceremony Mr. Coolidge's letters, as well as letters from Mr. Hughes, will be read to the children guests.

Manila—Lieutenant Osborne Wood, son of Governor General Leonard Wood has announced he will leave for the United States in February and says he expects to resign from the army. Lieutenant Wood recently was reported to have gained nearly $1,000,000 through stock speculation.

Sofia, Bulgaria—King Boris, with the approval of parliament, promulgated a decree granting amnesty to 24 former cabinet ministers charged with responsibility for the second Balkan war and failing to dissociate Bulgaria from the central powers in the World war.

COOLIDGE TO SUPPORT PLAN

President Receives Northwest Delegates at White House ---Indicates Support

Washington.—President Calvin Coolidge received the North Dakota delegation and delegation from other northwestern states now in Washington on behalf of the Norbeck-Burtness $50,000,000 farm loan measure, and indicated his support of the bill, Saturday.

Dr. John Lee Coulter, president of the North Dakota Agricultural college, who sponsored the idea; A. J. McInnis, of Valley City, president of the North Dakota Farm Bureau federation; H. B. Fuller, secretary of the North Dakota Farm Bureau federation, and other North Dakotans were received by the president and later in the day were heard before the committees of the house and senate, now investigating the proposal.

Dr. Coulter expressed his pleasure when the president in shaking hands with him, told of his interest in the farm relief measure, now before congress. Following the reception, the party, including the president, went to the White House lawn, where they were photographed together.

Business interests and the press of the northwest are solidly supporting legislation which would extend federal aid to the farmer in efforts to diversify production, Frederick E. Murphy, the publisher of the Minneapolis Tribune, told the senate agriculture committee.

While the Burtness bill which the committee had under consideration would not entirely meet the necessities of the farmers of the spring wheat belt, the witness said, it would furnish a "measure of immediate aid" which would go far.

John W. Haw of the North Dakota Agriculture college outlined a system of administration of the proposed law, recommending the creation of "natural trading communities" with a general distributing agency to have actual charge of disbursements in each. State advisory committees would be created, composed of bankers, farmers, and representatives of the state educational system. These committees would determine the necessity for loans and the moral risk of the applicant.

COWS YIELD GOOD INCOME

Ward County Guernseys Average 6,680 Pounds Each During 1923.

Minot, N. D.—Eight grade Guernsey cows, owned by J. F. Bailey & Sons of near Minot, during 1923, recorded an average gross income of $118.08. each with an average individual production of 6,680 pounds of milk, according to figures announced by J. A. Sorenson, secretary of the Ward County Cow Testing association. The total gross income from the eight cows was $944.64. The Baileys have a grade herd and use a purebred sire.

Over the cost of feed per cow which was $38.97 for the year, the average income per cow for the 12 months was $79.11, Mr. Sorenson states, while the cost of producing 100 pounds of milk has been determined as 58 cents and the cost of producing one pound of butterfat was 13½ cents.

The lowest producing cow in the Bailey herd yielded 4,950 pounds of milk with an average butterfat test of 4.82 per cent, equalling a total of 238.8 pounds of butterfat for the year. This animal's gross income for the 12 months was $102.85; cost of feed was $36.57.

The highest producing cow in the herd gave a total of 8,242 pounds of milk during the year with an average butterfat test of 4.05 per cent, yielding a total of 333.8 pounds of butterfat with a yearly gross income of $150.75. The cost of feed has been figured as $43.06, leaving the net income at $107.69. Mr. Sorenson has figured from statistics of the cow testing association that it cost 52.2 cents to produce 100 pounds of milk from this cow and 12.9 cents to produce a pound of butterfat, and that the yield from each $1 worth of feed given to the cow was $3.73.

CONFERENCE TO AID GERMANY

Experts of Powers Begin Task of Salvaging German Wreckage.

Paris.—With Brig. Gen. Charles G. Dawes presiding, leading businessmen and financiers of the United States, Great Britain, France, Belgium, and Italy, sitting as a board of directors, and creditors, began Monday to examine the assets and liabilities of Germany, their nation's debtor, with a view to saving something from the ruins of the most stupendous bankruptcy in the history of the world.

"Strictly business and no politics," was the motto under which these representative men assembled.

Foreign Money Suffers Drop.

New York.—Heavy selling of the foreign exchanges in European markets caused sharp recession in British, French, and Dutch rates at the opening of Monday's foreign exchange market here. Demand sterling dropped 3 3-8 cents to $4.23; French francs broke 22½ points to 4.43½ cents, and Dutch guilders dropped 45 points to 36.95 cents. Italian lire advanced 10 points to 4.49½ cents, selling for the first time higher than French francs, which created a new low record for all time.

G. O. P. SPLITS OVER TAX BILL

Leaders Want Few Changes in Proposal---Mellon Under Fire in Committee

Washington. — A split developed among Republican leaders of the house as to the advisability of modifying the Mellon tax bill.

Representative Longworth, the party leader, said he realized a compromise was inevitable, particularly on surtax rates—a position also held by Chairman Green of the ways and means committee.

On the other hand, Representative Tilson of Connecticut, a committee member, announced he was opposed to any compromise and believes that the Mellon plan should be enacted into law substantially as drafted. He discussed the situation with President Coolidge and issued a statement as to his views after leaving the White House.

The position taken by Mr. Tilson is understood to be in accord with that of at least five other Republicans on the ways and means committee, while the rest are noncommittal or inclined to modifications of the treasury draft.

As the breach among the Republicans widened, Democratic leaders who have offered a substitute for the Mellon plan decided not to comment on the situation, except to reiterate that they were convinced many Republicans would refuse to support the treasury bill as written, and would lean toward the Democratic proposal on a showdown.

The ways and means committee completed its consideration of administrative features of the plan and Monday began public hearings on the bill. The committee has been instructed to report the measure by February 11.

The only senate angle on the situation was the publication of a letter from Senator Couzens, Republican, Michigan, to Secretary Mellon, in which the senator challenged the treasury secretary to a debate on the latter's surtax proposal and questioned the soundness as well as Mr. Mellon's views on tax exempt securities.

Mr. Longworth, discussing the tax situation, said congress never had and never would accept, without change, rates suggested by the secretary of the treasury. It is too jealous of its prerogatives to do so, he declared, adding that it would be no reflection on Mr. Mellon if changes were made in the rates proposed by him as his personality had nothing to do with the situation.

SEC. WALLACE IS FOR PLAN

Quoted as Urging Enactment of the Coulter Plan Into Law.

Minneapolis.—Indorsing the Coulter plan to provide $50,000,000 in federal aid for grain farmers for the purchase of livestock, Henry C. Wallace, secretary of agriculture, on his arrival in Minneapolis, advocated administration of the proposed fund by state agricultural colleges as the best means of giving the farmer maximum results.

"If wisely administered, the Coulter plan of aiding farm diversification would prove a real benefit to those grain farmers who can stay in the face of present conditions," Mr. Wallace said. "I believe the fund could be administered with most wisdom by the state agricultural colleges."

He said that:

The Coulter plan has the backing of President Coolidge but that difficulties may be encountered if other sections of the country, depressed agriculturally, ask the same aid.

The northwest farmer has suffered no worse than farmers in other sections, particularly the southern cotton farmer.

The sanest plan to help farmers is through the plan to form an export corporation administered by the government.

In 15 years America will consume all of her crops.

Congress is devoting a large part of its time to farm problems.

The drift of farmers to the city—1,200,000 in 1923—is providing "more mouths to feed."

"The northwest farmer has one thing to be grateful for, and that is that there was no tremendous inflation of land values in this section in the war period," Secretary Wallace said. "Other sections have suffered from low prices and in addition have had tremendous deflation of land values."

At the annual meeting conducted at the farm school, the Minnesota Livestock Guernsey Breeders' association, the Minnesota Jersey Cattle club, and the Holstein Breeders' association indorsed the Coulter plan. The resolution indorsing the plan was voted down by the Brown Swiss Breeders' association.

Finish Road Case.

Washington.—Oral arguments in the matter of general consolidation of railroads, the last stage but one in a three-year inquiry of the interstate commerce commission into the subject, was concluded Saturday. The final step, the reporting to congress of a plan by which all the major railroads of the United States may be fused into 18 or 19 great mergers will be taken when the membership of the commission reaches conclusions on the general project and the series of controversies arising out of

DUPLEX BUILDING LIKE RESIDENCE

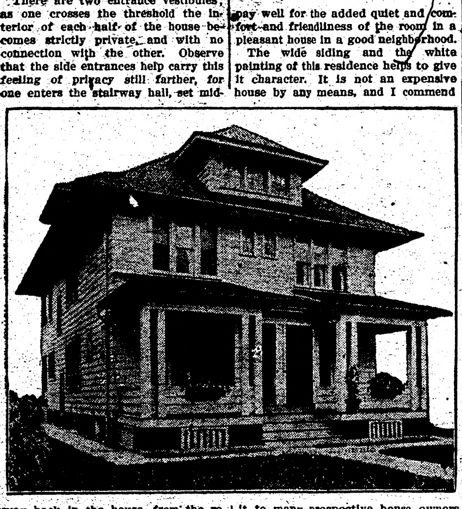
Design Intended for Restricted Residence Location Gives Two Homes.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

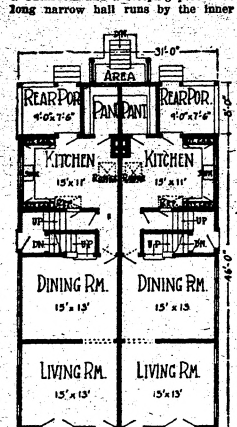
This is not a residence converted to duplex use, but was designed to serve the residential requirements of two families. It was designed to be built in a rather thickly populated suburban section where certain restrictions operated to prevent the erection of what would obviously appear from the outside as a typical flat building. The casual passer-by would assume it to be a rather commodious residence of good design, for the two entrance doors are so placed as to give the effect of one wide door.

There are two entrance vestibules; as one crosses the threshold the interior of each half of the house becomes strictly private, and with no connection with the other. Observe that the side entrances help carry this feeling of privacy still farther, for one enters the stairway hall, set midway back in the house, from the respective sides.



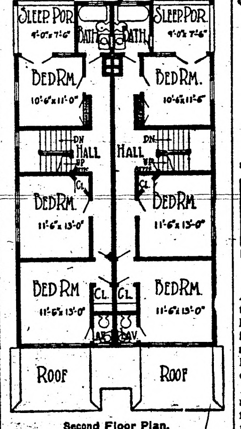
If we go in the front door and pass through the vestibule there we find ourselves in the living room. This is of good size, 15 feet by 13 feet, and has a long French window opening on to the front porch and side windows. A wide door connects with the dining room, 15 feet by 13 feet in size, and a small passage divides it from the kitchen. The kitchen is 15 feet by 11 feet, and has ample shelving accommodations, with a pantry and a rear porch which can be screened or glassed in as desired.

Upstairs there are three bedrooms, a bathroom and a sleeping porch. A long narrow hall runs by the inner wall, giving all the rooms outside light, and the front bedroom has its individual lavatory. Thus, this room could be used by the apartment occupant, if a small family; or it could be rented out to a roomer to get additional income, with the family sleeping quarters occupying the remaining two bedrooms and sleeping porch.



First Floor Plan.

It is of course a foregone conclusion that the building of a duplex residence is a frank means of helping a home pay for itself. One could build this home and have the tenant's rent for one-half of the house help pay the total indebtedness. If the family is small, what objection would there be to a roomer or two, as suggested above? Obviously none. The day is gone when it was a sign of poverty to have a roomer or two; space is becoming so valuable now that it is only good sense to have it used to the best advantage, and though there are hotels and rooming houses galore there is a certain type of roomer willing to pay well for the added quiet and comfort and friendliness of the room in a pleasant house in a good neighborhood.



Second Floor Plan.

The wide siding and the white painting of this residence helps to give it character. It is not an expensive house by any means, and I commend it to many prospective house owners as a good design to consider. You could live in this as an owner, make one heating unit serve both halves of the house, do the necessary janitor work yourself, like tending the furnace in winter and the lawn in summer, and in a few years have a tidy nest egg toward the building of a regular house where you and your family would be the only occupants.

TOBACCO SMOKE IS TESTED.

Scientists Make Experiments to Discover Amount of Nicotine in Pipes, Cigars and Cigarettes.

Nicotine has always been regarded as the poisonous element in the consumption of tobacco by smoking, and in order to determine the amount of this poison developed in the different methods of consuming tobacco some interesting experiments were conducted recently by some scientists abroad.

Long glass tubes, in one end of which the cigar, cigarette and pipe are inserted, the other end being connected with an exhaust pump, are used in the test. The nicotine is absorbed in filter paper. These tests showed conclusively that cigarette smoke contained the least amount of nicotine. For example, Virginia cigarettes, containing 1.40 per cent nicotine, gave a smoke containing only 0.12 per cent nicotine. Turkish cigarettes, containing 1.38 per cent nicotine, gave a smoke with only 0.51 per cent nicotine.

Egyptian cigarettes, with only 1.74 per cent of the alkaloid, yielded a smoke with just 0.21 per cent of nicotine. A Havana cigar, containing only 0.64 per cent nicotine, yielded a smoke with 0.20 per cent of the alkaloid. Tobacco, smoked in the pipe, containing 2.85 per cent of nicotine, yields a smoke containing 2.20 per cent of nicotine. Porto Rico shag tobacco, containing 0.33 per cent nicotine, gives a smoke containing 0.25 per cent of nicotine in the pipe.

Admonishing Him.

"And fuddermo', bruderin and sistahs," solemnly said good old Parson Bagster in the course of a recent Sabbath evening's sermon, "keep yo' lamps trimmed and burning. Lean on de Lawd, and—Looky yuh, Brudder Jackson! What yo' tryin' to do, down dar in de fifth pew fum de back?"

"Leanin' on de Lawd, sah," replied Gin Jackson, the gambling man, who had settled down on the small of his back with his feet over in the pew ahead. Leanin' on de Lawd, like yo' done told us to."

"De invite to lean on de Lawd don' mean for yo' to go to bed on him, yo' triflin' lout! Take yo' hoofs out'n dat seat and set up straight or I's gwine te ax de rushers to rush you out!"

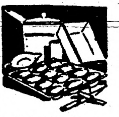
HOT BREADS FOR COOL DAYS

Hot breads served occasionally are always enjoyed, especially on cold, wintry days.



Rye Popovers.—Mix and sift two-thirds of a cupful of rye meal, one-third cupful of flour, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt. Add gradually one cupful of milk, one teaspoonful of baking powder or one-half teaspoonful of soda, if sour milk is used, two beaten eggs and one teaspoonful of butter. Turn into very hot iron gem pans and bake in a hot oven about one-half hour.

Cream Delights.—Mix and sift one and one-half cupfuls of good pastry flour with one teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of baking powder. Add very slowly enough thick cream to make a dough soft enough to roll out. Pat and roll as thin as possible. Shape with a cutter, prick with a fork and bake in a moderate oven. Serve with salad.

Currant Nut Muffins.—Mix two tablespoonfuls of sugar with three tablespoonfuls of melted butter, one well-beaten egg, and two cupfuls of sifted flour with three teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Add one-fourth cupful each of dried currants and nut meats, one cupful of milk and beat well. Drop into greased muffin pans and bake one-half hour in a moderate oven.

Rice Muffins.—Mix and sift two cupfuls of flour with three teaspoonfuls of baking powder and one tablespoonful of sugar. Work in one cupful of cooked rice—the brown variety is best—add one well-beaten egg, two tablespoonfuls of melted butter. Beat well and bake in hot greased gem pans for one-half hour in a quick oven.

Drop Doughnuts.—Take one and one-half cupfuls of flour sifted with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a pinch of ginger and a grating of lemon rind for flavor; add one beaten egg and one-half cupful of milk; add a pinch of salt, mix well and drop by teaspoonfuls into hot fat. Roll in sugar and serve warm.

The hedgerows cast a shallow shade
Upon the frozen grass,
But skies at evening song are soft,
And comes the Candlemas.

FOOD FOR THE FAMILY

Oysters are so universally liked that any variation in serving them is welcomed.

Broiled Oysters.—Drain large oysters, wipe dry, season with salt and pepper and arrange in a fine wire broiler; broil over a quick fire until the edges curl. Serve on toasted crackers and spread with Maitre. d'Hotel Butter.—Beat one-fourth of a cupful of butter to a cream, beat in one-half teaspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper and add very slowly one tablespoonful of lemon juice.

Velvet Cake.—Cream one-half cupful of butter, add gradually one and one-half cupfuls of sugar, the yolks of four eggs beaten thick, and one-half cupful of cold water. Mix and sift one and one-half cupfuls of flour, one-half cupful of cornstarch and four teaspoonfuls of baking powder; add to the first mixture, then add the stiffly beaten whites folded in lightly. Put into a pan and sprinkle with almonds and powdered sugar. Bake forty minutes in a moderate oven.

Raised Doughnuts.—Crumble one yeast cake into one cupful of scalded milk which has been cooled. When the yeast is well-blended and two eggs beaten light, one-third of a cupful of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of butter, and about four cupfuls of flour; mix to a soft dough and knead ten minutes; cover and set aside over night out of drafts. In the morning roll into a sheet one-half inch thick and cut into rounds; let stand until doubled in bulk, fry in deep fat. Before serving, shake in a paper bag with a few tablespoonfuls of sugar, one doughnut at a time.

Sweet Potato Waffles.—Mix one cupful of mashed, cooked sweet potatoes, pressed through a ricer; add one cupful of sifted flour, one-fourth cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of melted butter or fat, and one cupful of milk. Add one well-beaten egg yolk and the stiffly-beaten white; fold in at the last. Cook on a greased waffle iron.

Chocolate Walnut Cookies.—Beat four eggs very light, add one pound of brown sugar and stir well. Add one-fourth of a pound of bitter chocolate (grated), one-half teaspoonful of vanilla. Then mix all the ingredients and add one cupful of English walnut meats and two cupfuls of flour, or enough to make a drop batter. Drop by teaspoonfuls on baking sheet and bake in a moderate oven.

Figures Show Importance of Breeding and Selection—War on Tuberculosis.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The improvement of all kinds of farm live stock through breeding and selection, the development of better methods of feeding, the study of animal diseases and parasites, the protection of the industry from plagues which menace it from other countries, and the search for new facts concerning food values of animal products—in all these directions progress has been made during the last year, according to the annual report made to the secretary of agriculture by the bureau of animal industry. The large figures involved show the great importance of the work being done for the industry based upon the production of meat, milk, work, and wool.

Animals Inspected.

More animals were inspected by the department at various slaughtering establishments during this twelve-month period than during any similar period in the history of the live stock business in this country. The number of animals slaughtered under inspection was more than 73,000,000, which exceeded the previous record by 2,000,000 animals. This inspection protects the consuming public against unwholesome meats and in many cases serves to acquaint producers with the condition of herds on the farm.

The battle against cattle tuberculosis has been going forward rapidly, according to the report. At the close of the fiscal year there were more than 615,000 cattle in 28,526 herds officially accredited as free of the disease, a 76 per cent increase in the number of these herds over the preceding year. The plan of cleaning out the plague in entire counties at one time is becoming popular. Fifty additional counties were freed during the year, raising the total to 81. In the course of the year the tuberculin test was applied to nearly three and a half million cattle, most of these found diseased being slaughtered under inspection and the owners indemnified with federal, state and county funds. Areas in which practically all the tuberculous animals have been removed are now designated as "modified accredited areas," an arrangement which permits shipments of cattle from these areas without the usual restrictions.

Animal Diseases Watched.

There has been no foot-and-mouth disease in the United States for a number of years, but the danger of its introduction is great because of the presence of the highly contagious malady in Jamaica. The department's quarantine forces have been on the alert and so far have prevented its entrance; precautions have been taken, in case it should pass our borders, to have the defensive organization ready for immediate action. During the year, the report says, the dangerous disease known as surra was found in the blood of five dromedaries, offered for importation and inspected at one of the government's quarantine stations.

Live stock improvement is being stimulated through a movement, called the "Better Sires—Better Stock" campaign, in which farmers and breeders are induced to pledge themselves to use only pure bred male animals on their farms. At the end of the year there were nearly 12,000 live stock owners who had made this pledge. A questionnaire sent out to several hundred farmers brought out the most troublesome problems in the feeding of farm animals. As a result of the department's offer to assist, many special problems in animal nutrition have been sent in for solution or suggestions. A study was made of the meat yields of the different farm animals, the results showing that the types recognized as best by judges at the leading shows are much superior to poorly bred stock from the meat production standpoint.

The animal industry work has been brought to the attention of the public in various ways, including bulletins, articles in newspapers and farm papers, through exhibits at shows and fairs, and by means of motion pictures.

Legume Crops Developed With Natural Limestone

Use of its natural limestone resources has greatly assisted St. Charles county, Missouri, in developing its legume crops from a very small acreage to over 30,000 acres of clover. 1,000 acres of alfalfa, and extensive plantings of soy beans and cowpeas in 1923, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture. These are especially important crops to St. Charles farmers as dairying is one of their principal industries. No limestone was being used in the county and practically no clover or alfalfa grown when extension work had begun there in 1918. That year the agricultural extension agent secured the co-operation of about forty farmers in using lime on acid soil as a preparation for growing legumes.

Successful demonstrations of the benefits of lime have increased each year and community limestone crushers for utilizing local limestone have been installed to supply the lime. In three year's time four crushers had been established and this year 11 have been in use. Since 1920 over 3,000 tons of lime have been used in the county annually, and up to September 1 of this year, 3,000 tons have been applied, providing for a considerable increase in the legume acreage.

Successful Year for Boy and Girl Growers

Youthful Arkansas Farmers Make Money on Crop.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The Junior Potato Growers' Association of Garland County, Ark., is composed of 90 farm boys and eight farm girls, ranging in age from about fourteen to eighteen years. They are all members of the boys' and girls' potato clubs in which, under the guidance of the county agricultural extension agent, they are learning to practice the best-known methods of growing potatoes and preparing them for market.

These young farmers organized their own growers' association, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture, elected officers, appointed committees, including a buying and a marketing committee, and selected one variety of potato which all members agreed to grow.

They finished harvesting their 1923 crop and on October 16 rendered a businesslike account of their year's accomplishments to the Hot Springs Lions club, which has given the association support.

The members grew, the report states, 786 bushels of No. 1 grade potatoes and over 500 bushels of No. 2's, producing altogether 1,300 bushels. They marketed their crop co-operatively, receiving $1,644 for it. The cost of production was $658; the net profit $986, about 74 cents per bushel. The member making the highest yield harvested 27.5 bushels from one-eighth acre plot. A number of the members, according to the report, have started bank accounts with their earnings and practically all expect to continue the work next year.

The report, signed by the president and secretary, is written on the printed letterheads of the association, which bears the names of the boys and girls who are officers and members of the buying and marketing committees.

Plant Potatoes Before Corn to Get High Yield

Planting potatoes after the corn has been put in, a practice followed by many corn-belt farmers, does not produce the best results, according to a five-year experiment conducted cooperatively by the United States Department of Agriculture and the Iowa experiment station. The fact that the minimum growing temperature for potatoes is fully 10 degrees lower than for corn would make the reverse of this practice seem advisable, and yields from plantings made on various dates from early April to the middle of June have proved this contention to be sound. The early planting also has the advantage of an early fall market when prices usually are better than a little later when marketing is in full swing.

In this experiment the Rural New Yorker variety was used and the dates of planting were set at ten-day intervals, beginning April 10. The seasonal rise in temperature reaches the 40-degree line in central Iowa usually a little before the middle of April. The best yields were obtained from plantings made shortly after the temperature passed the 40-degree line. Plantings made after the middle of May produced a successive decline in yield, and between the first and last plantings there was a spread of 65 bushels an acre. The average for the five years for the April planting was 124.4 bushels and for the plantings made the first half of June 76.2 bushels per acre.

Hen House Ventilation Is of Much Importance

Ten hens breathe off over a pint of water a day. Are you providing ventilation to get this out of the house, or do your hens take a continuous cold bath day and night, without a towel for a rub down? Even you would get the roup under such conditions. Watch out for moisture on the windows and frost on the walls. Put in one square foot of thin cloth curtain to every fifteen square feet of floor. Keep this curtain open whenever weather permits. Draughts and damp air and floors cause more colds than zero weather. Exercise helps to prevent colds. Light feeding in a clean, dry litter eight inches deep induces exercise.—O. C. Krum, Poultry Specialist, Colorado Agricultural College.

Destroy Chinch Bugs by Burning Off Vegetation

Considerable damage was done by chinch bugs last year. This pest is carried through the winter in the mature state, hiding in fence rows and other places where they can find protection under grass and weeds through the winter season. They are now all congregating in places of that sort and the way to get rid of them is to burn off the vegetation. This will destroy many of them and those that are not killed in that way will find no protection and sooner or later will succumb to the cold.

Solve Wheat Problem by Feeding All Live Stock

Bread-saving habits formed in wartime and needlessly continued now are limiting the consumption of wheat in this country to the disadvantage to both producer and consumer, say officials of the Department of Agriculture. They assert that a return to pre-war food habits in the use of wheat by the public and the feeding of low-grade wheat to live stock would greatly help to solve the wheat problem.

DAIRY

Fit Methods to Follow in Production of Cream

Since at the present time, our farmers who are milking a few good dairy cows, are generally better fixed, financially, than those following almost any other line, it seems that we should pay particular attention to the handling of the product, that it may be put on the market in the best condition possible and thereby bring the biggest returns.

Methods which will aid in producing a good product:

Keep the barn and cows clean. Remove manure from stable twice daily. Wipe udder and flanks with a damp cloth, before milking.

Milk with dry hands, into a small top milk pail.

Separate while warm, to insure less waste in the skimmilk.

Wash separator thoroughly after each separation. Use a brush rather than a rag. First use warm water and washing powder, then scald all parts thoroughly.

Do not separate into vessel containing the cooled cream. Cool freshly separated cream before adding it to previous skimming.

Stir cream thoroughly every time a fresh supply is added, using a stirrer manufactured for the purpose.

A cooling tank should be on every farm. Run the water pumped for live stock through the cream tank and then into the stock tank.

Keep cooled cream in a sanitary place which is cool, sanitary, free from odors and well aired.

Cream should be delivered to market at least three times a week in summer and twice in winter.

Cream should not be allowed to freeze.—L. K. Crowe, assistant professor, animal husbandry, Colorado Agricultural college.

Brass Letters on Cans Will Prevent Much Loss

When the owner's initials or number is painted on his cream cans, they have to be remarked frequently, as the marks become dim, due to washing and shipping. In order to avoid this I solder brass letters to the sloping part of the can, just below the neck, writes W. R. Taylor of Missouri in the Rural New Yorker. Copper or brass letters can usually be purchased at the variety stores, but if not to be obtained they can be cut from a piece of sheet brass or copper with a pair of tinner's shears and a narrow chisel. Letters or figures made of aluminum will not do, as they are very difficult to solder. Cans so marked can always be easily identified and thus loss will be prevented. The lids should be stenciled or marked to correspond.

Dairy Cow Is Necessity, Claims Florida Expert

"As feed prices continue to soar, and the price of land increases, so will the dairy cow replace to a very large extent the beef steer, the sheep, and the pig as a producer of human food," says John M. Scott of the University of Florida experiment station. "And about the only rival the dairy cow has is the busy hen."

The dairy cow and the hen are the only two farm animals that produce good, nourishing food day after day, when properly cared for. They provide foods that are indispensable in the home.

"What is home without milk and eggs?" asks Mr. Scott. These items enter so largely into the preparation of food for the family, the cow meaning life itself to thousands of children.

"We owe the cow and the hen a debt that can be paid only by giving them the very best of care that they may produce the maximum amount of food," says Mr. Scott. And neither of them are now receiving the attention that will be theirs when their full value is realized.

Cow Is Highly Nervous and Is Easily Excited

The cow is a highly-strung nervous organism and easily excited, shocked or affected in one way or another to the resultant lessening of her milk flow. Turning her out on a cold, windy or wet day to drink ice-cold water causes a serious shrink in milk production. Weigh the milk night and morning, without fail, every day of the year and watch the record. That tells the story of such shrinks.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Four Hundred Twenty-nine Dollars ($429.00), which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain Mortgage duly executed and delivered by Alfred Larson and Lillie Larson, his wife, Mortgagors, to Deposit Trust and Savings Bank, Mortgagee, bearing date the 3rd day of November, 1920, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Marshall and State of Minnesota on the 12th day of November, 1920, at 8:00 o'clock A. M., in Book 97 of Mortgages, on page 629; which said Mortgage together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Deposit Trust and Savings Bank, Mortgagee, to Mrs. Julia B. Witherbee by written assignment dated the 14th day of January, 1924, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds, on the 19th day of January, 1924, at 8:00 o'clock A. M., in Book 110 of Mortgages, on page 215;

And Whereas, The said Mrs. Julia B. Witherbee, the Assignee and Holder of said Mortgage, has duly elected and does hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said Mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, under the terms and conditions of said Mortgage and the power of sale therein contained; and whereas there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable at the date of this notice the sum of Two Thousand Nine Hundred Seventy-seven and 46-100 Dollars ($2,977.46), which said amount includes the sum of Two Hundred Ninety-one and 13-100 Dollars ($291.13) paid by said Mrs. Julia B. Witherbee to the County Treasurer of Marshall County, on the 13th day of December, 1923, for taxes for the years 1920, 1921, and 1922, including penalty and interest, against the mortgaged property, together with the interest on said payment from the 13th day of December, 1923, to the date of this notice which last mentioned interest amounts to the sum of Ninety-seven Cents ($.97); and whereas the said power of sale has become operative, and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said Mortgage, or any part thereof;

Now, Therefore, Notice Is Hereby Given, That by virtue of the power of sale contained in said Mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said Mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said Mortgage, viz:

The Northeast Quarter of Section Thirty-three (33) in Township One Hundred Fifty-six (156) North of Range Forty-one (41) West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, in Marshall County and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Marshall County, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Warren, in said County and State, on the 3rd day of March, 1924, at two o'clock P. M., of that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of Two Thousand Nine Hundred Seventy-seven and 46-100 Dollars ($2,977.46), and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and Fifty Dollars ($50.00) Attorney's fees as stipulated in and by said Mortgage in case of foreclosure and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated, January 14th, 1924.

There were 878,352 acres of government land in Minnesota open to homesteaders on Jan first Nineteen hundred twenty four. The land is mainly in Lake of the Woods, Roseau, Beltrami and Clearwater counties, and is mostly wooded lands with some heavy timber in the Northwest Angle --- which is that point of Minnesota that sticks up from the north boundary just west of Lake of the woods. Nearly all of it is under the jurisdiction of the United States Land Office at Crookston. Soldiers of the late war are allowed to count their time in the military service as residence on a homestead.

NO BOON IN CHEAP MONEY

One thing that has to be given up is the idea that cheap money is always good for business. Farmers want cheap money, business men want cheap money, stock speculators want cheap money, the U. S. Treasury wants to float government loans on cheap money, socialists, anarchists and old-line greenbackers want very, very cheap money. Everybody feels that when the money rate is shoved up it is an arbitrary damper on prosperity.

But we cannot have both a low rate on money and a stable level of prices. We can have one or the other—not both together for any length of time. A low rate of money means an inflated price level. A stable price level means a fluctuating rate of discount. That is, the public must learn to look at the price level instead of the bank reserves, as their measure of expectation for a rise or fall of the value of money.

Now this fact makes me feel that a mistake is made if we do not fully explain to the public the power already exercised by the bank rate and the Federal Reserve Board and Reserve banks. Our bankers and economists see the bad use that is likely to be made of political control of banking and currency and they try to make the people believe that so intricate a question must be left to experts.

As a matter of fact our present methods encourage the very thing we wish to avoid. We let everybody believe that low rates on money are necessary for prosperity and then when bank reserves run low on account of the effects of this belief, we are suddenly compelled to jump the rates to protect the reserves. We get both a cycle of prices and a cycle of bank rates, whereas, if the public understood that the rise of bank rates should not wait until bank reserves are low, but the rates should be advanced several months ahead for the very purpose of preventing a fictitious prosperity with its inflated price level, then the public might be satisfied to support the administrative regulations which raise the rates at a time when there seems to be no need of doing it.—John R. Commons, University of Wisconsin.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage containing a Power of Sale, by reason of which default said Power of Sale has become operative, and the Assignee of the Mortgagee hereinafter named is authorized to declare the whole sum due, and she hereby does declare said sum due, which mortgage was executed by Valentine John Price and Mary Price, his wife, Mortgagors to Holt State Bank of Holt, Minnesota, a corporation under the laws of the state of Minnesota, Mortgagee dated October 8th, A. D., 1919, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota, on the 13th day of October, A. D., 1919, at 9 o'clock A. M., in Book 93 of Mortgages, on page 370,

Which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Holt State Bank of Holt, Minnesota, Mortgagee, to Deposit Bank of Winona, Winona, Minnesota, by written assignment dated October 20, A. D., 1919, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota, on the 28th day of November, 1919, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 90 of Mortgages, on page 595,

Which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Deposit Bank of Winona, Winona, Minnesota, to Mrs. Grace D. Hopkins, by written assignment dated January 23, A. D., 1920, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota, on the 23rd day of November, A. D., 1923, at 10 o'clock A. M., in Book 110 of Mortgages, on page 185,

And whereas, the said Mrs. Grace D. Hopkins, the assignee and holder of said mortgage on December 19, 1923, paid delinquent taxes upon the mortgaged property hereinafter described in the sum of One Hundred Seven and 14-100 ($107.14) Dollars; and whereas, the said Mrs. Grace D. Hopkins, the assignee and holder of said mortgage, has duly elected and does hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, under the terms and conditions of said mortgage and the Power of Sale therein contained; and whereas there is actually due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of Forty-five Hundred ($4,500.00) Dollars, with accumulated interest from the 1st day of November, 1920, at the rate of six per cent per annum, and also the sum of $107.14 for taxes paid as aforesaid, with interest thereon from the 19th day of December, 1923, at the rate of six per cent per annum; and whereas, the said Power of Sale has become operative and no action or proceedings having been instituted at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

NOW, THEREFORE, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the Power of Sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and covered by said mortgage, viz:

The South Half of the Northeast Quarter (S½NE¼), the Southeast Quarter of the Northwest Quarter (SE¼NW¼), the North Half of the Southeast Quarter (N½SE¼), and the East Half of the Southwest Quarter (E½SW¼), of Section Fourteen (14), and the Northwest Quarter of the Northwest Quarter (NW¼NW¼), of Section Thirteen (13), all in Township One Hundred Fifty-five (155) North, of Range Forty-four (44) West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, in Marshall County and State of Minnesota.

Which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Marshall County at the Front door of the County Court House, in the City of Warren, in said County and State on the 11th day of March, 1924, at 11 o'clock A. M. of that day at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay the amount then due on said mortgage and interest and the sum of $107.14 for taxes paid on said described premises, with interest from date of payment, together sale and Seventy-five Dollars attorney's sale and Seventy-five Dollars attorneys fees stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure.

Dated January 16, 1924.

AN OPEN LETTER TO WOMEN

Tells of Mrs. Vogel's Terrible Suffering and How She Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Detroit, Michigan. — "My troubles were severe pains in my back and terrible bearing-down pains in my right side, also headaches and sleepless nights. I first began having troubles when I was 15, and they have increased as I grew older. A little booklet was left at my door, and I read what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for women and decided to try it. After the first week I could go to sleep every night and I stopped having that nervous feeling and got a better appetite. The doctor had always said that an operation was the only thing that would help me, but I never had any faith in an operation. Since the Vegetable Compound has started helping me I do not suffer the severe pains, feel stronger, and am able to do my own work. I am more than glad to tell my friends that it helps where other medicines have failed."—Mrs. Gus Vogel, 6608 Pelouze Street, Detroit, Michigan.

A record of fifty years service must convince women of the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

DAIRY FACTS

Use Eternal Vigilance in War on Tuberculosis

In fighting tuberculosis in cattle the old reliable eternal vigilance is as much the price of victory as in any other contest.

Men who are most closely in touch with dairy conditions say there is grave danger of reinfection even after the herd is clean.

They say that special care should be exercised in cleaning and disinfecting a barn after the removal of reactors. The dairyman should be sure that every corner is scrubbed, cleaned and disinfected.

The danger that cows from a clean herd will be infected at fairs, stock shows and sales is also said to be great. The cattlemen at the New York State Agricultural College at Ithaca go so far as to say that the farmer with the clean herd should refuse to exhibit his stock unless he is quite sure that the regulations permitting only the entry of tuberculin-tested stock are stricly enforced.

The pasture offers another source of infection. Even if the farmer is sure his herd is clean, the cattle may get the germs from a stream which carries them from another pasture in which tubercular cows are kept. One herd was known to have become infected by drinking from a stream which flowed through a slaughter house yard where reactors were killed.

The calves need to be protected. They should not be fed milk which is even suspected of harboring the germs. Such milk can be made safe only by holding it at a temperature of 150 degrees for twenty minutes.

Different Methods for Hand Feeding of Calves

There is some difference in the method followed by farmers as to the time to begin hand feeding of the calf. Some take the calf away without allowing it to nurse at all. Others prefer to let it nurse once, and some allow it to remain with the cow three or four days or until the fever is out of the udder and the milk is fit for use in the dairy. It probably makes very little difference as to this point, but it is a fact easily established that the earlier the calf is taken from the cow, the easier it will be to teach it to drink.

If the cow's udder is in good condition when the calf is dropped, it will generally be more satisfactory to take the calf away early. When the udder is caked, it is best to leave the calf with her until this condition is removed. The point that must be kept in mind is that at first the milk from the mother should always be given the calf and not the milk from some other cow. The first milk, or colostrum, given by a cow is especially suited to the requirements of a young calf, as it has the property of acting as a physic and stimulating the digestive organs.

With the higher testing breeds, it is particularly desirable to take the calf away early or else exercise care that the calf does not eat too much of the high testing milk which may bring on digestive troubles that are difficult to overcome.

Vermont Station Favors Pumpkins for Dairy Cows

Pumpkins are a valuable feed for dairy cows. In composition they resemble mangels and are as valuable for cows. The tradition among farmers that pumpkin seeds increase the kidney excretions, tend to dry up cows, and hence should be removed before feeding has no good foundation. The seeds contain much nutriment and should not be wasted. The Vermont experiment station found two and one-half tons of pumpkins, including seeds, equal to one ton of corn silage.

They can be either fed in the barn or out in the pasture. When fed in the barn they should be cut in small pieces. If fed in the pasture they need only be broken in two pieces. Cows that have never been fed pumpkins must first learn to eat them before they relish them.

Alsike Clover Hay Very Good Feed for All Cows

Alsike clover hay is a very good feed for dairy cows. It is a little better than red clover hay. Feed cows all the alsike clover they will clean up without very much waste. For a grain ration take 400 pounds ground corn, 200 pounds ground oats and 100 pounds oilmeal. Mix and feed one pound of this mixture for every three to three and one-half pounds of milk produced if your cows are Jerseys or Guernseys and one pound for every three and one-half to four pounds of milk produced if your cows are Holsteins.

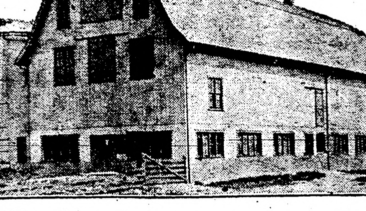
Overfeeding Is Dangerous.

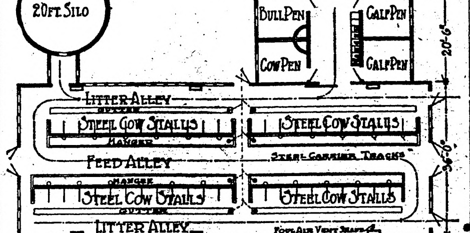
A newly freshened heifer is very likely to eat heartily of all kinds of food, especially grain, that is put before her, and right here is where the danger lies. The feeder must exercise good judgment right from the start.

Disease Is Dangerous.

Tuberculosis is a danger. A clean herd safeguards your family, increases herd value, protects the milk supply, is a protection to the buyer and a satisfaction to the seller.

Gambrel Roof Dairy Barn of Up-to-Date Construction





Floor Plan.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building work on the farm, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

This a gambrel-roofed dairy barn with cement foundation and frame upper structure and its plan emphasizes the kind of care such a structure should have in the building. It has been arranged to insure the best possible light, ventilation and cleanliness for the cows, the workers in this natural food factory, and also to make the work of the dairy farmer more efficient and therefore less heavy.

With its silo it should require the most careful planning from the farmer, both to have it fit logically into the farm building group of the farm and have the buildings represent a harmonious and well-balanced whole, and also to have it handiest to the feed lots, the pasture, the wind break and the lay of the land. The open yard shown in the illustration should be, by preference, to the south, enabling the dairy herd to be turned out for exercising at least some hours even in the winter. The barn itself ought to run north and south, as this will give it the maximum amount of sunlight obtainable. And sunlight, we know, is about the best conditioner, the best antispetic, any herd can have.

The dairy stable portion is about 9 feet in height. Nine feet is a good height; one might have less, in order to gain the greatest amount of mow space for hay storage above. Observe that the width is 36 feet. Authorities concede that this is an ideal width, since it provides for two rows of stalls without crowding, and the litter and feed alley are left of an ample width to make work easy. Here it may be well to observe that 36 to 38 feet is a good barn width. If you want a bigger barn than the one shown, the preference would be to extend it the long way, rather than across.

A very wide barn requires too much extra foundationing in the shape of beams, and the framing of it becomes more complicated, not to mention the matter of lighting. It would make the inner row of stalls too dark to be any good for the cows or the ones whose chore it is to attend them. A very long barn is as much to be advised against as a very wide one. Making the barn run around into an L or a U shape gets around the difficulty nicely, and besides has the added advantage of making a very sheltered yard.

In this barn the cows face each other across the central feed alley, with litter or cleaning alleys at the sides. The advantage of this is that sunlight falls on the gutters and stalls and keeps them sanitary. Then, too, the question of ventilation becomes more easy when the cows face inward, ventilation ducts can be built into the walls and so placed as to be quickly opened or adjusted to care for varying drafts.

The usual stall runs from 3 feet 2 inches to 3 feet 6 inches. The very narrow stall is not economical or efficient, and the advantage on the score of cleanliness is offset by discomfort caused the cows. The average wide stall allows the manure to fall to the gutter without too much soiling of the bedding or the stall. Since the gutter ought to be a little below the level of the stall—3 inches is a good drop—the matter of draining and cleaning is fairly well taken care of, without too much effort.

There are four box stalls: the bull pen, a cow pen and two calf pens. These are essential to any dairy barn, and the bull pen especially needs a little thought. It ought to be made about 9 feet across, to discourage Mr. Bull's efforts to try his strength in bracing and often bursting the pen.

The floor may be of hollow tile, concrete, wood blocks or of cork brick. The silo is placed at one end, in the most convenient position for easy feeding.

Built-In Feature Less Costly If Part of Plan

Considerable expense can be saved if the built-in features of the home are planned and arranged to be included in the specifications. It is the changing from one idea to another in home building that pyramids the cost and makes the original figure grow to unexpected size.

The kitchen arrangement should require considerable thought and the built-in features which make housework easy incorporated in the plan and made part of the original specifications. This feature is and should be the wife's part of home planning. It is a unit of the construction which should be hers to arrange and plan as she wishes and of which she has a far greater intelligent understanding than the male end of the firm.

The great advances made during the last few years in the practicability and convenience of built-in features has done much to eliminate wasted space, augment living comfort and reduce building cost. The built-in feature costs about the same as the portable type and from point of service and appearance has set an entirely new standard of excellence.

The cabinet kitchen with its built-in refrigerator, work table and pantry in a single unit is an excellent feature. These cabinets are built with an attractive arrangement of compartments for flour, sugar, tea, coffee, etc., with convenient dispensing features, together with receiving door and storage compartments. The cabinets occupy the least possible space, are wired for electrical equipment and are complete in every detail.

The breakfast room, or nook, has come highly popular and is an accepted feature in all modern homes. This room is a great labor saver, especially where there are children, and can be arranged in the smallest possible space with folding table and built-in seats. Proper arrangement of wall sockets for electrical equipment should be considered.

The wall or door bed is a feature which every home should take into consideration. Their installation arrangements are so perfected that it affords a perfect concealment, and when used are found to give the greatest amount of satisfaction and comfort in the knowledge that one has a utility bed for occasions which are always liable to come up.

Mothproof closets are being given considerable attention, and can be constructed at a very moderate cost.

Overheated Rooms Are Dangerous to Health

Precautions for avoiding the onslaught of pneumonia, now on the increase in Detroit, are given by Dr. Henry F. Vaughan, health commissioner of that city, who states that one way of combating the ravages of this disease during the cold season is to fortify the body against temperature changes. This, he says, can be done by living in cool rooms, by cool morning showers and by daily walking exercises in the open.

"We have developed a pernicious habit," declared Dr. Vaughan, "of living in atmospheres of 75 degrees to 80 degrees, instead of 65 degrees to 70 degrees. It seems to be a difficult thing to keep cool in winter. Homes are too hot, and so are restaurants, theaters, stores, schoolrooms and offices."

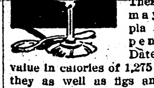
FOOD IN FIGS AND DATES



We are too prone to think of figs, dates and raisins as confections and luxuries — which they are and more; they are rich in food value. These dried fruits may take the place of more expensive foods. Dates have a food value in calories of 1,275 to the pound; they as well as figs and raisins are rich in sugar of a kind which is much more wholesome to take than the candy which is so popular.

Fig Salad.—Take two cupfuls of dried figs, four cupfuls of boiling water, one-fourth cupful of sugar, one-fourth cupful of vinegar, two and one-half tablespoonfuls of gelatin and one-half cupful of pimentoes. Cut the dried figs into halves, add the boiling water and soak at least three hours. Cook in the same liquid until tender, add the sugar a few minutes before removing from the heat. Drain the liquid off, the figs, measure, and if needed, add water to make one and one-quarter cupfuls of liquid. Add the vinegar and bring to the boiling point. Add the gelatin which has been softened in one-fourth cupful of cold water. Stir until the gelatin is dissolved. Arrange the halved figs and the chopped pimentoes in a mold, pour the gelatin mixture over and set aside to become firm. Serve on lettuce with mayonnaise.

Favorite Fig Cookies.—Cream one-half cupful of fat, add three-fourths of a cupful of sugar; when well mixed a beaten egg, one and three-fourths cupfuls of rolled oats which have been parched and thoroughly crisped, then put through the meat grinder; add three-fourths of a cupful of finely chopped figs. Mix and sift one and one-half cupfuls of flour with one teaspoonful of salt, three-fourths of a teaspoonful of cinnamon, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-half teaspoonful of cloves, one-half teaspoonful of nutmeg; alternate the dry ingredients with one-third of a cupful of milk. Mix thoroughly and drop from a teaspoon on baking sheets. Bake in a moderate oven about twenty minutes.

No talent will enable us to do any work without drudgery, but no childishness must tempt us to give up because it is hard. No work can be well done by anyone who is unwilling to sacrifice ease to its accomplishment.

HINTS THAT ARE HELPFUL

When cooking salt codfish do not boil—just simmer, for boiling toughens the fiber of the fish. It may be scalded and drained three times which will usually freshen it about right.

A good color to add to a gravy, as well as a bit of flavor, is a small crumbed ginger cooky; it thickens as well and can be used in a small amount without flour.

Machine or carriage grease may be easily removed from washable clothing by covering the spots with lard; let it stand to soak in and soften, then wash in soapsuds.

Fruit stains may usually be removed by placing the stained portion over a bowl and pouring boiling water through the stain. If it does not entirely fade let it lie for a few minutes in the water or pour more through it.

Coffee, cocoa, or tea stains should be soaked in cold water, especially if cream has been mixed with the liquid in tea or coffee. Then wring dry and pour boiling water through the stained portion.

When leaving wood tubs or pails for any length of time, fill them a third full of water, laying a thickness of paper in the bottom and around the sides. When the water has evaporated the paper will still hold moisture some time.

Aluminum griddles and frying pans may be cleaned to look like new if put on the coals in a furnace for a half hour or less. This is good for iron-frying pans—they may be left longer. Dripping pans, too, will be cleaned nicely this way, especially roasters or ones used for roasting.

Peroxide used with a bit of absorbent cotton wound around a toothpick will remove stains under the nails. Fingers stained from vegetables may be cleaned with a little oxalic acid. Dissolve a few crystals in water and dip the finger tips or rub the acid well into the stains, then remove with clear water. Peroxide is useful for many things, as is iodine. A cut or bruise if painted with iodine will often save infection.

The gummed grocers' paper is another convenience in doing up bundles, when traveling to put over corks in bottles and to seal anything leakable.

This is the season for roast goose. The Norwegian way to stuff a goose is to use chopped tart apples and stewed prunes, a most delicious stuffing for those who like it.

A combination of chopped pickles, peas and peanuts, makes a good salad.

Ways to Increase Fruit Production

Pruning Demands First Attention and Must Be Done Before Buds Open.

This is the time of the year for orchardists to be doing necessary things in the orchard to increase fruit production for next year. Of these, pruning the trees is one thing demanding first attention. R. F. Payne, extension horticulturist for the North Carolina State college and department of agriculture gives some simple suggestions for pruning the apple trees. He states first that this pruning must be done after the leaves fall and before the buds open in the spring. During this dormant season the tree is bare and it is easier for the operator to see just what he is doing.

Mr. Payne's suggestions about how to prune are as follows:

"The primary object of pruning is for fruit production, therefore the proper amount of wood must be produced. After the tree has reached bearing age, no attempt should be made to shape it as the period of training the tree is the first four years after it is planted. Heavy pruning should never be practiced during the period of fruit production. The practice will throw the tree out of the production of fruit into the production of wood, which is very undesirable.

"In pruning apples, all dead and diseased limbs should be removed, crossing branches should be removed or headed in, closely parallel branches should be taken out, rangy branches should be cut back, and the new growth that is not needed should be removed.

"The ends of the branches should not be stubbed back as this causes an excess of laterals on the branch in the vicinity of the wound, and less sunlight will be admitted. Where a whole branch is to be removed it should be taken out back to the parent branch. If the branch is growing too long and it must be headed back, the end should be taken out back to a lateral.

"Moderate dormant pruning is recommended as it gives the proper balance between the carbohydrates, nitrates and moisture which are essential to maximum fruit production. All fruiting wood should be conserved as fruit production is the main object now. Pruning wounds should not be painted or treated in any way as they heal more quickly if left untreated. Stubs should never be left as this will often result in loss of the tree by decay."

Ice Supply Is Necessary for High Quality Milk

In the production and marketing of high-quality milk and cream a supply of ice on the farm is almost a necessity, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Proper cooling and cold storage is said to be the greatest single factor influencing the bacterial content of milk from the time it leaves the cow until it reaches the consumer.

The department says that farmers should, if possible, put up at least 1½ tons of ice in the North and two tons in the South, for every cow in the milking herd. This will provide for cooling the milk, allow for melting, and provide a little surplus for household use. In winter, when work is not pressing on the farm, a little time spent in anticipation of the ice harvest will pay good returns. During this season old ice houses may be repaired and all the necessary equipment for harvesting ice provided.

Superior Mash Favored for Breeders and Layers

A good mash for breeding and laying hens of general-purpose breeds containing only 17 per cent of meat scrap has been developed by the United States Department of Agriculture. The remainder of the protein in the mash is contained in vegetable form and the 33 per cent of ground oats and bran gives the rations the desired bulk. The mash seems to be particularly good in raising the hatchability and fertility of eggs. The more stimulating rations seem to cause an overfat condition in general-purpose birds, especially during the second year of production. Special attention is now being given to the vitamin content of eggs and their fertility and hatchability as affected by rations.

Convert Milk Into Many Products of Importance

Whole milk as such is very palatable and highly nutritious. It can be converted into many other products of great importance in the human diet.

From 100 pounds of milk testing 4 per cent any one of the following foods can be made: 4.8 pounds of butter, 11 pounds of cheddar cheese, 45 15-ounce cans of condensed milk, 12.5 pounds of wholemilk powder, 8.5 pounds of Swiss cheese and 23 pounds of Camembert cheese. In addition there are numerous by-products such as whey and skim milk formed in the process of manufacture.

Give Proper Attention to Well-Being of Pigs

The pig's bed should be kept dry by frequent changes. Attention to this detail will result in greater profits. Other points include proper ventilation, feeding the pigs inside where it is warm, keeping their quarters sanitary and providing an abundance of pure water before the pigs at all times.

Campaign for Better Live Stock Is Shown

British Farmers Taught Advantages of Pure Breds.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

That the United States Department of Agriculture and the various states are not alone in carrying on a campaign for better live stock is shown by results collected by the bureau of animal industry. The ministry of agriculture for England and Wales has been working for nine years on a "Live Stock Scheme" which is a combination of the "Better Sires—Better Stock" campaign, co-operative bull associations, cow-testing associations and register of merit of the United States.

British farmers are being shown the advantages of using pure bred sires and the ministry of agriculture also is giving them financial assistance to enable them to use the improved methods of stock raising.

The "scheme" is now operating in practically every county of England and Wales. The latest report shows 831 societies and one individual using 747 bulls; and 93 societies and 451 individuals using 569 boars. This is an increase of 105 societies and 100 bulls over the previous year's enrollment.

One large dealer in Yorkshire says that he believes that cattle values in his district have increased fully $13.20 per head as a result of the work done by the British government. The same plan is being applied to the improvement of sheep and light horses.

Reports from countries in Europe, South America, Asia and Africa, where various methods for improving live stock are being used, also show a general activity in this field. The work is prompted, it is believed, by a growing recognition of the economic value of well-bred live stock.

Chinch Bug Campaign Is Necessary to Save Crops

Chinch bugs, like other insects, as every farmer knows, do not do the same amount of damage every year. Rather they appear periodically in large numbers. The reason for this is not difficult to understand. After the chinch bugs have increased in numbers for a period of years, parasites that live on them also become more numerous. Thus by the time the latter have become very numerous the parasites also become so numerous that they almost completely kill off the chinch bugs, and then we see little more of them for several years, or until they have had time to recuperate. When the chinch bugs have been destroyed, the parasites have nothing on which to live and they die off, which, in turn, again gives bugs full sway for a period of years, unless man steps in and destroys them. According to all indications, unless farmers put on a chinch bug campaign this winter the crops—small grains as well as corn—will be seriously injured next year. The individual farmer can do very little toward chinch bug extermination. Effective work can be done only through the co-operation of the farmers in whole communities.

Fertilizer Great Help to Grower of Potatoes

Earl F. Miller, according to announcement, leads all other members of the Jay county potato club, with a yield of 418.4 bushels of potatoes per acre. His methods, which may be of interest to other growers, are as follows:

For seed, he used certified Rural New Yorkers, his soil being a sandy loam. The seed was treated with formaldehyde. He applied 600 pounds per acre of a 2-12-6 fertilizer. One section of the field was left unfertilized. Yields were estimated from the weights of potatoes dug in representative sections of the fertilized and unfertilized areas. The potatoes receiving 600 pounds of 2-12-6 fertilizer, averaged 418.4 bushels per acre. Those from the unfertilized section averaged 194.6 bushels per acre less.

Leghorn Pullets Should Lay When 6 Months Old

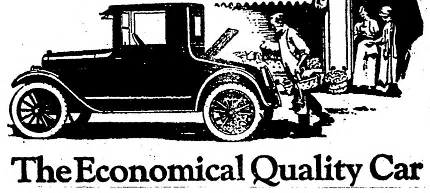
Leghorn pullets should weigh three to three and one-half pounds and start to lay when 180 days or six months old. The weight of the Rhode Island Reds should be five to five and one-half pounds and it will take about a month longer for them to mature than the Leghorns. It will take about seven and a half months for Plymouth Rocks to mature. Their weight at laying should be five and one-half to six pounds. If the pullets are to be forced by artificial illumination, it is a desirable practice to hold back pullets until the majority reach body maturity as judged by the weights above. Small eggs and lower annual production result in having egg production start before the pullets are mature.

Protect Fresh Concrete Before Water Evaporates

If newly placed concrete is left exposed to the wind and sun, before it has had time to harden, some of the water, which is necessary to harden it, will evaporate. Water is necessary to hardening of concrete, a chemical action goes on.

Thus floors and walks ought to be covered with earth and kept moist for about 10 days. This is common practice in concrete road construction.

Sand, gravel, cement, and water can be heated in winter and finished concrete covered with canvas with excellent results.



for Economical Transportation

CHEVROLET

The Economical Quality Car

Chevrolet prices are not the lowest on the market, yet Chevrolet economical transportation averages lowest in cost. This average cost considers the purchase price, interest on investment, depreciation and all operating and maintenance costs.

A detailed comparison with any other car in the low priced field will convince you that Chevrolet is the best buy because of its superior quality and because the purchase price includes full equipment.

More than a million Chevrolets are now in use. Twelve huge plants are now building them at the rate of twenty-five hundred per working day. Nearly one-half million Chevrolets were bought in 1923—far exceeding in number the sales of any other quality car.

Thus, our statements have the strongest possible backing, namely, the faith and patronage of the American people who know automobiles and know practical values better than any other people on earth.

Let any one of our seven thousand dealers show you our seven types of cars and explain how easy it is to get one and enjoy its use.

Knock or Boost?

Swinhem had invented a new hair restorer and had sent a large number of sample bottles out to various well-known people in the hope of securing some testimonials for advertising purposes.

"I don't know whether to publish this testimonial or not," he said to a friend who was calling on him as he was opening the letters.

"What does it say?" inquired the other.

"Well, it says," said the proud inventor, "before I used your hair restorer I had only three bald patches, now I have only one.'"

Lose Children Purposely

Women of the tenement districts have been known to purposely lose their children in crowds so as to have a holiday and to call at night at the various police stations, knowing their offsprings will ultimately be taken there.

Disappointed

"Aunt Hannah hailed from the Middle West, and had never seen the sea. Her nephew, who was doing well in the East, invited her to spend a month at his Asbury Park cottage. She accepted the invitation, of course.

"Well, as soon as she arrived, her nephew took her down to the boardwalk and showed her the boundless ocean, with its white foam and crashing breakers and fresh, salt-laden winds.

"'There!' he said. 'There, Aunt Hannah, is the Atlantic. What do you think of it?'

"'Humph,' said Aunt Hannah, 'I thought it was larger.'"

Well Qualified

"We want a man for our information bureau," said the manager. "He must be a wideawake fellow and accustomed to complaints."

"That's me," replied the applicant. "I'm the father of twins."

What We Forget Between 15 and 50

Schools teach, and nearly every home applies the rule against coffee and tea for children.

When middle age comes, a great many people remember the facts about the caffeine drug of coffee and tea, and how its regular use may disturb health. Often they have cause to remember what it has done to them.

How much better it would be not to forget—and avoid the penalties!

Postum is a pure cereal beverage—delightful, and safe for any age—at any time. Good for breakfast at home, for all the family; good for lunch at the club or restaurant; good with the evening meal; good with a late night dinner—good on any occasion. Postum satisfies, and it never harms.

Why not be friendly with health, all the time?

Postum for Health

"There's a Reason"

Your grocer sells Postum in two forms: Instant Postum [in tins] prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal [in packages] for those who prefer the flavor brought out by boiling fully 20 minutes. The cost of either form is about one-half cent a cup.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of One Thousand Five Hundred Thirty-three and 44-100 Dollars ($1,533.44), which said amount includes the sum of Four Hundred Fifty-six and 0-100 Dollars ($456.00), paid by Deposit Bank of Winona, Winona, Minnesota, to the County Treasurer of Marshall County, Minnesota, on the 13th day of June, 1923, for taxes for the years 1918, 1919, 1920, and 1921, including penalty and interest, against the mortgaged property, together with interest on said payment from the 13th day of June 1923, to the date of this notice, which said last mentioned interest amounts to the sum of Fourteen and 67-100 Dollars ($14.67); which said first mentioned sum also includes the sum of One Hundred and 60-100 Dollars ($100.60) paid by Deposit Bank and Trust Company to the County Treasurer of Marshall County, Minnesota, on the 13th day of December, 1923, for taxes for the year 1922, including penalty and interest against the mortgaged property; which said first mentioned sum is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain Mortgage duly executed and delivered by Earl Patten, a single man, Mortgagor, to D. B. Bakke, Mortgagee, bearing date the 26th day of October, 1918, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Marshall and State of Minnesota, on the 31st day of October, 1918, at 9:00 o'clock A. M., in Book 92 of Mortgages, on page 36; which said Mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby was duly assigned by said D. B. Strain on Human Body.

In hot weather the human body makes an extraordinary effort to adapt itself to conditions and meet the strain placed upon it. Violent overheating or great physical effort for a few hours causes the body to throw off some four liters of fluid. In other words, the perspiration secreted in a brief while is greater than the entire blood supply of the body.

Breadfruit.

The breadfruit, with the coconut and banana, furnishes the chief food of the natives of the Pacific islands. That is why we call it "breadfruit," because, for them, it takes the place of bread. Apart from its fruit, the tree itself is a very useful one, for, when beaten out, the inner bark forms a fine white cloth called tapa cloth.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage containing a Power of Sale, by reason of which default said Power of Sale has become operative, and the Assignee of the Mortgage hereinafter named is authorized to declare the whole sum due, and she hereby does declare said sum due, which mortgage was executed by Hans Stensrud and Nora Stensrud, his wife, Mortgagors to Deposit Trust & Savings Bank of Winona, Minnesota, a corporation under the laws of the State of Minnesota, Mortgagee dated November 4, A. D. 1920, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota on the 12th day of November, 1920, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 103 of Mortgages, on page 28.

Which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Deposit Trust & Savings Bank of Winona, Minnesota Mortgagee to Mrs. Ida I. Johnson, by written assignment dated December 2, 1920 and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota on the 3rd day of December A. D. 1923, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 110 of Mortgages, on page 197,

And, whereas, the said Mrs. Ida I. Johnson, the assignee and holder of said mortgage, has duly elected and does hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, under the terms and conditions of said mortgage and the Power of Sale therein contained; and whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of Two Thousand [$2000.00] Dollars, with accumulated interest from the 4th day of November 1920 at the rate of six and one-half per cent per annum; and whereas, the said Power of Sale has become operative and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof,

NOW, THEREFORE, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the Power of Sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and covered by said mortgage, viz:

Lot Ten, Section Two and East Half Northwest Quarter, Section Eleven, in Township One Hundred Fifty-six North, of Range Forty-two West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, in Marshall County and State of Minnesota.

Which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Marshall County at the Front door of the County Court House, in the City of Warren, in said County and State on the 11th day of March 1924 at 10:30 o'clock A. M. of that day at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay the amount then due on said mortgage and interest, together with the costs and disbursements of such sale and Seventy-five Dollars attorneys fees stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure.

In King Tut's Time.

Folks in King Tut's time were not so slow. Carl Mitman, in cataloguing the ship models in his department of the Smithsonian Institution, points out that Egyptians built boat hulls of the correct form for speed nearly 4,000 years before modern scientific designers arrived at the same conclusions. Vikings had the right idea and Malay pirates had the waveline theory of construction down to perfection when English and American sailboats were clumsy tubs.

Seems So.

Beaufort, N. C.—The four masted schooner Anna M. Records, was abandoned by its crew off Cape Lookout Shoals, because of its waterlogged condition and was towed into Cape Lookout cove by a wrecking tug, which had taken the crew off.

Columbia, Mo.—David Sarnoff, vice-president and general manager of the Radio Corporation of America, sent a message to Iwaki station, Japan, and received his answer by telephone. the message traveling 14,000 miles in 1 minute, 45 seconds.

Philadelphia—Pistols for this city's 1,600 firemen, and 100 additional motorcycles for the police force were announced by Director of Public Safety Smedley D. Butler as his latest plan for the suppression of banditry, following an appeal to the firemen to "pitch in and help the police."

Chicago — Dr. Henry F. Helmholtz, head of the section of children's diseases at the Mayo clinic, Rochester, Minn., will be the principal speaker at the annual meeting of the Infant Welfare Society of Chicago, at the Opera club. He will talk on "The Future of Infant Welfare Work."

Seattle, Wash.—President Warren G. Harding's last bit of hand-set type —set while visiting in the office of the Fairbanks (Alaska) News-Miner, on his trip to the territory last summer—will be presented to the Associated Press at its annual meeting in New York, Sept. 13, according to a message received here from W. F. Thompson, editor and publisher of the Fairbanks newspaper.

Los Angeles—Vilkjalmur Stefansson, arctic explorer, has decided to turn his attention to the little known areas of Australia, he announced at a banquet given in his honor here by the Adventurers club of Los Angeles. It is his intention to devote six months to exploration and research on the continent with a view to writing a suitable geography of that part of the world, he said.

New Orleans—Reversing the decision of the federal district court of southern Florida, the United States circuit court, of appeals ordered that the $11,000,000 damage suit filed by Edward H. Huff, of Miami, Fla., against the Ford Motor company of Detroit be remanded to Florida for hearing before a federal judge instead of a jury. It was held that the matter in question was one of equity and the presence of a jury was not necessary.

New York—Discovery of a serum for scarlet fever was announced by Dr. A. R. Dochez, associate professor of medicine at Columbia university.

Cincinnati—Benjamin Franklin Purnell and others of the House of David in Michigan lost a motion filed in United States circuit court of appeals for summary reversal of their conviction in United States district court at Grand Rapids. Reversal was sought on the ground that John W. Hansel and others had failed to file their brief within the time limit. Appellate court granted the appellees

Atlanta—Declaring "I am emperor of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan," William Joseph Simmons, founder of the organization, in a signed statement called on fellow Klansmen to pay no attention to the order signed by H. W. Evans, imperial wizard, banishing him and E. Y. Clarke, imperial giant, from the "invisible empire."

Sports

New York—Harry Greb of Pittsburgh successfully defended his world's middleweight boxing title against Johnny Wilson of Boston, former titleholder, receiving the judge's decision at the end of a 15-round contest at Madison Square Garden.

Minneapolis—The seven-game fotball schedule played by the University of Minnesota last fall drew total attendance of 134,740 persons and net receipts to the Gopher institution were $132,900, it was shown in a statement made public by Albert J. Lobb, comptroller, and Conrad Seitz, who had charge of ticket sales.

New York—Tex Rickard's announcement of a 15-round decision match in New York between Jack Dempsey and Tommy Gibbons, St. Paul challenger, the first week in June, which Jack Kearns, hastened to explain from Hot Springs, Ark., was "news" to him and the champion, was made by the boxing promoter in the belief, he said, that Kearns would agree to it when he reached New York.

St. Paul — Mrs. William A. Miske and her three children are $8,500 richer as a result of the testimonial staged for them by sports writers of the Twin Cities at the Auditorium. Sportsmen of the Northwest showed their love for the late Billy Miske and their desire to do something substantial for his family by responding nobly with their pocketbooks. The show was a success financially and from a standpoint of entertainment.

Foreign

Mexico City—Negotiations are on foot for a loan of $100,000,000 to the Mexican government to be delivered in four instalments of $25,000,000 each, the Excelsior stated.

Athens—The Venizelos newspapers are jubilant over Great Britain's resumption of relations with Greece and express the hope that the United States will follow this lead.

Christiania—A strike of harbor workers in every part of Norway has commenced. The negotiations between the workers and the employers, aimed at preventing the strike, broke down after lasting since November.

Manila—General Emilio Aguinaldo, leader of the Philippine insurrection against the United States in 1898, took his first ride in an airplane as the guest of Brigadier General William Mitchell, assistant chief of the army air service.

Moscow—Reports of the arrest of Minister of War Trotsky, which have reached Moscow officials through various newspaper correspondents, are emphatically denied. Officials at the ministry of war recently said that Trotsky, who has been ill, had left Moscow for his health, and he was reported to have gone to the coast of the Black sea to recuperate.

Manila—The insular supreme court, in dismissing the mandamus proceedings brought by the democrat party leaders to compel Governor General Leonard Wood and other officials to reveal details of the expenditures of the $500,000 annual independence fund, says that whether such an inspection should be granted lies entirely within the discretion of the governor general.

Sydney—Lord Leverhulme, who is visiting Australia, has attacked the white Australian policy designed to bar Japanese and other eastern races. Entertained at the Rotary club, he said that Australia must be a white man's country in the same way that the United States and South Africa are dependent on colored workers in many spheres.

Madrid—The government's examination of the account books kept by the provincial authorities has disclosed that in at least two provinces —Cordova and Balajoz—two accounts are 29 years behind. In several other cases they are more than a score of years in arrears. Many of the provincial officials have been imprisoned by order of the military directorate for alleged malfeasance in office.

Paris—American banks in Paris have notified the government that they will cease delivering dollars to anyone excepting American citizens showing their passports or business houses importing from the United States and requiring dollars to make payments. The measure is expected to alleviate the exchange situation and bolster up the franc.

London—Most of the British overseas countries have returned the draft of the Anglo-American liquor treaty with their approval. Government officials here decline to name the delinquent dominions, but are hopeful their replies will be received before the present cabinet expires, so Foreign Secretary Curzon and his associats will have full credit for the execution of compact.

Paris—Americans and Englishmen living in Paris are alarmed at reports that the government intends to place an embargo on foreign spirits, cutting off high gin and whisky as a measure, to stabilize the exchange, as huge amounts of francs are paid to London monthly for liquor.

Tokio—Less than 40 persons were killed in Tuesday earthquake. One insane woman strangled her child and then killed herself because she feared death in the flames. A number of telephone girls reported killed were dug out of ruins injured. Fifty

SHIP BLOCKAGE IS "POSTPONED"

U. S. Warships Watch Tampico ---Embargo Delayed Until End of Present Month

Washington.—The rebel blockade of the port of Tampico has been "postponed" until the end of the present month, Rear Admiral Magruder reported to the navy department on his arrival off that port aboard his flagship, the cruiser Richmond.

Arrival of the Richmond, it is thought, not only assures the safety of the crew of the stranded cruiser Tacoma and reopens untrammeled communication with rebel controlled territory, but the proximity of the fleet presents a silent and emphatic warning to the revolutionists that their attempt to blockade Tampico must not interfere with American commercial vessels.

Although official silence has been maintained with reference to the blockade, there is every reason to believe that Admiral Magruder has wide discretionary powers, with the cruiser Omaha, six destroyers and the repair ship Prometheus joining the Richmond, however, the naval demonstration is regarded as being in itself sufficiently impressive to make unlikely any display of force against an American merchantman.

In a formal statement the state department announced that it had lodged vigorous protests with Adolfo De La Huerta against the placing of mines in the harbors of Frontera, Puerto, Mexico, and Vera Cruz, as "unwarranted threat against the commerce of the world."

In lodging the protest, the statement said, Consus Wood of Vera Cruz informed De La Huerta that if the mining operations were carried out or had already been partially or wholly carried out, and the mines were not immediately removed, "this government will be constrained to adopt appropriate measures to protest its commerce and its nationals."

STOCKMEN FOR FARM BILLS

Indorse Coulter and Wallace Measure; Crabbe Renamed President.

Grand Forks, N. D.—Resolutions petitioning congress to pass the Coulter livestock loan bill, and the senate to pass the measure suggested by Secretary Wallace providing for a government export agency to handle surplus wheat of the nation were adopted at the close of the North Dakota Livestock Breeders' association convention held here. About 100 stockmen attended.

S. F. Crabbe of Fargo was re-elected president of the association, and all other officers and directors were re-elected. Alex Currie of Cando was elected president of the Shorthorn breeders section.

Grand Forks was selected for the 1925 convention.

President John Lee Coulter of the North Dakota Agricultural college, who was scheduled to speak, was unable to attend.

Diversification of farming in North Dakota through development of the livestock industry and other branches of farming was urged by various speakers.

Farming will be one of the most stable industries in the nation during the next score of years, according to H. E. Rilling, state club leader, who declared that cities are becoming too crowded to continue paying large wages and that workers would turn to farms where more money could be made.

CARS PROMISED FOR 1924

Gunkleman, Back From Board Conference, Has Gormley's Promise.

Fargo, N. D.—"No matter how large a crop is produced in North Dakota in 1924 the carriers will be in position to provide sufficient cars," is the report of R. F. Gunkelman of Fargo, who has returned from the annual meeting of the Northwest Regional Advisory Board at Minneapolis last week.

"We were given his assurance from M. J. Gormley, chairman of the car service division of the American Railway association," said Mr. Gunkelman, "and Mr. Gormley has the power to set that his prediction is fulfilled."

North Dakota was given two memberships of, the seven on the important executive committee of the board at the annual election, Frank Milhollan, president of the North Dakota board of railroad commissioners, and Walter R. Reed of Fargo, both being named on the executive committee.

Mr. Gunkelman was again named vice-president from North Dakota. J. F. Reed, president of the Minnesota Farm Bureau federation, was re-elected president of the board.

Average Tax Was $68.37.

Washington.—An average of $68.37 for every man, woman and child in the United States was collected in taxes in 1922 by the national, state, county and city governments and all other civil divisions having power to levy and collect taxes. Taxes collected in that year amounted to $7,433,081,000, the census bureau announced. Taxes collected by the federal government in the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1922, amounted to $3,204,133,000, which was almost five times the amount collected in 1912.

U. S. GUNBOATS SENT TO MEXICO

Object of Fleet at Rebel Port Is to Protect American Shipping

Washington.—Eight fighting ships under the American flag have been ordered mobilized off Vera Cruz, Mexico, as a grim reminder to Mexican rebel leaders that peaceful American commerce must not be made the plaything of Mexican politics.

Orders were sent Saturday detaching the fast light cruisers Omaha and six destroyers from the battle fleets mobilized in Panama canal waters for winter maneuvers. They were directed to join the scouting fleet flagship Richmond off Vera Cruz. The ship Prometheus was included in the order. The Richmond, flying the flag of Rear Admiral Magruder, commanding the scouting fleet, arrived at Vera Cruz Sunday.

Announcement of the orders to the Omaha and the destroyers was made both by the state department and by Secretary Denby. No formal explanation was added by Mr. Denby to the terse statement that the ships were already moving toward Vera Cruz.

Await Rebel Action.

It was learned, however, that further movements of the vessels would depend upon the action of Mexican rebel craft seeking to blockade Tampico. If American merchant vessels are denied free passage into and out of that harbor, there can be no doubt that the Washington government is prepared to take forceful measures to clear the path for them.

So far as the reception of the American vessels at Vera Cruz is concerned, J. M. Alvarez Del Castillo, now in charge of the foreign relations department created by Adolfo De La Huerta, the revolutionary chieftain, who has arrived in Washington, asserted that they would be received "with the utmost courtesy and hospitality."

N. D. RAISES HALF OF FLAX

Almost Nine Million Bushels Produced in State, Statistics Show.

Fargo, N. D.—More than half of the 1923 flax crop in the United States was producel in North Dakota, according to the United States government final report. Farmers of this state produced 8,824,000 bushels of the total for the United States of 17,427,000 bushels. The average yield per acre for the whole country was 8.5 bushels per acre, while the North Dakota average was but 7.7 bushels per acre.

"Many North Dakota farmers know, however, that if the crop is properly handled on a good seed bed they will be able to produce more bushels per acre than the general average," comments H. L. Bolley, botanist at the North Dakota Agricultural college.

"The point I wish to emphasize is that the United States as a whole is not nearly raising the amount of flax seed that is necessary to produce the linseed oil and other products needed. In 1923 the imports from Argentina have been approximately 20,808,000 bushels; from Canada 2,,292,000 bushels.

"These two countries therefore furnished to the United States more seed than all of the states produced. Besides we have imported some hundreds of thousands of bushels from other countries such as India and China. The United States has also imported much of the competing oils."

INVESTIGATE CLOSED BANKS

Committee Appointed to Look Up Conditions in Country.

Washington.—The government took a further step toward alleviating the stringent credit situation among banks of the Northwest, the president designating four officials to study the problems at first hand. A statement from the office of Comptroller Dawes of the currency announcing the step, said:

"At the suggestion of the president, Mr. Dawes, comptroller of the currency; George R. James and J. H. Cunningham, members of the Federal Reserve board; and Eugene Meyer, Jr., managing director of the war finance corporation, are going to Chicago with the view of studying the western banking situation more closely."

The officials' plans call for a series of conferences in Chicago, after which means of dealing further with the situation will be worked out. It is probable some of them will visit other middle western cities for conferences with banks and bankers in an effort to gather sufficient funds to meet requirements of the small banks throughout the Dakotas, Montana, and Nebraska.

Irish Cut Part of Army.

Dublin.—With the intention of ultimately reducing the cost of the Free State army from $55,000,000 to $20,000,000, the salvage corps and nine infantry battalions have been disbanded, and the corps and service branch and the administration branch of the department of the chief of staff have been abolished and their duties placed upon the general staff. A military customs brigade which will assist customs officers on the northern border and patrol the roads, has been approved.

News Briefs from All the State

Condensed Stories of Happenings of the Week in Minnesota

St. Cloud—Fifty Minnesota county attorneys attended the annual two-day meeting of the county attorneys of this state.

Lake City — Millville now has a creamery. It opened for business with a run of 1,400 pounds of cream the first day.

Nashwauk — When Joe Jorgeson, 68 years old, a farmer, did not return to his home near here, a search was started and his body found a short distance from his home.

New Ulm — Rev. E. F. Wheeler, pastor of the Congregational church here for the last 18 years, has resigned and will accept a call to another city.

Marietta — At a special election here the village council was empowered by a vote of 95 to 51 to issue bonds for the construction of a water works system.

Marshall — Fire caused by an overheated chimney, resulted in a loss of $5,000 on the stock and $800 on the building of the Marshall Bottling works.

Thief River Falls — More than 40 patrons of the co-operative creamery have signed the patronage contract, giving assurance they will deliver their cream to their own co-operative institution for a period of five years.

Northfield — To serve 50 years as a member of the Northfield Volunteer fire department is the ambition of Chief R. C. Phillips of this city, who has just finished 48 years of service. Mr. Phillips is 70 years old.

Lake City — A total of 799 votes was cast in the straw vote on the county agricultural agent appropriation in Wabasha county. Of this total, 676 were opposed, while 123 favored, giving a majority of 553 in opposition.

Mankato — The Mankato Civic and Commerce association will allow citizens who have grievances against the way the community is being run next week when it will hold a "kick meeting," which will probably become an annual affair.

Willmar — A record for electrical energy furnished by the local municipal power plant was set during 1923 when a total of 1,126,000 kilowatt hours were furnished. The consumption has risen since 1915 when 400,200 kilowatt hours were used.

Owatonna—Plans for the organization of the Waseca county division of the Owatonna Co-operative Poultry and Egg association, an organization to provide marketing facilities for Steele, Waseca and Dodge counties, are being pushed by farmers.

Northfield — Charter amendments to modernize and improve the municipal government are being urged in Northfield. Through the efforts of Mayor Frank Curren, a new charter commission has been appointed to fomulate proposed changes in the city government.

St. Cloud — In the new home of John Clark of Rockville, one of the features is that radiophones have been installed in every room. All that is necessary is to "plug in" in any room and the events or amusements being broadcast by the big stations throughout the country come drifting in.

Nashwauk — Nashwauk is looking forward to a good mining season despite the apparent slackening in the industry elsewhere. The Hawkins mine, the largests here, has two shovels stripping and a large crew of men in the repair shop putting the equipment in shape.

Owatonna — The first meeting of the part time agricultural night school will be conducted at the high school agricultural rooms. The evening school offers a course in agriculture for persons not in the public schools. Dairying, swine production, poultry production, farm products and many other subjects will be taken up in the 12 weeks' course.

Montevideo — To return as superintendent of the division where he once worked as a section hand is the experience of Martin Flanigan, of this city, who leaves this week for Marion, Iowa, to become superintendent of the Iowa division of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway. Forty years ago he started railroad work as a section worker under his father on the Iowa division of the railroad.

Minneapolis — Three thousand lumbermen of Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Iowa are gathering in Minneapolis for the thirty-fourth annual convention of the Northwestern Lumbermen's association, held in the assembly room at the court house. George . Rose, president of the association, presided at a meeting of the directors, at which the $50,000,000 live stock loan bill, now before Congress, was one of the chief matters under discussion.

Willmar — The most gravelling ever done by Kandiyohi county was carried on the last year. One hundred miles in the county of road was graveled with state aid roads. Fifty more miles of such roads are now being surveyed.

Madison — Unless the misunderstanding between the city council and the fire department is patched up within the next few days, Madison will be without a fire department after Feb. 1 The firemen have endeavored to have the council purchase modern equipment but the council has been slow in acting.

Duluth — Fire losses during 1923 in Duluth were more than double during the year 1922. The total for 1923 was $691,712 and for 1922 the total was $308,885.

Willmar—The largest poultry show in Kandiyohi county conducted. Six hundred birds of all varieties are entered. Premiums amounting to $400 are being awarded winning entries.

Willmar—Rev. F. J. Elmon of Sioux City, Iowa, has signified his intention of accepting a call extended to him by the congregation of the Swedish Lutheran church at Svea.

Minneota—A few days ago Herman J. Huse, a farmer, read about an Iowa farmer exhibiting an ear of corn which had 1,006 kernels. He went out and picked up one, that had a total of 1,270 kernels.

Hibbing—A jury in district court returned a verdict in favor of Nick Molick against the Great Northern railroad. The verdict was for $[illegible],200 for injuries suffered while the plaintiff was in the employ of the railroad.

St. Cloud—The Sauk Valley Farmers club is the most active club of its kind in Stearns county, if not in the state. The club is now planning to have farmers' institute and farm show at St. Cloud soon.

Mankato—Proposed expenditure of $150,000 by the Standard Oil company of Indiana in this city in the erection of warehouses, garages, repair shops, paint shops, offices and storage station for bulk equipment, was announced to city officials by J. J. Meyer, a representative of the company.

Pipestone—The case wherein the relatives of William Knuth who was electrocuted on the streets here on the night of Sept. 28, sought to recover $7,500 from the city, came to an abrupt end in the district court here when Judge L. S. Nelson dismissed the action.

Red Wing—Fire losses in 1923 in Red Wing were but $21,513.71, as compared to $19,779.11 in 1922, according to the annual report of Chief John A. Gross. Losses in the last year were covered by insurance to the extent of $19,714.52 on both buildings and contents.

Willmar—Efforts are being made by the Sisseton, S. D., Commercial club to have another route to the Twin Cities via Willmar marked as a new trail. The route is a scenic one, has few railroad crossings and curves, and is a splendid graveled and graded highway.

Red Wing—County roads in Goodhue county are to be marked in much the same manner as the state trunk highways, according to J. A. Prior, county superintendent of roads. The county markers will be in black and white instead of black and yellow, as used by the state.

Minneapolis—Fairmont, Minnesota, gave a 45-minute program over WLAG under the direction of Frank A. Day, Fairmont Publisher, facts and figures about Fairmont and Martin county were given by County Attorney Allen. Former Mayor L. C. Hodgson of St. Paul recited his poem "My Visit To Fairmont."

New Ulm—New Ulm won its second debate of the state championship series here by defeating Wells high school, 3 to 0. The question was: "Resolved, European Immigration Into the United States Should Be Prohibited by Law for a Period of Five Years." The New Ulm team had the affirmative.

Center City—Chisago county minutemen, organized into 11 groups, are ready to combat criminals who invade the county following an organization meeting here. Adequate protection of life and property, despite the deficiencies in police facilities of the state is the aim of the new vigilante groups.

Winona—Employees of the Chicago & North Western Railway division shops in this city have voted to adopt a five day week in preference to accepting a layoff of 100 of their number. The shopmen were offered the alternative of reduced working hours or a reduced force as a part of the curtailment program.

Faribault — Shattuck school will receive a bequest of $100,000 from the estate of the late Charles Stocklein, former Faribault merchant, and graduate of the academy. The will of Mr. Stocklein leaves the property in charge of the Minneapolis Trust company and directs that the income be paid to certain heirs for life. Afterward the entire estate will be turned over to Shattuck. Mr. Stocklein was found dead in Minneapolis several months ago.

Minneapolis—Industrial and financial leaders of the East and the spokesmen for agriculture in the Southwest are lining up in support of the $50,000,000 livestock loan bill, Dr. John Lee Coulter, president of the North Dakota Agricultural college, said. The fact that other sections of the country are giving their support to the measure now before Congress, indicates that national interest in the loan plan has been created, he said. Dr. Coulter stopped in Minneapolis on his return journey to Fargo after attending hearings of the agricultural committees of the House and Senate in Washington.

Bemidji—Organization of the North Central Minnesota Co-operative Poultry Marketing association has been completed at a meeting here. Included in the list of incorporators are farmers from six counties in the north central part of the state.

Duluth—The largest tonnage in the history of the Duluth-Superior harbor was recorded in 1923, when 59,274,812 tons of freight were received and shipped according to the report filed by Maj. E. H. Marks, United States district engineer, here. The tonnage of 1923 is 55 per cent over that of 1922

"A GOOD BOY"

SYNOPSIS.—On the banks of the Wabash stand Texie Colin and Jack Warhope, young and very much in love. Texie is the only daughter of old Pap Simon, rich man and money-lender. Jack is the orphan bound boy of Pap Simon, who had foreclosed a mortgage on the Warhope estate. At first Texie and Jack talk sadly of Ken Colin, the girl's missing brother. Then Jack says that in ten days his servitude will be over, that he will ride out into the big world to seek his fortune. Both know what that will mean to them. Texie and Jack talk of the red lock of "Red Colin," inherited by Ken. And Jack says he's coming back as soon as he finds gold in California. Then arrives the new preacher, Rev. Caleb Hopkins. Pap Simon introduces the villagers to the new preacher, who was a college mate of Ken. At supper at the Colin home the preacher tells how the boy killed a gambler and disappeared. His father attributes Ken's fall from grace to his red lock of hair. Then Pap Simon has a sort of stroke, brought on by reading a letter from Ken, "somewhere in New York," who curses his father on his death bed. A postscript by another hand says he is dead. At the village store and post office Loge Belden, a newcomer, says he saw the new parson with his arm around Texie. Jack licks him, shoots a pistol from his hand and makes him say he was mistaken. The preacher and the villagers go fishing. Jack discovers the preacher carries a six-gun. A footprint on a concealed houseboat fits the preacher's boot. A drunken ruffian disturbs a village festival and stabs Jack in the shoulder. The preacher makes him leave. Jack trails the man to Belden's cabin.

CHAPTER VIII—Continued.

—10—

"That's why I came—Daddy wants t' see y'u."

"Me?"

"He wants y'u t' come over a minute."

"Y'u didn't tell 'im nothin' about that—that—face?"

The girl's eyes flinched at the question.

"No—only that you got—hurt."

She drew a step nearer, laid her fingers lightly upon the sleeve of his blouse.

"How is y'ur shoulder?"

He fumbled the side of his open collar.

"Aw, it ain't nothin'."

The smile came back and brought the dimples.

"Jack—"

He stole a quick look at the side of her upturned face and waited.

"I' b'en s' pinin' hungry all day somehow f'r the rocks and woods—they're all waked up and wonderful now—and—"

She paused. The man drank in the exquisite profile of her fresh young face, her lips parted, her eyes softly retrospective with the smile that nestled in them.

"I 'lowed mebbe y'u wouldn't mind takin' me up there, bein' y'ur shoulder ain't—well."

"Wouldn't mind takin' y'u—!" The man seemed to grope for a word big enough to finish the thought. "Wly—I'd—I'd—we'll be startin' the minute we can run over and see what Pap Simon wants—b'fore, if y'u say so."

"No, I reckon we better go t' father first, he's been that fussed and restless sence—"

She turned and took a thoughtful step toward the path that led across the orchard to the red-roofed cottage.

The man followed, suddenly stopped, raised a quick glance up to the wild and tumbled pinnacles of the cliff, and hurried back to the cabin. The girl followed him as far as the door, where she stood mildly wondering to see him take down the beautifully modeled revolver—the gift of her father—from where it hung on a peg behind the cook stove, carefully examine it and buckle it on under his blouse.

Jack Warhope was startled at the change the three days had wrought in the banker. The lines of his craggy face had noticeably deepened.

Texie ran to him and knelt by the chair. He laid a great gaunt hand on her head, and after a time looked up at the woodsman, standing so tall and strong in the floor that he seemed almost out of place in so small a room.

"I'm hearin' they clawed y'u up las' night."

The woodsman grinned; the old man went on:

"Didn't hurt y'u, did they—much?"

"A cat scratch."

The old man's fingers strayed over the girl's hair.

"Jack."

"Yes, sir."

"You've b'en a good boy and you've worked hard." The woodsman shifted to his other foot and glanced down at the bright hair of the girl. The old banker studied him, slowly. "I never noticed it b'fore how much y'u look—and act—like y'ur father."

"Size and looks and—actions, you're —like him," the old man went on. "Of all the men I ever knowed, I think he was the noblest, and—the finest gentleman. A soldier every inch, but no business man. That's why—"

He stopped abruptly, took his hand from his daughter's head and dropped it to her shoulder. His deep-set eyes strayed away—perhaps into the past, with its memories.

He looked up after a time, in his quick penetrating way.

"How's the cattle?"

The question was so at variance with the thoughts in the woodsman's mind that he was slow in answering.

"Fine, sir."

"About ready t' market?"

"Most any day, now. Three drovers have b'en t' see 'em a'ready."

"Sell 'em—as soon as y'u please. What'll they bring?"

"If the market holds, they ough' t' top five thousan'."

"Five thousan'—thats a heap o' money."

The bony fingers drummed hard upon the chair-arm. The old man fidgeted in his seat in a way that seemed to indicate that the interview was over. The girl rose.

"Father, we're goin' up in the woods t' see the sun set—Jack and me—"

A statement that was half question. The old man did not look up. They were at the door of the dining-room, the woodsman standing aside to let the girl pass, when the banker turned in his chair.

"Jack."

The girl stopped; the man turned back.

"Texie tells me you're leavin' us as soon as you're twenty-one."

"I'm aimin' to, sir."

"And that'll be—?"

"The twentieth—seven more days."

"Seven days—!" The old man frowned; rasped his hand over the dry stubble on his bony chin. "Well, seven days is—seven days," he muttered. "Hit ain't b'cause I've be'n hard on y'u, is it?"

"No, sir, it ain't that. You've be'n s' good to me that it makes it hard t' go, but I got t' do somethin' f'r m'self—now."

The old man bent his brows thoughtfully; nodded toward his daughter in the door of the dining-room.

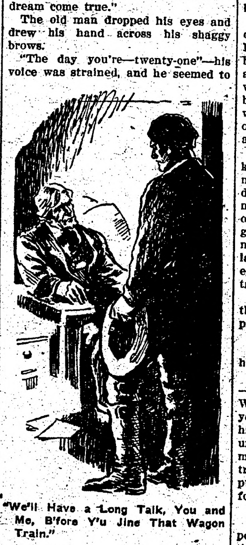
"She says you're calc'latin' t' jine a wagon train f'r California."

"Yes, sir, that's what I'm aimin' t' do, if you're still minded t' give me Graylock when my time's out.

"I'm aimin' t' pick up enough—gold out there t' come back and buy the homestead, if you'll sell it t' me, and make my father's—and mother's—dream come true."

The old man dropped his eyes and drew his hand across his shaggy brows.

"The day you're—twenty-one"—his voice was strained, and he seemed to weigh each word before letting it fall—"we'll have a long talk, you and me, b'fore y'u jine that wagon train—"



"We'll Have a Long Talk, You and Me, B'fore Y'u Jine That Wagon Train."

He stooped forward, picked up a bundle of papers from the floor and began sorting them over.

The others passed out through the kitchen, where Mrs. Curry was busy about the cook stove.

The witchery of the coming sunset was astir among the splintered peaks and pinnacles of the bold headland. The woodsman took off his hat, swept his eyes over the far-spread landscape, drank deep the wonder of it, slowly turned to his companion.

He allowed himself to revel for a delicious moment in the rich completeness of her, as she stood lightly poised on the rock.

His arm unconsciously stole toward her; but he drew it back and pointed to the tiny flower bed at the foot of the upstanding pinnacle. The girl followed the motion, softly clapped her hands and stood looking down at the yellow orchid, its golden slipper still as plump and unwilted as before it had been transplanted.

"I found it this morning back in the woods."

His voice was strained and heavy out of all proportion to what might have been expected in uttering a statement so simple. The girl breathed fast. The man stooped, plucked the blossom from the stem and held it toward her; she took it and with slow fingers fastened it in her belt.

"I reckon we wasn't nothin' but jist crazy kids," the man went on, "but y'u know how the first bluebird and the first robin and the first lady slipper was alw'ys—big days to us—"

He was venturing his words forth as if each one had to feel its way across his lips, like a hunter picking his way over the dangerous bog at the head of Mud Haul.

"But lady slipper day," he faltered on, "was alw'ys the biggest. Y'u know, we alw'ys kinda fig'r'd on doin' somethin' extra that day, and when it come this year I be'n plannin' I'd—I'd—"

He paused, breathed hard, struggled for the next words—the hardest in the language to say; stole a glance at the girl's face; looked away. The stark skeleton of the unfinished farm-house unexpectedly — mayhap unluckily — came under his eyes; the transfiguring emotion slowly died in his face; the bound boy again dominated the man.

He heard the girl's deep breath; felt her hand thrill upon his arm; accepted it for what it was—the spontaneous communion of comradeship, a relation on which he dared not presume—dimly read in the serious eyes, as they strayed over his face, the tingling mystery, the far-flung vision that nestled there.

Very thoughtful she seemed, and for the most part silent—the all-sufficient silence that sometimes falls between comrades—as he led her down the bluffs, on the Eagle hollow side, around by the post office, and to the yard gate at the red-roofed cottage.

The Rev. Caleb Hopkins, with a book under his arm, was just coming across the little park from the study at the parsonage. He dropped down on the rustic seat at Whispering spring, opened the book and humped himself over it, apparently oblivious to all that went on about him.

The woodsman studied him a moment, frowned, and turned his eyes back to the girl. Swept by a sudden impulse that he could not control—an impulse that called for no word—he lifted her hand from the gate latch; held it for a delicious instant in both his own; dropped it and turned away.

Half-way up the road to the big elm at the homestead he looked back. The tall figure of the young preacher had risen from the rustic seat at Whispering spring, and through the pensive twilight the girl was crossing the yard toward him.

CHAPTER IX

Bats and Beetles.

In the luminous evening that followed Uncle Nick sat smoking a quiet pipe on the porch of his modest cabin at the upper edge of the village, almost exactly opposite the point where the Eagle Hollow road crossed the flat, unbanistered bridge and turned up the east bank of the branch to disappear between the jaws of the hollow.

Through the open door came the clink of the supper dishes as Aunt Liza put them away. A throng of bats, nocturnal hunters all, darted in and out among the fruit trees, white with bloom; the drone of a thousand beetles, the hum of a myriad gauzy wings, throbbed the silence into a sort of drowsy rhythm—a scene tranquil and serene.

The old man was just setting off to keep his tacitly understood appointment with the embryo scientists, soldiers and statesmen who assembled nightly around the barrels and boxes of Zeke Polick's store, when the front gate clicked. He stopped and stood mildly wondering to see the tall and lanky form of Al Counterman, the one-eyed fisherman, coming up through the trees.

He threw up his hand, the fisherman threw up his: Two grins met and passed in the twilight.

"Fine day," said the fisherman.

"Couldn't make one no better, if I had the tools."

The fisherman seldom—almost never—came into that part of the village. With the sound horse sense that eighty years of hard knocks had pounded into him, Uncle Nick knew that something unusual had brought him. Counterman knew that he knew. He absently traced the flight of the bats with his puckered eye and shifted from one foot to the other.

"Little out o' y'ur range, hain't y'u?"

The fisherman sat down on the porch, spit out into the yard, and threw away his cud, as if clearing his mouth for action. Al rarely threw away his cud. When he did it meant something.

"Whar's Aunt Liza?"

"Back in the kitchen. Why?"

The other did not answer, but sat listening to the clink of the dishes. He finally lifted his battered hat, ran his fingers up through his hair and motioned his aged friend to sit beside him.

"Seen Big Jack t'day?"

"See'd 'im this evenin' late come down off'n Black Rock"—he tossed up his hand toward the high battlement of stone that frowned down upon them from across the mouth of the hollow—"him an' Texie. They crossed the branch at the bridge thar, passed the gate an' went on down through town—t' the post office, I 'low."

The fisherman put his hat back on.

"I'm skeer'd it's dern little good it'll do 'im. As I come along up the crick, I happened t' glance down in ol' Sime's orchi'd, an' thar she set with the new parson at Whisperin' spring."

The old man lowered his eyes and sat patting his boot upon the gravel of the small gutter worn by the drip from the porch eaves.

"Beats the devil the headway the parson's a-makin' with 'er," he muttered. "Must know some trick other men ain't on to."

"But I do know he's Black Bogus: yes, sir, Black Bogus."

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

TURNS IN THE ROAD

WHATEVER may be your affluence or influence, your station on this sphere, your power of conquest or good-fortune, there is in the natural progression of things a probability that you may some day come to a turn in the road.

At every swing of the pendulum time is working wondrous changes. Overnight the topography of a country may be so scarred by an earthquake or scoured by a flood that it is unrecognizable.

An empire may crumble; wealth may be swept away; pride subdued and humility exalted. At the dawning of the morning we are amazed at the sudden transformation.

We are in a flash brought face to face with a turn in the road over which we have for years been traveling complacently in fine company and fancied security.

We have given no thought to the future, having been too deeply engrossed in our worship of gold. In the hasty pursuit of wealth we have grown blind to the beautiful things around us and unmindful of others.

We have forgotten that we are but travelers on our way to an enduring country beyond the limits of earth, and where there are no turns in the road.

We have seen others lose their way and given them no attention.

We have seen them shudder, sink and give up hope.

We have turned our backs, stopped our ears and walked on confident of our strength and sure of our step.

But when we ourselves come to the turn in the road all is different. We fall then into that state in which by some subtle transformation we become other things.

We see with new eyes, speak in a trembling voice, controlled by strange and terrible emotions.

For the first time in our lives we realize that we are but sojourners, tossed about like chips upon the sea, at the mercy of the tides and winds.

By some miscalculation we have lost our way. We are swept with tremendous force in a new direction, overwhelmed and awed, just as have been millions of others who have gone before us, and if we lack the faith, we turn sick as we face the vast nothingness and drop out of the running.

The young lady across the way says some people seem to take a special delight in mixing new drinks, now they're not supposed to have any at all, and she wonders what this H_2O that she hears so much about is like.

Men You May Marry

By E. R. PEYSER

Has a Man Like This Proposed to You?

Symptoms: He has just lately come to your burg, to take a job —he has come from a larger place. Wants to know all about your town. Yet never stops talking of how they did things in Xville, what great fellers they have there, what good lookers the girls are, what rushing business they do and what swell parties they give. He dresses usually in brown from head to heels and his shoulders have well built-in scaffolding to train 'em up. He is jovial. Likes you because you look like the good lookers in Xville. Likes change and variety.

IN FACT

Change has kept him from changing much.

Prescription to Bride:

℞ Never appear unless you are all dressed up.

Change your hair dress often—keep all fashion books about.

Be his household "movie".

Absorb This:

TO HAVE IS NOT ALWAYS TO SCOLD.

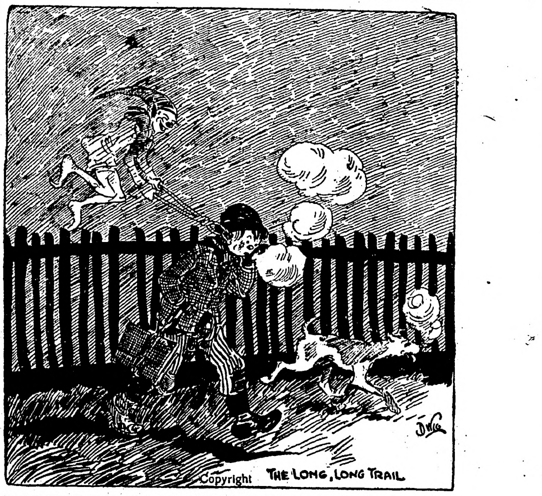
SCHOOL DAYS



Mother's Cook Book

Men's souls are pitched in different keys;
Some like a lark rise strong of wing
Above the clouds of suffering
And cheerily mount and sing
Till gloom grows glad and suffering men
Smile, listening, and take heart again.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

FOR a company dish try the following:

Filet of Beef.

Trim the filet neatly and lay into a deep dish with an onion cut into slices, two bay leaves, a sprig of parsley, whole pepper and salt and olive oil to baste it well. Let the filet lie in this marinade for six hours, turning occasionally, then roast in a hot oven; let it be rather underdone. Serve surrounded by macaroni cooked as follows: Put into a saucepan one-half cupful of tomato puree, three tablespoonfuls of butter and two or three tablespoonfuls of meat gravy; season with pepper and salt to taste. Bring to the boiling point and simmer for a few minutes, then add a little at a time some previously cooked macaroni. Toss all lightly and add three tablespoonfuls of grated cheese just at the last.

Creme de Marrons.

Take one-half pound of large chestnuts, cut a cross on each and boil them in plenty of water until the outer skin can be easily removed. Then pound them in a mortar and pass through a fine sieve into a dish; add a few drops of milk to soften the mixture. Beat the yolks of three eggs with one-half cupful of cream and the same of milk, add one-fourth cupful of sugar, a few drops of vanilla, and strain the mixture into a double boiler. Stir the mixture over the fire until it thickens, then add a little less than half an ounce of gelatin, which has been soaked in cold water and dissolved over heat. Pour this custard gradually over the chestnut puree, mix well, then pour into a hollow mold. When ready to serve, unmold and fill the center with whipped cream, sweetened and tinted with pink sugar.

Breakfast Mackerel.

Soak a salt fish skin side up, change the water until most of the salt is removed. Place in a dripping pan skin side down and pour over a cupful of thin cream. Bake in a moderate oven until the fish is tender. Season and serve hot with baked potatoes.

Glazed Sweet Potatoes.

Wash and peel six medium-sized potatoes. Cook ten minutes in boiling salted water. Drain, cut in halves lengthwise and put into a buttered pan. Make a sirup by boiling three minutes one-half cupful of sugar and four tablespoonfuls of water, add one tablespoonful of butter. Brush the potatoes with sirup and bake basting with the sirup. When the potatoes are tender and covered with sirup remove and serve.

Has Anyone Laughed At You Because—

By ETHEL R. PEYSER

You like stories with happy endings?

Why not? People may rave and say the unhappy ending is more artistic, yet most people are so geared that the happy ending is the favorite. You only show that you get to like the characters and you want them to be happy. You want every one to be happy. You know how hard the easiest life is, and when you read you want the "folk" to "end" in glorious joy. Read and be happy; let those folk laugh and read all the tragedy they care to devour.

SO

Your get-away here is:

That you never burned a set of Ibsen or Macbeth, or Hamlet, but you like happy endings nevertheless!

THE PEAKS OF LIFE

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WHO has not seen some crimson flow'r
Whose heart was red as embers?
Who has not known some mighty hour
One evermore remembers?
Among the trees upon the crest
One tree stands higher than the rest,
One note in all night's madrigals
The heart especially recalls.

We live in moments such as these,
Our hours of joy or sorrow;
For his yesterdays of ease
Will recollect tomorrow?
Some love we won, some love we lost,
Some mountain, not some plain we crossed,
We shall remember, joy and strife—
We live upon the peaks of life.

In hours of pain we learn to cling
To something worth believing,
And joy perhaps we learn to sing
The better after grieving.
A heart that never knew a pain
Is like a land without a rain,
Is like a land that never knows
A springtime flood, or summer rose.

So let us thank our God for this,
Our Maytime, our December,
The first embrace, the parting kiss,
The things that we remember,
The day with neither rain nor sun
Brought never flow'rs to anyone—
Thank God for joy, and grief, and strife;
We live upon the peaks of life.

Origin of Honeydew Melon.

The original seed of the honeydew melon is said to have been obtained from a melon shipped from Africa to New York city. The seed was planted at Rocky Ford, Colo., and crossed with other varieties for two or three seasons. The so-called honey-dew melon is the result. As yet this melon has not been brought into a stable condition of reproduction.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage containing a Power of Sale, by reason of which default said Power of Sale has become operative, and the Assignees of the Mortgagee hereinafter named are authorized to declare the whole sum due, and they hereby do declare said sum due, which mortgage was executed by Hjalmer Johnson and Emma Johnson, his wife, Mortgagors to Deposit Trust & Savings Bank, Winona, Minnesota, a corporation under the laws of the State of Minnesota, Mortgagee, dated November 5th, 1920, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota, on the 20th day of November, A. D., 1920, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 104 of Mortgages, on page 32,

Which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Deposit Trust & Savings Bank, Mortgagee, to William Streuber and Florence Streuber, as joint tenants, by written assignment dated March 1st, A. D., 1923, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota, on the 30th day of November, 1923, at 11 o'clock A. M., in Book 110 of Mortgages, on page 191,

And whereas, the said William Streuber and Florence Streuber, the assignees and holders of said mortgage, on December 3rd, 1923, paid delinquent taxes upon the mortgaged property hereinafter described in the sum of Eighty-five and 07-100 ($85.07) Dollars; and whereas, the said William Streuber and Florence Streuber, the assignees and holders of said mortgage, have duly elected and do hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, under the terms and conditions of said mortgage and the Power of Sale therein contained; and whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of Fifteen Hundred ($1500.00) Dollars, with accumulated interest from the 5th day of November, 1921, at the rate of six and one-half per cent per annum, and also the sum of $85.07 for taxes paid as aforesaid, with interest thereon from the 3rd day of December, 1923, at the rate of six per cent per annum; and whereas, the said Power of Sale has become operative and no action or proceedings having been instituted at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof,

NOW, THEREFORE, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the Power of Sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and covered by said mortgage, viz:

Lot Three and Northeast Quarter of Southwest Quarter, in Section Nineteen, in Township One-hundred Fifty-six North, of Range Forty-three West of the 5th Principal Meridian, in Marshall County, and State of Minnesota.

Italy Leads in Lemons.

The bulk of lemons entering into world trade are from Italy. Her exports in both 1920 and 1921 were approximately 4,000,000 boxes, which is about half the pre-war figure of [illegible] boxes. Imports into the United Kingdom amounted to 1,000,[illegible] boxes in 1921, as compared with [illegible] boxes in 1920 and 900,000 boxes in 1913. After the United Kingdom, Germany and the Netherlands are the heaviest importers of lemons.

L. S. Kolden of Nielsville was a Holt visitor Tuesday.

Ray O'Hara visited over Sunday with his folks in Thief River Falls.

The depositors of the old bank held a short business session Friday.

Mrs. Ben Eide of Warren came Tuesday to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Tobiason.

Sam Mickelson returned home Tuesday night from Warren much improved in health we are pleased to report.

Henry Wilkin of near Thief River Falls came Monday to look after the farm interests of C. G. Slater of Sherburn.

Mrs. Ole B. Johnson and Mrs. Olaf Ness will entertain the Ladies Aid Sunday afternoon at the home of the former. Rev. Raaum will preach at 2 o'clock.

Guy Anderson commenced taking his annual vacation Friday. Victor Johnson is running the rural route and has been trying out the formers' snowmobile for a few days.

L. Flak visited over Sunday here with his daughter, Mrs. S. E. Rierson and her husband. Mr. Flak is at present doing carpenter work in Chicago and says the wages are good and lots of building is being done.

Dr. F. D. Brandenburg has moved from New Richland to Crystal Bay, Minn. He writes from his new location that he will superintend his farm this year in Excel and that he expects to put in fifteen acres of alfalfa and 30 acres of sugar beets, and that he wishes all the farmers in Excel would do likewise. He says it spells Prosperity for a community, and he surely believes in boosting.

Messrs. J. W. Black and O. E. Sahr of Minneapolis arrived in Holt Monday morning to attend the Second Annual meeting of the Marshall County State Bank. The following were elected directors for the ensuing year: J. W. Black, Robert J. Lund, Louis Wegge, P. L. Anderson and F. D. Voth. Robert J. Lund, Cashier, and Clarence Erickson, Assistant Cashier, will be in active charge of the bank, as during the previous year. The Officers are pleased with the showing of the bank this past year and are very optomistic of the future.

After the meeting Mr. Lund accompanied Messrs. Black and Sahr to Thief River Falls and remained on business in Thief River Falls and Hazel on Tuesday, returning back on Tuesday night. Mr. Black returned to Minneapolis on Monday night while Mr. Sahr returned to Minneapolis on Tuesday night.

The Marshall County State Bank will have a very important and interesting announcement to make to the public in the near future.

Death of Little Boy

Vincent, the five year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Gust Johnson, died Saturday afternoon at the home of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Johnson, with whom he had been making his home since the removal of his parents to Duluth, several months ago.

He was first taken slightly ill on Tuesday and a physician was summoned on Thursday. Pneumonia developed in both lungs and he became worse Friday night and a physician was called again the next day, but Vincent passed away before he arrived.

The parents were wired the sad news and they arrived in Holt Monday noon.

The funeral services were held at the Lutheran church Thursday afternoon, Rev. Raaum officiating and the little one was burried in the Holt cemetery.

The News extends sympathy to the grief stricken parents, grandparents and other relatives.

Among Holt's delegation of people to Thief River Falls on Wednesday were. K. O. Burtness, C. L. Sandberg, P. L. Anderson, J. A. Serum and Dick Nyberg.

The Holt creamery is making fifty tubs of butter a week, right during the middle of winter, when some creameries almost have to close for lack of patronage.

I. D. Converse of Red Lake Falls, formerly of the Goodridge Banner, has purchased the Strandquist Press and will commence its publication this week. We wish him success.

Ladies Aid at O. B. Johnson's at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon Feb. 3rd. Services will be conducted by Rev. Raaum. Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Olaf Ness will serve. Everybody invited.

Nils Ness and Gilbert Johnson who have been hauling gravel and repairing the highway during the winter months, were laid off this week for lack of funds. Better pay your auto tax now.

Robert J. Lund is in receipt of a letter from Erik L. Erickson of International Falls, Minn., in which Mr. Erickson states that they reached their destination and are busy with their store work. One of the features in opening of their store, was the circulating of hand bills advertising the Cash Store. They are well pleased with their new location and prospects look bright for the future.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage containing a Power of Sale, by reason of which default said Power of Sale has become operative, and the Assignee of the Mortgagee hereinafter named is authorized to declare the whole sum due, and he hereby does declare said sum due, which mortgage was executed by Ludvik Larson, a single man, Mortgagor to Holt State Bank, Holt, Minnesota, a corporation under the laws of the State of Minnesota, Mortgagee, dated October 18th, 1920, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota, on the 21st day of October, A. D., 1920, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 92 of Mortgages, on page 309.

Which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Holt State Bank, Holt, Minnesota, Mortgagee, to Deposit Bank of Winona, Winona, Minnesota, by written assignment dated November 6th, 1920, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota, on the 24th day of January, 1921, at 8:30 o'clock A. M., in Book 98 of Mortgages, on page 483.

Which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Deposit Bank of Winona, Winona, Minnesota, to L. G. Gates, by written assignment dated July 30th, 1923, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota, on the 21st day of January, 1924, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 110 of Mortgages, on page 220.

And whereas, the said L. G. Gates, the assignee and holder of said mortgage, has paid delinquent taxes upon the mortgaged property hereinafter described in the sum of One Hundred Thirty-five and 06-100 ($135.06) Dollars; and whereas, the said L. G. Gates, the assignee and holder of said mortgage, has duly elected and does hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, under the terms and conditions of said mortgage and the Power of Sale therein contained; and whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of Thirty-five Hundred ($3,500.00) Dollars, with accumulated interest from the 18th day of April, 1921, at the rate of six and one-half per cent per annum and also the sum of $135.06 for taxes paid as aforesaid, with interest thereon from the date of payment at the rate of six per cent per annum; and whereas, the said Power of Sale has become operative and no action or proceedings having been instituted at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

NOW, THEREFORE, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the Power of Sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and covered by said mortgage, viz:

The Northwest Quarter of the Northwest Quarter (NW¼NW¼) Southeast Quarter Northwest Quarter (SE¼NW¼) and the Northeast Quarter of the Southwest Quarter (NE¼SW¼) of Section Thirty-six (36), in Township One Hundred Fifty-six (156) North, of Range Forty-three (43) West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, in Marshall County and State of Minnesota.

Which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Marshall County at the Front door of the County Court House, in the City of Warren, in said County and State on the 18th day of March, 1924, at 10 o'clock A. M. of that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash, to pay the amount then due on said mortgage and interest and the sum of $135.06 for taxes paid on said described premises with interest from the date of payment, together with the costs and disbursements of such sale and Seventy-five Dollars attorneys fees stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure.

Dated January 26, 1924.

Chapter 223 Sec. 7, Session Laws of Minnesota for 1917

Reconsideration upon complaint-appeal.

Upon complaint being made to the county attorney by a taxpayer of the county that any person is unlawfully receiving an allowance out of the county funds on account of an alleged dependent child it shall be the duty of the county attorney to investigate such complaint and if he finds it to have probable cause to bring it to the attention of the court by appropriate proceedings. The Court shall hear such evidence and argument as shall be offered and shall thereupon make its order confirming, modifying or setting aside the order complained of, from which decision an appeal may be taken as in a civil action.

Fighting Fishes.

Prize-fighting fishes are very common on the coast of Japan and Siam. Their pugilistic tendencies are most pronounced, so much so that the natives make them take the place of boxers in Siam, and arrange matches in glass bowls between two of the species, heavy bets being laid on the result.

Care of Hides.

Only sound hides free from cuts on the flesh side, well taken off, of regular even pattern, properly salted and cured, can command a high price and make good leather. Greater care must be taken in summer than in winter in salting, curing and marketing hides, especially by the farmer or the country butcher who has only an occasional hide to cure. Partly decayed hides are practically useless.

Business Service Aid for Farmers

To Meet Changed Conditions New Forms Have Been Devised.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

To assist American farmers in organizing their business to meet the changed economic conditions of present-day agriculture, new forms of agricultural information have been developed, and fundamental studies in farm organization, marketing and crop estimates have been expended by the bureau of agricultural economics during the past year, according to the annual report of the bureau.

"In the period of agricultural readjustment experienced during the past year, it was important for farmers to secure the facts bearing upon current problems that would give them the greatest aid in making accurate decisions in planning farm operations and in marketing their products," says the report. "The first attention of the bureau staff has been directed constantly toward these problems in response to the greatly increased demands upon the bureau for information on the general conditions of supply and demand, price trends, the effect of various domestic and foreign factors upon the farmer's returns, and for information bearing upon problems of crop readjustment."

Live Stock Surveys Help.

Special effort was made to strengthen present crop and live stock reporting methods, and to supplement these methods by surveys designed to give a more accurate knowledge of future supplies. The semi-annual pig surveys which give an indication of intentions of farmers regarding the production of hogs, and the reports of farmers' intentions to plant various crops are outlined as indicating the bureau's activities along this line. Numerous mechanical and other methods have also been developed to obtain maximum accuracy in acreage and production estimates.

A world-wide crop and market reporting service was developed by the bureau, to obtain the essential facts concerning probable foreign competition and demand for American farm products. Agricultural commissioners in England and Europe, and the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome keep the bureau constantly informed, regarding the current foreign agricultural situation. This news is broadcast by the bureau to farmers by radio and the press.

A study of the factors that influence the market demand in domestic markets, as expressed in the prices and movement of crops and in consumers' requirements was made. Results of several years of farm management surveys were reviewed to secure facts of value in the present agricultural readjustment, the objective being shifted somewhat from studies with the historical point of view to the current readjustment point of view.

A steady growth in the bureau's work in warehousing, improved farm finance and in the study of agricultural co-operation is required. The correlation of various research projects conducted by state and federal institutions such as in the establishment of the New England research council on marketing and food supply is also regarded as a forward step. A similar council has been planned for the Middle West.

Market News Service.

The market activities of the bureau have been extended along the lines of research, standardization, market news, and food products inspection at shipping points and terminal markets. Grades were prepared for hay, wool, tobacco, rice, rye, peanuts, dressed meats, and a number of fruits and vegetables.

Farm management studies were expanded during the year to include studies of farm income on various types of farms, farm production in localities adjacent to cities, the organization of cane sugar farms, a special survey of cotton farms in boll weevil districts, studies of the earlier farm management records, surveys of regions on which studies have been made in previous years to discover important changes in management. Cost of production work was expanded to include wheat, cotton, tobacco, fruits, sugar beets, sugar cane, and cattle.

This extended service to farmers was made possible largely by the consolidation of three former bureaus into what is now the bureau of agricultural economics. In the new bureau the identity and the organization of the various lines of work formerly handled in the three bureaus has been preserved in the associated divisions under the three groups of production, marketing, and problems dealing with the economic phases of both production and marketing.

Rotted Manure Excellent Fertilizer for Cucumber

Rotted manure is an excellent fertilizer for cucumber plants. The mixing of acid phosphate with manure is to be advised. If added before the nitrogen has a chance to escape it will hold the nitrogen in the manure. Acid phosphate contains gypsum and gypsum has this same power to hold the nitrogen, but acid phosphate is more effective than is gypsum alone and, of course, contributes valuable phosphorus. Acid phosphate retards the fermentation of the manure.

Acid phosphate may be added either before or after composting, and in either case is a valuable addition.

Dairy Cows Must Be Fed Liberal Ration

Hay, Silage and Grain Mixture Needed in Winter.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

If dairy cows are to be fed for profitable production they must receive a liberal ration at all seasons. In summer, pasture generally is depended upon, but often it must be supplemented by soiling crops or silage, and sometimes by concentrates as well. For winter feeding, the ration usually is composed of hay, silage, and a mixture of grains. In properly balancing the ration the grain mixture is compounded to fit the roughage with due consideration for cost, bulk, palatability, and physiological effect upon the cow. For best results, cows must be fed individually, salted regularly, and furnished with all the clean water they will drink.

A few simple guides for feeding have been summarized by the dairymen of the United States Department of Agriculture as follows: (1) Under most circumstances the cow should be fed all the roughage that she will eat up clean, and the grain ration should be adjusted to the milk production. (2) A grain mixture should be fed in the proportion of one pound to each three pints or pounds of milk produced daily by the cow, except in the case of a cow producing a flow of forty pounds or more, when the ration may be one pound to each three and a half or four pounds of milk. An even better rule is one pound of grain each day for a pound of butterfat that the cow produces during the week. (3) Feed all the cow will respond to in milk production. When she begins to put on flesh, cut down the grain.

Clutch-Holding Device Very Handy on Tractor

The Scientific American in illustrating and describing a clutch holder, the invention of F. F. Wunder, Valley Falls, Kan., says:

The invention relates to devices which are adapted for attachment to a tractor to engage a clutch control lever of the tractor to releasably hold the latter in position to occasion the releasing of the driving connection between the engine of the tractor and the transmission thereof, without disengaging the gears of the transmission. A further object is to provide a clutch holder which comprises but a single piece of resilient material.

Start Egg-Plant Early in Spring Under Glass

The egg-plant is a warm weather plant as yet not acclimatized in the North. It should be started early, under glass. Plants should be "pricked off" when the second leaves appear, four inches apart, in boxes. "Pricking off" means removing the plants from their crowded position in the hotbed and placing at some distance apart in boxes or in flower pots. The boxes should be kept in a coldframe and plenty of light and air should be admitted on warm, sunny days in order to harden the plants. After frost danger is past and the soil is well warmed the plants may be transplanted. Care must be taken to avoid the use of extremely rich soil or the plants are likely to keep up their growth until too late in the season to escape the early fall frosts. The seed should be sown about April 10. A temperature of 65 to 70 degrees should be maintained in the hotbed.

Plants should be set about three feet apart each way. A dozen plants are sufficient for the needs of a family. One ounce of seed will furnish 750 plants.

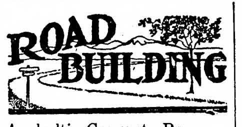
Inefficient Production No Cure for Low Prices

In discussing various aspects of farm product values, Professor J. I. Falconer, agricultural economist, Ohio State university says:

"Inefficiency in production is no cure for low prices. Experience and research have shown that farmers with high yields make greater profits than their neighbors with low yields. On high-priced land high yields are more economical to produce than low yields. If a reduction in output of a particular crop seems desirable, it would be better to reduce the acreage or, for individual farmers, to abandon the crop entirely than to reduce the yields."

Dairymen Are in Favor of Calves During Fall

Dairymen have practically settled the question of having calves come spring or fall, in favor of the fall season, because cows that freshen in the fall always produce more milk and butterfat than those that freshen in the spring, and because there is more time to attend the cows during the winter. Hence from January 1 to March 1 is the most favorable season to breed.



Asphaltic Concrete Base Type of Road Pavement

On the Pacific coast there has been widely developed over a period of twenty-five years a type of pavement and foundation which is the acme of resiliency and flexibility and the ability to resist the encroachments of water. This pavement is known as the asphaltic concrete base type. Its more common name is that of "black base." This type is not patented or controlled by any company or individual and is laid at a moderate cost.

It is simply a foundation of three or four inches of mixed stone and asphalt on which is placed a wearing course of the recognized sheet asphalt or asphaltic concrete that is laid in the East. This gives a total thickness of five or six inches of pavement and foundation, which has been found ample to meet the heaviest and most varied traffic known to California highways. In Visalia, Cal., is a "black base" pavement that was laid in 1896 and which is today in excellent condition. The Visalia pavement is officially reported by the city engineer to have cost nothing for maintenance. Where the subgrade is unstable it is good practice to lay a thin insulating course of four inches of broken stone. Engineers familiar with this type of construction claim that it is the only type which will successfully resist the bombardment of heavy traffic and is, therefore, destined to become standard in eastern paving practice within a comparatively few years. In the borough of Manhattan, New York city, the practice has been adopted of replacing foundation cuts in Fifth avenue with this type of asphaltic base wherever an opening in the pavement becomes necessary.

The feature of prime importance in this question of design of new pavements is that the field is a very wide one, that there are very many types of pavement, that the engineer and the taxpayer can conserve the interests of good engineering and wise tax outlay by taking fully into account the possibilities of these various types of paving and avoiding any policy that involves placing all the eggs in one basket.

Big Loads on Highways Is Scored by Auto Club

Should one-third of one per cent of the motor vehicles of a city be allowed to carry loads heavy enough to ruin the highways for the remaining 99 2-3 per cent?

This question was answered in the negative by the voters of Los Angeles through a referendum initiated by the Automobile Club of Southern California. The city council passed an ordinance increasing the load limits for trucks to 26,000 pounds, which is 4,000 pounds more than allowed under the state law. The exhaustive engineering investigation recently conducted by the automobile club demonstrated clearly that excessive loading contributed largely to the breaking down of roads.

Arguments presented against the 26,000-pound load declared that in Los Angeles only 36 vehicles out of every 10,000 could benefit by excessive loading. There are 250,000 motor vehicle owners in the city of Los Angeles alone paying a tax of two cents per gallon to insure the highways being maintained.

Inquiries from all parts of the country indicate that the action of the Automobile Club of Southern California to protect the roads is being watched with keen interest throughout the United States.

Good Roads Soon Pay for Themselves, Says Expert

Tests recently conducted by A. B. Cutter, city engineer of Everett, Wash., to determine the effect of different road types upon gasoline consumption showed that on modern concrete and bituilthic asphalt roads there is no difference in gasoline consumption. On gravel or waterbound macadam roads in good condition gasoline consumption is from 10 to 35 per cent greater.

"Under modern volume of traffic," says Mr. Cutter, "good roads rapidly pay for themselves in economy of gasoline consumption and the same holds true in economy of tire and other automobile wear and tear."

The tests were made on roads in Washington, Oregon and California. They provide a distance in each test of 100 miles of continuous operation in order accurately to record the gasoline consumption and produce a fair average. It was required that the tests be made on road surfaces in good condition after three years' practical use and that a uniform speed of not less than 20 nor more than 30 miles per hour be maintained.

One Car, Ten Persons.

How directly the highway touches the lives of all the people is shown by the fact that there is now more than one motor vehicle for each ten people. By just a little crowding the whole population could be taken for a ride at one time.

To Distribute Sodatol.

The United States bureau of public roads is to distribute 18,000,000 pounds of sodatol (a surplus war explosive) for road building and land clearing purposes.

GRIT OF HUNGRY GIRL WINS HER GOOD BANK JOB

Her Mettle in Face of Trials Attracts Attention of Financiers.

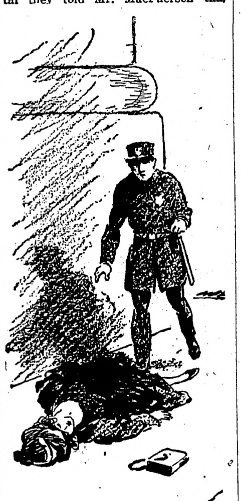
New York.—William E. Knox, president of the Bowery Savings bank, read in a New York paper that Miss Nannette Prevost, nineteen, of Denver, who collapsed from cold and hunger one night at West Broadway and Chambers street, was going to stick it out in New York even if she starved to death doing it. Anyhow, she wasn't going back to Denver.

"That's the sort of girl I like to hear about," said Mr. Knox. So he called John MacPherson, head of the bank's personal service department, and told him that he thought somebody ought to do something about it. Mr. Knox and Mr. MacPherson agreed that it would be a good idea to see that the girl got a home where she could rest, with good food and plenty of sleep, until she was strong enough to get a job.

Get Her a Job.

"And we'll do more than that," said Mr. Knox. "When she does get strong again we'll see that she gets a job in this bank. There's always a job for a girl with that nerve."

Mr. MacPherson hurried over to Bellevue hospital, where Miss Prevost pale and thin but pretty, in spite of it, lay on her cot vowing that she would never go back to Denver. At the hospital they told Mr. MacPherson that two other banks had beaten him to it and had offered to take care of the girl. But he outbid them. He got Mrs. MacPherson on the telephone and she agreed that their home at 440 Riverside drive was fully big enough to accommodate Miss Prevost for as long as she cared to stay.



A Policeman Saw Her.

"Bring her right up," said Mrs. MacPherson. Miss Prevost, however, must stay in the hospital several more days, probably a week, before she can go to Riverside drive. Physicians explained that anybody, particularly a woman, who goes without food for three days and walks the streets hunting a job all that time, needs a little time to regain strength.

Was Full of Hope.

Miss Prevost, an orphan, came to New York soon after she was graduated from high school in Denver. She left the Pennsylvania station with $60 in her purse and statements saying that she was a capable stenographer. She was full of hope. But the $60 went fast and it seemed that New York had more stenographers, with excellent references, than could be used. The last cent went for a cup of coffee and a roll Sunday morning, and from then until late Tuesday night, when a policeman saw her keel over in a doorway she went on her nerve—the same nerve that has got her a home on Riverside drive and a job when she is strong again.

"I know pretty well how it is," said Mr. MacPherson last night, "for I came here from Scotland twenty-eight years ago, when there wasn't a cent more money coming from home. A Broadway hotel manager—they're supposed to be the coldest propositions in the world with the exception of a bank—told me I needn't hurry about paying my bill, but to go out and make good. New York won't let anybody starve if it knows it, but the trouble is that lots of times, as in Miss Prevost's case, New York didn't know about it until it was almost too late."

NERVOUS, RUN-DOWN MOTHERS

Worn Out Caring for Children and Housework—See how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helps

Indianapolis, Indiana.—"I was in a very nervous and run-down condition while nursing my baby, and hearing some talk of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I began taking it. From the second bottle I noticed a big improvement, and I am still taking it. I am not a bit nervous now, and feel like a different person. It is a great medicine for any one in a nervous, run-down condition and I would be glad to give any one advice about taking it. I think there is no better medicine and give you permission to publish this letter."—Mrs. ANNA SMITH, 541 W. Norwood Street, Indianapolis, Indiana.

The important thing about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is that it does help women suffering from the ailments common to their sex.

If you are nervous and run-down and have pains in your lower parts and in your back, remember that the Vegetable Compound has relieved other women having the same symptoms. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Device Will Help Aviators at Night

The business of night flying will be greatly facilitated by the invention of a device which enables the man in the airplane to keep constantly informed as to the height at which he is flying. This information is valuable at all times while in the air, particularly when landings are being made.

This is accomplished in a very ingenious manner. The device consists of two powerful lights through projecting fixed beams directed toward the earth, parallel to each other. Two images are cast upon the ground by these lights—one a straight bar and the other a pair of arrow heads, the bar being the forward one.

There is also a movable light, and when this is adjusted with reference to the other beams it throws upon the surface of the earth figures in light which indicate the distance above the surface which the machine is traveling.—Philadelphia Enquirer.

A Willing Victim

The wife of a certain fiery army officer, during her husband's frequent absence from home with his regiment, was in the habit of spending much of her time with friends, being invariably accompanied on such visits by her only son, a small boy of five.

One day at tea, during one of these visits, the little fellow, having already partaken of a huge meal, asked for "just one more cake," a request which was peremptorily refused by his mother, who at the same time reproved him for his gluttony.

After a short silence, he repeated his plea for something more to eat, whereupon his mother leaned over and assured him in a whisper that he would most certainly burst if he dared consume another morsel!

"All right, mother," replied the little fellow, "please pass me another jam tart and stand clear."

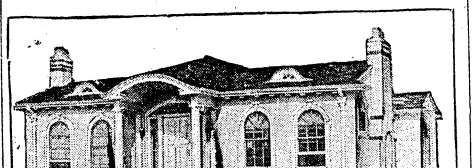
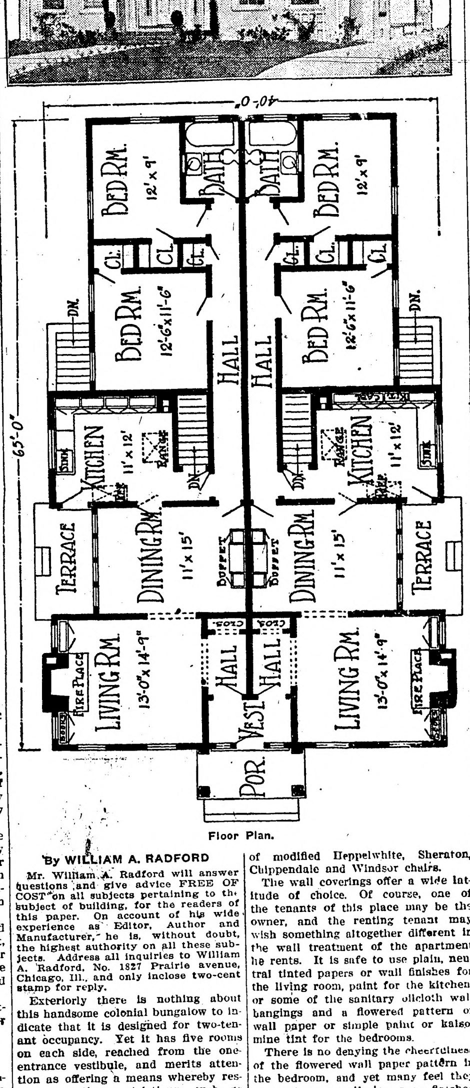
Colonial Bungalow Meant for Two-Tenant Occupancy





Floor Plan.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

Exteriorly there is nothing about this handsome colonial bungalow to indicate that it is designed for two-tenant occupancy. Yet it has five rooms on each side, reached from the one-entrance vestibule, and merits attention as offering a means whereby residence section restrictions, such as against flat-buildings, etc., may be got around and yet help the locality along at the same time. For there is no denying the fact that it is a very attractive place, indeed.

The wide colonial doorway, with side lights, makes an ample vestibule possible. From this vestibule open off the two doors leading into each five-room apartment, consisting of living room, dining room, kitchen, two bedrooms and bath. The kitchen has a rear entrance, and, worth noting, is how the bedrooms are so placed as to assure maximum privacy to the occupants.

The exterior is stucco, with red lines of trim from the use of brick, as is visible in the chimney portion. With a house like this it is not wise to go into the field of colored stucco too extensively; this place depends for its appeal upon simplicity. Therefore the stucco is best left white, or tinted a gray or light cream, not blue or warm red or pink, such as is the vogue with residences of the Spanish type in the warmer sections of the country.

The landscaping is simple, but the more formal the better, insofar as shrubbery is concerned. But one could brighten up the exterior of this bungalow with hollyhocks and the bright old-fashioned flowers, with excellent results. The quaint rounded windows ought to have consideration, too, as a decorative feature, and not be hidden behind square awnings in the summer time; awnings should be of the round-top style to match. A little attention to the small detail of window curtains will help this place to keep its home character intact, such as having the draw shades of the same kind for both tenants. This is something one would naturally expect the landlord to see to.

Following the keynote of the doorway, one might expect an interior where the wood trim was finished in the popular white or cream enamel so fitting with colonial interiors. And the furniture would naturally fall into line, the choice lying with the less massive styles, such as the colonial period left us as a legacy, the simplicity of modified Hepplewhite, Sheraton, Chippendale and Windsor chairs.

The wall coverings offer a wide latitude of choice. Of course, one of the tenants of this place may be the owner, and the renting tenant may wish something altogether different in the wall treatment of the apartment he rents. It is safe to use plain, neutral tinted papers or wall finishes for the living room, paint for the kitchen, or some of the sanitary oilcloth wall hangings and a flowered pattern of wall paper or simple paint or kalsomine tint for the bedrooms.

There is no denying the cheerfulness of the flowered wall paper pattern in the bedroom, and yet many feel they can rest more easily in a room finished in quiet tones. It all resolves into a matter of taste; fashions in such things vary little. The main idea is to secure the services of a decorator who has good taste and knows how to give his patrons the benefit of his suggestions, even if it means he sells less expensive material and makes a little less profit.

Directions for Proper Painting of Surfaces

Following are directions for painting inexpensive woods or finished surfaces that are unattractive, either painted, varnished or shellacked.

Materials: Tube of high grade oil color, shade desired. Flat paint (a specially prepared no-gloss surfacer) Turpentine. Varnish, high or semi gloss, as preferred. No. 0 and No. 1-0 or No. 2-0 sandpaper.

Method of treatment: Cleanse the article thoroughly with a weak solution of washing soda or ammonia water. Rinse with clean water. Allow it to dry, then rub to a smooth finish with steel wool or No. 0 sandpaper. Dust off. Now, go over the entire surface, top, sides and legs with flat paint. When thoroughly dry usually in about 10 hours, rub with No. 1-0 or No. 2-0 sandpaper until the surface becomes semislick. Dust off and apply a second coat. When dry, sandpaper again. Now for the final or finishing coat. Suppose we choose a French gray-Chinese blue combination. Thin a tube of Chinese blue oil color with turpentine to the consistency of cream. Add to it a little of the French gray background color, thereby giving an opacity to the Chinese blue and requiring only one coat of this shade. Too much background color, however, will take away the depth of shade.

If stencils or decalcomania are to be used, they should be applied before varnishing. The same kind of paint used for the body should be used for stenciling. A smooth shiny surface is neat and finished in appearance and is easy to keep clean.

Misleading

There was great excitement in the suburb of Tootway. A new store had opened. It was to be run on the lines of those three-penny and six-penny shops which are getting quite a feature of our big shopping centers nowadays.

The store was being run by a man called Cohen and it was not hard to tell that he was not a Scotchman.

One day a woman came in, chose a toy and put sixpence in the proprietor's hand.

"Excuse me, madam," said Cohen, "but the toys are ninepence."

"But I thought this was a three-penny and six-penny store," protested the customer.

"Vell, madam, I leave it to you," was the reply. "How much is threepence and sixpence?"

Some Job

Being shy and self-conscious, he was lacking in histrionic ability. However, at an amateur theatrical he was persuaded to play understudy the first night, taking the part of a hungry tramp who had only a few words to speak.

It was late in the dead of winter. He knocked at the door of a lonely cabin in the woods. A woman's head protruded from the window.

She—What do you want?

He (trembling more with fright than the cold)—Work, kind lady.

She—Go away, I have nothing for you.

He (pointing to the ground)—At least—at least—let me shovel the snow!

Willing to Try

Jones had a terrible toothache and, happening to run across an old friend who just had returned from his honeymoon with a young and charming wife, asked him if he knew of a cure for it.

"Look here, old chap," said his friend, "I had toothache last week. When I went home my wife cured it completely. Why don't you try it?"

"That's a splendid idea," said Jones. "Is your wife at home now?"

Part of Japan Uninhabitable

The total area of the Japanese archipelago is 148,756 square miles and the total area of the empire, with Korea and all other possessions, is 260,738 square miles, with a population of 56,745,000. The population of the Japanese possessions is more than 77,000,000. A considerable portion of Japan is uninhabitable, which accounts for some of the congestion in certain parts.

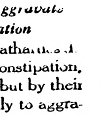
Most headaches due to lack of internal cleanliness

WHEN you are constipated, poisons form in the accumulated food waste. These poisons, absorbed by the blood, are carried throughout the body. Headaches follow. Biliousness, sleepless nights, lack of energy, all result from constipation. Each of these takes away piecemeal something of your health and strength. In time, intestinal poisoning due to lack of internal cleanliness may cause the breakdown of some vital organ.

In constipation, say intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness including the gravest diseases of life.

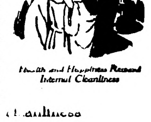


More Important Than Soap and Water

Laxatives Aggravate Constipation

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.



Health and Happiness Reward Internal Cleanliness

Physicians Favor Lubrication

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water it is harmless.

Get rid of constipation and avoid disease by adopting the habit of internal cleanliness. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of One Thousand Five Hundred Thirty-three and 44-100 Dollars ($1,533.44), which said amount includes the sum of Four Hundred Fifty-six and 9-100 Dollars ($456.09), paid by Deposit Bank of Winona, Winona, Minnesota, to the County Treasurer of Marshall County, Minnesota, on the 13th day of June, 1923, for taxes for the years 1918, 1919, 1920, and 1921, including penalty and interest, against the mortgaged property, together with interest on said payment from the 13th day of June 1923, to the date of this notice, which said last mentioned interest amounts to the sum of Fourteen and 67-100 Dollars ($14.67); which said first mentioned sum also includes the sum of One Hundred and 60-100 Dollars ($100.60) paid by Deposit Bank and Trust Company to the County Treasurer of Marhsall County, Minnesota, on the 13th day of December, 1923, for taxes for the year 1922, including penalty and interest against the mortgaged property; which said first mentioned sum is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain Mortgage duly executed and delivered by Earl Patten, a single man, Mortgagor, to D. B. Bakke, Mortgagee, bearing date the 26th day of October, 1918, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Marshall and State of Minnesota, on the 31st day of October, 1918, at 9:00 o'clock A. M., in Book 92 of Mortgages, on page 36; which said Mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby was duly assigned by said D. B. Bakke, Mortgagee, to Deposit Bank of Winona, Winona, Minnesota, by written assignment dated the 11th day of November, 1918, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds, on the 14th day of November, 1918 at 10:00 o'clock A. M., in Book 86 of Mortgages, on page 206; and thereafter and on or about August 1st, 1923, the articles of incorporation of said Deposit Bank of Winona having been duly amended and that thereby, among other things, the name of said Deposit Bank of Winona was changed from Deposit Bank of Winona to Deposit Bank and Trust Company and that said Deposit Bank and Trust Company is now the Assignee and Holder of said Mortgage and the debt secured thereby; and no action having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said Mortgage or any part thereof;

Now, Therefore Notice is Hereby Given, That by virtue of the power of sale contained in said Mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said Mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said Mortgage, viz:

The Southeast Quarter (SE¼) of Section Nineteen (19) in Township One Hundred Fifty-six (156) North of Range Forty (40) West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, in Marshall County and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Marshall County at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Warren in said County and State, on the 20th day of February, 1924 at two o'clock P. M., of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of One Thousand Five Hundred Thirty-three and 44-100 Dollars ($1,533.44), and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises and Fifty Dollars ($50.00) Attorney's fees, as stipulated in and by said Mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage containing a Power of Sale, by reason of which default said Power of Sale has become operative, and the Assignee of the Mortgagee hereinafter named is authorized to declare the whole sum due, and he hereby does declare said sum due, which mortgage was executed by Reier Reierson and Jorgine Reierson, his wife, Mortgagors to Holt State Bank, Holt, Minnesota, a corporation under the laws of the State of Minnesota, Mortgagee, dated December 20th, A. D., 1919, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota, on the 14th day of January, A. D., 1920, at 8:30 o'clock A. M., in Book 92 of Mortgages, on page 210.

Which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Holt State Bank, Holt, Minnesota, Mortgagee to Deposit Bank of Winona, Winona, Minnesota, by written assignment dated January 16th, A. D., 1920, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota, on the 22nd day of January, 1920, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 98 of Mortgages, on page 322.

Which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Deposit Bank of Winona, Winona, Minnesota, to Carl G. Baumann, by written assignment dated the 3rd day of March, A. D., 1920, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota, on the 10th day of January, A. D., 1924, at 1 o'clock P. M., in Book 110 of Mortgages, on page 213.

And whereas, the said Carl G. Baumann, the assignee and holder of said mortgage, on January 15, 1924, paid delinquent taxes upon the mortgaged property hereinafter described in the sum of Three Hundred Eight and 91-100 ($308.91) Dollars; and whereas, the said Carl G. Baumann, the assignee and holder of said mortgage, has duly elected and does hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, under the terms and conditions of said mortgage and the Power of Sale therein contained; and whereas there is actually due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of Fifteen Hundred ($1,500.00) Dollars, with accumulated interest from the 20th day of December, 1921, at the rate of six per cent per annum, and also the sum of $308.91 for taxes paid as aforesaid, with interest thereon from the 15th day of January, 1924, at the rate of six per cent per annum; and whereas, the said Power of Sale has become operative and no action or proceedings having been instituted at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

NOW, THEREFORE, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the Power of Sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and covered by said mortgage, viz:

The East Half of the Southeast Quarter (E½SE¼) of Section Nine (9) and the West half of the Southwest Quarter (W½SW¼) of Section Ten (10), all in Township One Hundred Fifty-six (156) North, of Range Forty-one (41) West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, in Marshall County and State of Minnesota.

Which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Marshall County at the Front door of the County Court House, in the City of Warren, in said County and State, on the 11th day of March, 1924, at 11:30 o'clock A. M. of that day at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay the amount then due on said mortgage and interest and the sum of $308.91 for taxes paid on said described premises with interest from date of payment, together with the costs and disbursements of such sale and Twenty-five Dollars attorneys fees stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure.

Dated January 18, 1924.

CARL G. BAUMANN,
Assignee of Mortgagee.
